Yes, even lipstick spots

At last! A dishwasher detergent that really does both!
(1) cleans difficult food stains (2) ends water spots

You need a dishwasher detergent that does more than stop water spots. Now it's here!

No matter what the stain—dried-in grease, sticky chocolate, gooey syrup, filmed-in milk, stubborn tea stains, dried-up egg—even lipstick spots—now you can have glasses, silver, dishes, pots that are cleaner, brighter than any other dishwasher detergent can make them—and without water spotting.

Electrasol's even-flow formula cleans without clinging. This is due to an extraordinary wetting agent that makes water "wetter" so it cleans even the most difficult stains—then rolls right off your dishes. Will not spot, film or streak...no matter how hard the water...or what make your dishwasher. No wonder Electrasol is recommended by every leading dishwasher manufacturer.

Built long and low on a small hill, the house overlooks the sea

How a family bought H&G's HOUSE OF SURPRISES and saw two dreams come true

Many a woman in the throes of decorating a house has dreamed of waking up one morning and finding every room completely assembled exactly as she had imagined it. Other women have pored over rooms in the pages of H&G and dreamed of duplicating them in toto. Both dreams came true some weeks ago for Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Karofsky of Newton, Mass. In one swoop, the Karofskys bought H&G's House of Surprises on Cape Cod, which you saw in our August issue, plus all the furniture, the curtains, the carpets, the accessories, and the art for which our editors had shopped for months to give visitors to the model house an idea of how such a house might be furnished. The over-all result appealed so much to the Karofskys they made their offer to buy the ready-to-live-in house within the first half-hour it was open to the public.

On the face of it, the Karofskys' action might seem somewhat precipitate, and lacking, perhaps, in personal involvement. But we felt there was more to their story than met the eye, so we flew to Boston to meet them and find out.

Married for twenty-five years, the Karofskys have grown to think so much alike that a conversation with them swings from one to the other without disclosing any switch of viewpoint. Within minutes of our meeting, they both began to talk, almost without prompting, about their new house. They plan to use it as their weekend and vacation headquarters, they told us—which explained why they were happy to acquire it completely furnished.

"As you can see," Mr. Karofsky, a tanned, energetic-looking man, said with a grin, "we don't waste much time in making up our minds."

"Fretting around about a decision," added Mrs. Karofsky, small-boned and looking very feminine in a pink suit, but every bit as definite as her husband, "you only set up obstacles for yourself. We know what we want, we go through with it. And that's exactly the way it was with the Cape Cod house."

"Yes," interrupted her husband again; "originally, we were going to build a vacation house on one of the seaside plots of the New Seabury development. As a matter of fact, we had seen the plans of this house we just bought and had watched it going up bit by bit and decided it wasn't for us. We didn't think the idea of the two separate sections on each side of the courtyard would be suitable. You see we have three sons, and even though they're almost grown-up—two of them are in their twenties and one of those is married, and the third is in his teens—we are a very united family and enjoy living close together. But on the day the house opened to the public with all its rooms furnished by your magazine, we were the first in the front door—mainly for the sake of interest, since, as I said we had seen the house in all stages of building."

"As we walked from one room to another in the house," Mrs. Karofsky continued, "we loved everything we saw. It was uncanny. Your editors might have known us. We love a contemporary look, but with the coziness of a traditional feeling. And that's just the way this house struck us. We both love lots of color, too. All those reds and blues and yellows are wonderful. You don't usually think of a man reacting much to color, but my husband has loved color ever since he went to art school as a youngster."

"Seeing the house with all its rooms put together is really what sold us," continued Mr. Karofsky. "It has just the kind of effect we love, yet it would have been a tough job if we had had to put it all together ourselves, and it would have been months before we could begin to use the house for weekends. Of course there are one or two things we will probably change, but we are going to take our time. We have decided to live in the house exactly the way it is for a year on a kind of test run. That way we will be able to judge much better what we really need to change."

Mrs. Karofsky does already have plans for the garden, however. "I'm going to get an early start by planting some bulbs in the courtyard this fall," she said. "I want red, white, and yellow tulips —lots of them—to repeat the colors of the rooms you see through the glass walls. Also, to separate the house from the road I want to have a split-rail fence, and plant red or pink climbing roses beside it. That will give the house a nice traditional touch."

"To get back to how we are going to live in the house," said Mr. Karofsky, "we feel now that the idea of the two separate sections is going to work out just right. If my wife and I go there, just the two of us, for a weekend, we can open up only the main section and there we have everything we want. If any of our sons come to stay, we open up the other section across the courtyard. They can come and go from there quite independently."

"We plan to rearrange things a little over there," explained Mrs. Karofsky. "In the room that is set up now as a boy's bed-sitting room, we are going to take out the daybed and put in two twin beds. That will be the room for our two youngest sons. And in the second bedroom, the one you furnished as a girl's room, we will add another bed with a green rattan headboard so the room can accommodate our married son and his wife. In the middle room, which you furnished as a garden room, we will substitute a trundle bed for the chaise longue, and use that room for extra guests. We always seem to be a full house."

"Basically, though," chimed in Mr. Karofsky, "the house is all ready so we can move right in. All we have to get is china, glass, and more sheets and towels. We're already planning to hold our New Year's Eve party there."

"That reminds me," said Mrs. Karofsky, "the house suits us perfectly for entertaining. We like to have friends drop in rather informally, and the courtyard with its sunken barbecue pit means we can cook a steak or hamburgers at a moment's notice with no fuss. The living room is large enough, too. In winter we can have a lot of friends in there in front of a big fire."

"As time passes," said Mr. Karofsky, "we'll be living more and more out there, too. In a few years, when our youngest son goes off to college, we'll sell the house in Newton and take a small apartment in Boston for our in-town base. My wife and I were going to go on a trip around the world this year, but this house is much more tangible. We can easily enlarge someday if we want to. When we have grandchildren, we will need extra bedrooms and . . ."

Leaving the Karofskys embroidering upon the future, we climbed aboard our plane back to New York, warmed by their enthusiasm, and immensely gratified by their eager acceptance of a house we had put together as a testing ground for a sheaf of our latest ideas—and which they took over lock, stock, and barrel.

The care and safekeeping of MASONRY FLOORS

How to keep them free from blemish

The perpetual joy of a masonry floor is ease of maintenance. Yet beautiful masonry materials—ceramic tile, mosaic tile, quarry tile, marble, terrazzo, slate, brick—are more often ruined by careless or too-drastic cleaning methods than by hard wear. It seems perverse, to say the least, to give a handsome durable floor other than the best care when the approved methods for keeping it clean are so much easier—on you as well as the floor.

The bête noire of all masonry floors is an indiscriminate use of too-harsh alkaline cleaners which you can never rinse off completely as you would rinse the suds from a china plate. On the other hand, except in heavy traffic areas, clean water and a clean mop will do a splendid job. At most, you need nothing stronger than a mild detergent. Strong cleansers attack not only the dirt; they can mar the surface of the floor, eventually leaving pits, scratches, and abrasions which attract additional deposits of dirt, not to mention the fact that they dull the color of the floor.

Routine care

Regular once-a-week care need not, as a rule, be more complicated than a thorough vacuuming followed by a "wiping up" with clear water, then a going-over with a clean dry mop to remove excess moisture. For a more complete clean-up in the traffic areas, a once-over-lightly with a mild soap or detergent (depending upon the material) followed by careful rinsing and a dry mop-up will keep the floor as bright as it is clean.

An important procedure in the care of masonry floors which should be made routine is the immediate wiping up of spills. Although slate is practically nonabsorbent and therefore more or less immune, any other type of masonry is vulnerable to permanent staining by liquids that are not mopped up before they have a chance to become absorbed. Even in the case of glazed ceramic tile, which is itself immune, the grout may become discolored. Since neglected spills may eventually call for costly restoration jobs (which are seldom 100 per cent satisfactory), set an example for your family by swooping down on every splash the second it lands. Reward the children whenever they remove the evidence in record time, and if a guest accidentally offends, calmly mop up with no reference to Mrs. Craig. In no time, you will have family and friends trained to react automatically.

Sealing a new floor

Most manufacturers and builders advise sealing the surface of a new masonry floor, although a few manufacturers maintain that for their particular products, sealing is not absolutely necessary. In the case of glazed ceramic tiles, for instance, the tiles themselves do not require a sealer, but it does protect the grout. Unless quarry tile is sealed, however, the joints tend to "dust" or "powder" which is a nuisance and extremely hard to control once it has started. In any event, sealing is a procedure which should be done before a new floor is walked on, and, since you cannot take for granted that the contractor will seal the floor unasked, be sure to bring the point up and insist that he does.

To pre-seal a floor properly is a highly technical job and should be handled by a trained person. If your favorite do-it-himselfer insists on it, use every wile at your command to get him to desist before he starts, for the mileage you will receive from a professional sealing job is worth far more than the job will cost. A sealed surface will repel dirt, dust, and moisture. It will resist acids, alkalies, oil, food, beverages, most inks and medications as well as the yet untrained puppy or toddler—that is, the sealing will deter immediate absorption although the liquid should nevertheless be wiped up as soon as possible. A seal also acts as a cushion against wear and should be renewed periodically.

No need to wax

Generally speaking, waxing a masonry floor is superfluous: it does nothing to improve some materials and may actually be harmful to others. For instance, there would be no point at all in waxing slate or unglazed mosaic tiles, since you would only be masking their naturally beautiful matte texture. Nor would there be any point in waxing glazed ceramic tile which has its own permanent gloss. If you were to wax terrazzo, you would soon discover that the wax stays on top of the masonry and "walks off" almost at once. Waxing does not in the least enhance the smooth surface of marble and since it is so smooth, may make it slippery, therefore dangerous underfoot. Waxing white marble will turn it yellow—and not the pleasant mellow yellow that comes from natural aging.

Some people do wax quarry tile, although, if the floor has been sealed, the wax serves no useful purpose except to build up a high gloss which will completely obscure the soft, lustrous patina that is its distinguishing feature. If wax you must, use a self-polishing liquid wax of the type you would use on vinyl tile. A solvent-base wax or wax-cleaner (fine for wood) is not good for quarry tile and a paste wax would be extremely difficult to buff without leaving a few dangerous slippery spots.

Each of the six different types of masonry floor materials also has individual characteristics that call for slightly special or at least individual treatments for specific problems. (For all aspects of the care of brick, see page 240.)

Ceramic tile

In washing ceramic tile, either the glazed type or the unglazed mosaic, use a mild synthetic detergent rather than soap. The latter leaves a greasy residue which is well nigh impossible to rinse away and builds up very fast. Mildly abrasive powders may be used on ceramic tiles for ground-in or long-standing grime, but before you use an unfamiliar cleaner, particularly on glazed tile, try it out on an inconspicuous spot, e.g., behind a door. (This would be wise in the case of any type of masonry floor.) A few highly acidic cleaners have been known to leave whitish etched markings on glazed ceramic. Whatever cleaner you use, rinse and rinse, then dry-mop excess moisture.

Before cleaning a tile floor, it is a good idea to start by dampening the whole floor so that the water will prevent the grout material from absorbing the cleaning agent. Repeated applications of cleaners without dampening the floor first are likely to discolor the grout material.

Big news on the grout market is a new variety that is practically stainproof. If you are installing a new tile floor, be sure to ask for it as the word is that it will wear indefinitely without changing color.

Apart from the grout, a glazed ceramic floor is practically impervious to penetration by stains unless it is scarred or pitted. Unglazed mosaic tiles, however, are susceptible to stains. If you should acquire an older house with mosaic floors that have been abused, make an effort to find out from the previous owner what caused the stains. For a major stain-removal project, you will need a specialist, and if he is armed with full information, he will be able to do a far better job. Small stains may be dealt with as follows:

Iron rust: Wet stain with warm water. Sprinkle with a thin layer of acid-type powder cleaner. Scrub to mix: allow to stand for several minutes; scrub again, then rinse with warm water. If iron rust stain persists, repeat procedure, allowing cleaner to remain on as long as two hours.

Ink: There are many types of ink, but for plain writing ink apply a thin paste made by adding sodium hypochlorite disinfectant to a porcelain cleaner. If ink spot persists, make a ¼-inch-thick poultice of the paste and leave on until dry. Any resulting brownish stains may yield to the treatment for iron rust, above.

Oil: Scrub with a mild soap and water solution; rinse. If spot remains, make a paste by adding water to a water-soluble alkaline powder such as Oakite. Spread like poultice over affected area and allow to dry. Brush off, then wash with clean water and dry.

Paint: Apply a non-flammable liquid paint remover or trisodium phosphate (Ajax, Comet). Allow to stand, remove with many rinsings of hot water.

Lime and hard-water deposits: Wash surface with solution containing 2 cups of vinegar to each gallon warm water, then rinse thoroughly with clean warm water.

Quarry tile

Mild soap and water is suggested for cleaning this material. To remove common household stains, treat as for ceramic tile.

Slate

Slate laid in its natural cleft form will show scratches less than a slate floor with a sand-rubbed finish. For the first few weeks all slate shows marks, but gradually they disappear. Since the sealer may wear off a slate floor in the high spots or traffic lanes, turning the material a lighter color, the floor may need to be rubbed down and resealed periodically.

Because slate is non-absorbent, most stains can be removed by the appropriate solvent or cleaner without fear of leaving a mark. For instance, you can safely

AUDIO-STORAGE CUBES, above, that can be hung on the wall or stacked on the floor to provide attractive and practical housing for music components or other entertaining equipment. The Multi-Cubes, 24 inches wide by 15 inches high, are built to ensure unrestricted air circulation since they consist of black lacquered inner cubes for speakers, turntables, tape recorders, etc., faced with free-floating (i.e., not joined to each other) panels of walnut, teak, or rosewood. Included in the series is a rotating cube that can be turned in whatever direction gives best sound reception. About $139 each. Designed by Jerry Joseph for Toujay Designs, Inc., 146 East 53rd St., New York, N. Y., 10022.

PEEL-OFF WALLPAPER made possible by a new pair of preparations. With these two Resistane products, you can hang wallcovering (paper, fabric, grass cloth), later peel it off in whole panels, roll it to store or take with you if you move, then rehang it. First you apply Resistane's Wallpaper-Release Coating to the wall, then hang your wallcovering with Resistane Wallpaper Paste. Paste, about $1.75 per quart, $6.25 a gallon; coating $3.98 a pint, $24.98 a gallon. Resistane Coating Corp., 966 Nepperhan Ave., Yonkers, N. Y., 10703.

TOWERS AND BALCONIES, an architectural trend to watch. Clusters of towers relieved by staggered balconies or bay windows hark back to medieval Italy, but they make sense for certain types of houses today. Balconies and decks provide multilevel living, which can afford privacy and special activity areas. They also help to make the most of a small lot.

SELF-ADHESIVE TILE, right, of embossed vinyl, as easy to apply to kitchen walls as putting a postage stamp on a letter. The Granada pattern is a duplication of a traditional Spanish tile, right down to its color combination of antique gold, blue, mocha brown, and white. All you do is peel off the self-adhesive backing and apply the tiles to any clean, dry wall surface. They are washable, waterproof, flame-resistant. A package of four 12-inch squares, each containing four 6-inch tile motifs, is $1.98. A Con-Tact brand wall tile by Cohn Hall Marx Co., 1407 Broadway, New York, N. Y., 10018.

SMOOTHER IRONING promised by a new spray/steam/dry iron with a Teflon-coated bottom that has the same non-stick advantages as Teflon-coated cookware. $20.98. By General Electric Company, 1285 Boston Ave., Bridgeport, Conn., 06602.

MAR-RESISTANT WOOD tabletops. The real walnut veneer on the table below is impervious to alcohol, juices, even cigarette burns. No hot pads needed, not even for coffee mugs. Any heat that threatens the wood is instantly dispersed by a layer of foil hidden under the veneer, and a clear epoxy coating over the finish protects it from rings and stains. The Penguin Arbatove tables include round cocktail and square end tables; walnut or teak veneers, oil or lacquer finish. Springer Penguin, Inc., Brookdale Place, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., 10550.

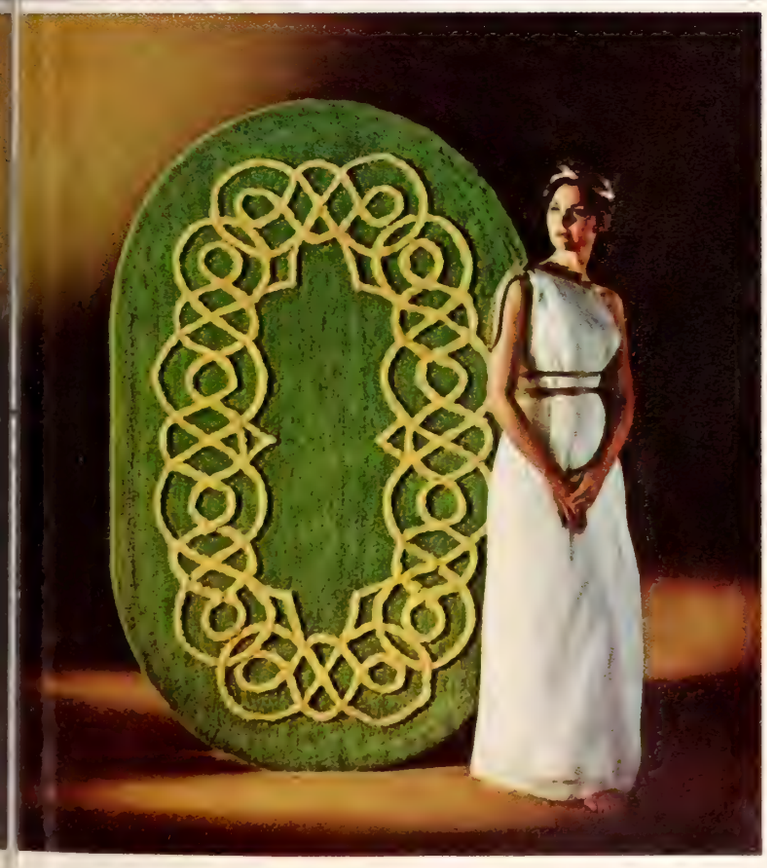
INVENTIVE SCANDINAVIAN DESIGNS IN PLASTICS

Plastics are certainly among the most widely used wonder materials of our day. Contemporary European designers have a particular knack for turning plastics into all kinds of handy little containers, utensils, and gadgets in marvelously original designs. The finds on this page come from Scandinavia and represent the best of Scandinavian design—simple, sculptured shapes that are a delight in themselves. Some even have the spirited gaiety of children's building blocks and at the same time are superbly functional. All are from Seabon Scandinavian Imports.

Everything from letters to plants can thrive in plastic. Left to right: Partitioned wall cabinet of gray plastic with a fold-down shelf front can be hung horizontally or vertically, filled perhaps with bath accessories. 8 by 16 inches; 6 inches deep; $10. Outdoor letterbox of green plastic with a flip top would look fine outside a country house. 15 inches high; $9.50. Graduated flowerpots in red or gray ribbed plastic. $1, $1.25, $1.50. Trio of letter trays grooved to stack. Gray, red, or green, 14 inches long; $7 the set.



M. EHLMANN

In the kitchen, plastic accessories add a bright dollop of color, are light weight, almost unbreakable. Left to right, back row: Colander of yellow or white sturdy plastic fits across a sink and drains fruit, vegetables, or cutlery. 17½ inches long; $3. Stacking canisters come in three sizes with colored plastic tops; $1, $1.25, $1.50 each. Two-quart covered pail of yellow plastic might tote soft drinks or a mountain of fruit salad to a picnic. 7½ inches tall; $2.95. Front row: Set of four clear plastic refrigerator containers topped with blue, green, yellow, or red plastic lids can stack into a neat square; $4.50. On top: four white measuring spoons; 50 cents. Mixing bowl in blue or white holds 3½ quarts, can stand heat up to 266 degrees Fahrenheit; $3.25. Green plastic seasoning set; $3.95. Yellow or red plastic juicer; $1.

Put them on your floors, ladies. They're new area rugs by Wunda Weve.

Wunda Weve's famous craftsmanship and the resilience of colorful Acrilan fiber combine to give you lasting luxury underfoot. And they wear as beautifully as they look. These new area rugs are color-matched to a wide selection of Wunda Weve broadlooms. Clockwise from top left: CELOSIA—Spanish-Mediterranean flavor inspired by the exquisite grill work of Old World Spain. ROOF GARDEN—In a sophisticated mood for contemporary interiors. ORCHARD STONE—Casual high-low pile design inspired by the handsome informality of a flagstone floor. HELLENESE—A refinement of classic Greek design for more formal decor. WUNDA WEVE

All styles made of 100% Acrilan® acrylic pile in sizes 3'x5' to 9'x12'. Prices from $37.95 to $324.95. Available at B. ALTMAN & CO. New York City, L. S. PORTABLE VACUUM CLEANERS

small but spunky

Ready for a fast, efficient pick-up before the company comes or for a regular weekly cleaning job, the portable vacuum, either hand-carried or strap-slung over your shoulder like a handbag, will also do your terrace, boat, or car handily. Some housewives like to keep one of these lightweights on the second floor permanently; others tote it back and forth to their weekend houses; and some apartment dwellers without heavy-pile carpets to care for find they need no other vacuum cleaner.

Regina's Power-Flite, above right, of long-life green plastic, weighs 11½ lbs., has large-capacity dust bag, rugged motor, powerful two-stage fan, four attachments. Wands are aluminum. $22.95.

The Pixie by Hoover, above left, is light blue enameled metal, weighs 4 lbs. Three attachments can be fastened to aluminum wand, to long-reach flexible hose, or to the hand-held Pixie itself. Double-insulated cord is a good 19 feet long. About $34.

Eureka's plastic Whisk, left, under 5 lbs., concentrates on powerful and direct suction dusting of furniture, curtains, clothes. Attachments including hose and [illegible] $19.95; attachments, $6.95.

Jet Master by Troy, right, [illegible] telescopes from 36 to 19 inches, cleaning from cornice to floor without changing accessories. High-impact styrene, [illegible] beige combination. $19.95.

How do you get your children to want to learn?

Remember that mprisoned feeling? 0 scales up and down vith each hand. In each ey. Then chords. Then rpeggios. And you ouldn't play anything ou liked. And you had o memorize the notes nd keys right away. And eep your fingers arched! No fun, o inspiration, no music!

In contrast to this old way, nodern teaching recognizes that ou have to want to learn. And nusic is its own best inspiration.

So good modern teachers lon't start by making children risoners of practice. Instead, hey introduce children first to he joys of music. Simple tunes. Little lilting melodies that kids njoy. Songs any child can actu- lly play in a few minutes. With ne hand. Then with two. Then even into other keys—in the first lesson! And it's not unbearably dull. It's fun!

A modern teacher introduces notes, reading, theory and technique cleverly! As the child wants to reach higher goals!

Yamaha dealers make it their business to know this type of teacher. And to help you locate one. Because they know it's vital.

The piano your children play is also vital.

If you believe music is important enough to provide a fine piano, your children will automatically absorb that idea. And respond to it.

Your children will be inspired by the rich, ringing tone and the beautiful craftsmanship of Yamaha pianos. You'll appreciate these qualities yourself. You'll also be pleased with the large selection of models. The exceptionally reasonable prices. And the exclusive Yamaha Service Bond that assures you of continuing peak performance.

Get all the facts now about Yamaha services and Yamaha pianos. For 65 years, one of the world's finest pianos. See your Yamaha dealer now. Find out about a piano and a teacher that fit your situation. It's the best way to start your children off so they'll want to keep on going.

NOW YOU CAN HANDCRAFT YOUR OWN COLORFUL LAMPS AND LANTERNS WITH STAINED CASTOGLAS

Cast Unusual Ornaments and Mobiles, Make Beautiful Wall Hangings, Roundels, Figurines and Scores of Other Distinctive Gift Items and Home Accessories and Handsomely Decorate Any Glassware With Castolite Jewels and Faceted Cathedral Glass.

For just a few cents and hours of creative fun you can transform inexpensive jars or bottles into objects of fine art. A plain glass cylinder or brandy snifter becomes a colorful lantern or glowing candlelight—one of a kind. You can apply Stained Castoglas Polymer with a brush or spatula to any glass, ceramic, metal or wood surface. Or you can sculpture it or cast brilliantly colorful ornaments in special molds. There's no end to the possibilities and the many ways this fascinating medium can be used to make decorative accessories for your own home, for gifts, for raising funds, for earning extra money . . . and have a lot of fun doing it.

Fifty New Arts and Crafts Kits are now ready for you. They include all supplies and complete illustrated directions for making any of the items shown on this page and in our catalogs and project manuals. You can also make your own designs, mix colors to match your decor and produce handcrafted accessories that are distinctly your own—not obtainable anywhere at any price. The whole family can participate in these casting, laminating and molding activities, making jewelry and jewelry boxes, unusual key tags, purse pulls and paperweights, wall plaques, mobiles, ornaments and many other lovely articles. Cast beautiful tiles with embedments of real flowers, grasses, butterflies or form abstract flowers with crystal clear or colored Castolite that rival the beauty of Venetian glass.

If you can paint with oil colors you can paint and sculpture with brilliantly translucent, textured Castolite Polymer on indirectly-lighted glass like the mural of a city shown in the picture. Pour a finish like solid plate glass over a child's original drawing or a wood-mounted lithograph of Durer's Praying Hands to embellish them and to protect and preserve them forever. All this you can do in your own kitchen or home workshop. Neither heat nor equipment is required and simple household utensils are all the tools you need.

How much does all this cost? For a material cost of 45c you can decorate a plain glass jar with Stained Castoglas Polymer and faceted Cathedral glass and produce a lovely candle holder that sells for $3.95 in a gift shop. The colorful lanterns with chunks of brilliant Castoglas and Castolite jewels are $27.50 to $50.00—the complete do-it-yourself kits cost only $9.95. The handsome chess or checkerboard made of Pearl and Ebony Castolite retails at $35.00 . . . but the kit costs only $7.50 and includes everything needed to produce an exact duplicate. And please note this: when Castolite products are bought in bulk quantity, the cost is substantially reduced—a very important factor if you are a commercial fabricator or involved in fund-raising activities.

Where do you begin? With a set of Castolite Project Manuals which explain the simple process in easy to follow step-by-step directions. More than 200 photographs, many of them in full color and supplemented with dozens of how-to-do-it sketches, will help you achieve professional results even if you have never worked with Castolite before. Please do this — while it is fresh in your mind — mail the coupon and One Dollar to Dept. 65-85 L, The Castolite Company, Woodstock, Illinois 60098.

If your child is a poor reader
–see how phonics can help him

Now your child can learn to read better in just a few weeks—with records that teach him by the phonics method at home. For complete information about The Sound Way to Easy Reading—and our money back guarantee—mail coupon below.

Would you like to see your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in as little as six weeks' time? These are results parents have seen again and again with this simple home-tutoring course in reading.

Mrs. H. M. Kilpatrick of Reno, Nevada writes: "After six weeks of work with The Sound Way to Easy Reading, my son improved not only in reading and spelling but in all of his lessons because he could read with understanding. He is in fourth grade but could only read at the second grade level. In just six weeks he advanced the two years."

Mrs. Kilpatrick is only one of over 50,000 parents who have turned to The Sound Way to Easy Reading for help in the frustrating problem of a child who can't read. And over 3,000 schools use it.

Teaches with records

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read. Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp the "look-and-say" method taught in most schools today. Yet, many educators insist that at least 40% of our children must have formal training in phonics—that they will never master reading without it!

That is why so many poor readers show remarkable progress with The Sound Way to Easy Reading. It teaches reading by the phonics method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago). Its phonograph records and charts show your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters in the alphabet and their blends. Once he learns the 123 basic phonics sounds in this course he can read up to 85% of the words in the English language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades, and even in high school.

Tested and proved

In a pilot study by university psychologists, children gained up to a full year's grade in oral reading skill after only 30 lessons with The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

A semester-long study involving 214 pupils in 4 Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Help your child now

Don't wait for your poor reader to reach high school before coming to his aid. By starting your child on The Sound Way to Easy Reading now, you can change his entire attitude toward school—turn his sense of failure into the joy of success. Send for full information. No salesman will call. Mail this coupon now!

These are the records and self-quizzing cards that can help your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in just a few weeks.

PARENTS DELIGHTED

Better marks—"Bobby has used the records for only three weeks, yet his reading and spelling grades have gone from Ds to C-plus and B. Now his teacher has borrowed the course to help other children." Mrs. W. H. Gregory, Calif.

Advanced two grades—"In ten weeks my son advanced from Second Grade level in reading to the Fourth Grade level. His spelling improved to the high Fourth Grade level. We feel fortunate in learning of The Sound Way To Easy Reading." Mrs. B. J. Smith, Concord, Calif.

Four sons—"In twelve weeks, two of our boys brought up their reading grades from D to B. And our other two came up from D to C. I'll never get more for my money than I already have with your course." Mr. John Gehde, Jr., Wisconsin

TEACHERS ENTHUSIASTIC

Recommends to parents—"Your course has been excellent in standardizing the teaching of phonics in our entire school system. I recommend it to parents as a home tutoring course for poor readers." R. B. Miller, Supervisor, Monterey, Va.

A pleasure to hear my class read—"I am just delighted. In the last twelve weeks 22 of my 29 fourth grade pupils brought up their scores in silent reading. Their oral reading is so improved it's a pleasure to hear them now." Mary L. Henderson, Crowley, La.

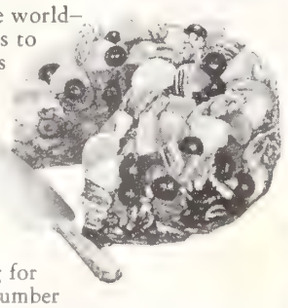
made the
OLD-FASHIONED WAY a panful at a time!

6 taste-tempting preserves in an attractive brass table-cart server!



Strawberry, wild mountain blackberry, spiced cherry, raspberry, wild plum, orange marmalade—real preserves, like Grandma used to make. Maybe even better. And made the way she used to, a small panful at a time, on the top of the stove. No wonder they're the best you ever tasted. And so inexpensive, too. This handsome gift will say "Good Morning" and will keep friends thinking of you all year long. Gift No. 15, shipping weight approx. 4½ lbs $3.99.

Photographed in Puerto Rico—where the world's best rum comes from What's quicker than the 30-second Daiquiri? The 20-second Daiquiri Collins.

Just add dry, light Puerto Rican rum to Frozen Fresh Daiquiri Mix in a glass full of ice. Top with water or soda and you have a tall, cool variation of America's second most popular cocktail.

The Daiquiri Collins is one of many ways to enjoy dry, light Puerto Rican rum. For a free booklet of rum recipes write to: Rums of Puerto Rico, Dept. R9F, 666 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y. 10019.

Called "the finest photographs ever taken of John F. Kennedy."

They are the work of the distinguished American photographer Leigh Wiener*. The place: Mr. Kennedy's private plane. The time: a period of crisis in the President's life. The hour was late. Everyone was asleep, except two men, Mr. Kennedy and the photographer. Hundreds have requested these pictures. Now, for the first time, a limited number of these memorable portraits are being made available. They are custom-printed from the original negatives on the finest double weight photographic paper. Each print, measuring 11x14", is hand-mounted, suitable for home or office. Price: $8.50 per print (indicate A or B), or $15.00 for the pair. Profits go to the John F. Kennedy Library. Send check or money order to: WESTMOUNT, 7422 Santa Monica Boulevard, Los Angeles 46, California.

Mr. Wiener's work appears in Life and Fortune magazines and in other national and international publications.*

STOP FLOOR-WAXING DRUDGERY WITH NEW MIRACLE LAST-N-LAST

PUT ON A 3 TO 5 YEAR SHINE

Now—Never Wax Floors Again!

Floors Gleam with New Beauty—
Wipe Sparkling Clean with A Damp Cloth—
Perfect for All Wood—Panelling, Doors, Lawn Furniture

Sounds unbelievable—but we guarantee this: Apply Last-N-Last to any floors in your home. It will keep them shiny bright for 3 to 5 years—or more. Or we will refund every penny you spent for it.

This new wonder-product (a polyurethane coating) is easier to apply than wax. Spreads on with brush, spray, roller or lamb's wool —resists marring, scratches, stains, etc. After one application a warehouse floor had its original gloss with no wear, scuff marks or stains after a full year of constant, busy traffic under the steel wheels of fork-lift trucks!

Apply it once—and forget floor treatment for years. What's more, it improves floor appearance, brings out the full beauty of wood and makes it tougher. Also treats and improves furniture. Perfect for boats, ideal coating to keep concrete floors smooth and dust-free.

Can not mar, stain, chip, crack or peel. Truly a miracle coating that protects and brings out beauty in floors, furniture, etc.

$3.95 per quart postpaid.

$12.95 per gallon (1 gallon should be enough for all the floors in an average home).

Kids think they're toys. Educators know better. They use Creative Playthings to help make learning child's play.

They know that what a child learns in his first eight years may well set the pattern for his whole life. They call these the peak years. Because by the time your child is eight, he's achieved 80% of the intelligence that he'll have when he's 17!

That's why educators and intelligent parents take a serious view of the toys children play with. And so should you.

HOW TO GIVE YOUR CHILD THE TOP GRADES IN SCHOOL HE DESERVES!

YES, HERE IS YOUR CHANCE TO MAKE SUCH A DIFFERENCE IN YOUR CHILD'S PERFORMANCE IN SCHOOL THAT THE TEACHER MAY ACTUALLY CALL YOU UP TO SEE WHAT HAPPENED

And you can do it in as little as five or ten minutes of your time every day. Here's how:

By EUGENE M. SCHWARTZ, Pres.
Executive Research Institute, Inc.

Let me explain. I believe it makes no difference whether your child is six years old or sixteen, boy or girl, in grade school, high school or college. It makes no difference how badly that child is doing in school today . . . how difficult it is for him to concentrate . . . how poor his memory may be . . . how much a prisoner he is of crippling mental habits . . . how frightened he may be of mathematics, or grammar, or social studies, or even the most difficult science course.

I believe that your child's mind is working today at only HALF its true power – simply because he has never been taught the correct way to make his subjects half-teach themselves.

Simply because he has never been shown the newly-developed techniques of Speed Reading, that are taught in universities all over America today, and that have him skimming through his printed work as much as twice as fast as he reads today, with far better understanding of every word he reads.

Simply because he doesn't know the right way to rephrase the problems he is given in mathematics, so clearly and logically that these problems virtually half-solve themselves, before he even begins to work on them.

Simply because he doesn't know the right way to prepare for his tests – so thoroughly that he may actually be able to anticipate up to 85% of the questions that his teacher will ask him on that test – possibly right down to the very phrasing that the teacher may use on those questions.

Power-Studying Can Be Learned. You Can Teach It To Your Child Yourself, In Far Less Time Than You Ever Believed Possible.

Yes. Speed-reading can be learned. Complicated problem solving . . . memorizing facts, figures, even whole lessons . . . taking the sting out of tests – all can be learned. The top grades . . . the brilliant performance in school that your child deserves, can be taught to him; he doesn't have to be born a genius to achieve them.

You, yourself, can coax these top grades out of your child. You can do it by showing him the right study techniques. Study techniques developed by private-school teachers, by professional tutors, by writers of speed-teaching adult-education courses all over America.

Study techniques that you and your child probably never dreamed existed. Study techniques so effective that I'm willing to prove them to you in your own home, without your risking a penny.

Here's how.

The First Week After You Use This Book With Your Child, You May Marvel At His Improvement.

All I ask from you is this. Let me send you, at my risk, what I believe is one of the most fascinating books you have ever read. When this book arrives, set aside a few minutes each day from the following weekend. Glance through its pages. Get ready to see for yourself the heart-warming new performance your child can give you in his homework, once you give him the proper mental tools to work with.

For example:

Does your child make the same spelling errors, over and over again!

Then turn to page 125 . . . teach him three delightful shortcuts that burn the correct spelling of those problem words into his mind . . . and watch him, from that day on, write those former "trouble makers" – letter-perfect – as easily and naturally as he writes his own name.

Does he have trouble finding the correct words to express himself in class!

Then turn to page 45 . . . glance over the fascinating word game you find on this and the following pages . . . play this game with your child for a few minutes each day . . . and then watch the excitement on his face as he discovers that at no time has hundreds of powerful new words at his command – to make his recitations sparkle, to build thought upon thought correctly and dramatically – to really show off the talent and knowledge he has inside him, when his teacher asks him a question.

Are needless mistakes causing him to continually trail behind his class in mathematics?

Then learn at once the simple technique described on page 150 . . . teach it to your child . . . make sure it becomes second nature to him . . . and see for yourself that he now makes up to 20% fewer errors in those mathematics tests . . . up to one-fifth better grades . . . all from one carefully thought-out change in his work habits that can pay him dividends for the entire remainder of his school career.

Yes. And does he freeze up in tests? Forget material he knew perfectly the night before? Run out of time and leave as many as half the questions unanswered?

Then get ready for one of the most satisfying half-hours of reading you have ever known . . . starting on page 205. For here is a complete arsenal of test-passing techniques – that help remove crippling nervousness and tension from your child . . . that take the trickery out of double-meaning test questions . . . that show him how dozens of test problems actually help him solve each other . . . that give him the tools he needs to face that test with all his carefully-prepared right answers, RIGHT AT HIS FINGERTIPS, ready to write down the moment he needs them.

Read It From Cover To Cover At Our Risk.

Yes, here is a practical, easy-to-read book on improving your child's grades in school that really works. It is meant for every child . . . six years old or sixteen . . . boy or girl . . . now enrolled in grade school, high school or college.

EUGENE M. SCHWARTZ (AND HIS SON MICHAEL)

When a father worries about the kind of education his son is getting in school — and when that father is also president of a publishing company that specializes in modern learning methods — then sparks really fly.

For the past six years, Gene Schwartz has worked with some of the country's leading pioneers in deutro-learning, the modern science of learning how to learn. As writer, editor or publisher, he has been instrumental in bringing to the American public, books on Memory Improvement, Executive Training Techniques, High-Speed Learning, Creative Thinking, Problem-Solving, Time Organization and many more.

But why not adopt these incredibly powerful learning breakthroughs to the problems faced by children of all ages in their classrooms? This is the goal of this book! "The job was too important to leave to someone else", Mr. Schwartz says. "I couldn't rest until I did it myself".

It brings that child – for the first time between the covers of a single book – powerful new study techniques that you may never have dreamed existed before. Study techniques developed by private-school teachers, by professional tutors, by writers of speed-teaching adult-education courses all over America.

Included are rapid-study techniques that can produce up to twice as much homework from every study hour. Speed-reading techniques, that cut through waste wordage and pick out the core of an assignment.

Word-building techniques, that may double your child's vocabulary in a single school season. Clear-writing techniques, that let him put his thoughts down on paper, clearly, forcefully and correctly. Problem-solving techniques, that give him the answer to a surprising number of "problem-within-a-problem" math quizzes, even while many of his classmates are struggling alongside him to find out where to get started.

And – above all – a complete armory of test-passing techniques – that can turn D's and C's into B's or even A's. That can turn 60's or 70's into 80's or 90's or better. That can unlock the true, natural ability of your child to master facts – that may be tragically half-wasted today!

Try It At My Risk For A Full Ten Days.

The price of this revolutionary new book is only $4.95. But it is easy to read without risking a penny. You prove it to yourself at our risk for ten full days. It must do everything we say, or simply return it at the end of that time for every cent of your money back immediately.

You have nothing to lose. Your child has a whole new world of achievement to gain. Send in the No-Risk Coupon below – today!

MEN WILL BECOME EAGER TO KNOW YOU, PLEASE YOU, DO AS YOU ASK—WHEN YOU APPLY THE STARTLING INFORMATION IN THIS BOOK.

10-DAY NO RISK EXAMINATION

Here are confidential details of how you can advance yourself with the opposite sex—MEN . . . beyond the point of just being popular or well liked . . . into the select circle of women who are happily married . . . who have succeeded in getting their man, the man who wants and appreciates them. As you read this truly remarkable and frank book, and follow the step-by-step principles laid out for you, you'll be able automatically to win the respect and confidence of the man YOU want . . . his admiration and affection NO MATTER HOW DIFFICULT, UNFRIENDLY, INDIFFERENT, STUBBORN OR UNCOOPERATIVE HE MAY BE NOW.

If you feel left out or lonely, read this amazing book and learn how to replace loneliness with the warmth of companionship that marriage can bring to you.

SIMPLY—THIS VALUABLE BOOK TELLS YOU HOW TO GET YOUR MAN!

- How do you go about finding a suitable husband? (See pages 15-38)
- How can you keep in touch with a man you've met without making it appear obvious? (See pages 113-128)
- Does premarital sexual intercourse strengthen or weaken the relationship of those involved? (See pages 185-205)
- What pitfalls should you avoid that might turn a man against you? (See pages 48-52)
- What does a man like and dislike about a woman? (See pages 79-96—includes a test of 20 questions to ask yourself)
- How can you make yourself more femininely alluring? (See pages 129-134)
- Do you know the 8 proven ways of becoming a good conversationalist? (See pages 136-140)
- What is a sure-fire formula for making a man propose to you? (See pages 206-222)

This book reveals to you for the first time that kind of influence and action that make men willingly accept and follow you. It gives you the "tools" that cause men to draw themselves to you. No need to take our word for it. Get the book and see for yourself.

WORDS OF ADVICE FROM FAMOUS WOMEN

To help you even more there are pages in their own words from famous women such as Mrs. Bob Stack, Donna Reed, Joanne Woodward etc. Read what they have to say about how they got married! It will help you make the man you want WANT to marry YOU.

No questions about it—this book tells you how to find, and keep, your man.

EXAMINE AT OUR RISK. In sending for this book you have no other obligation than the one you owe yourself to enjoy the home life and loving companionship of a man that can be yours when you put this book's secrets to work for you. Pay $4.95. Full refund privilege guaranteed.

Do you want a beautiful garden like this?

our simple steps make it easy:

This is a bulb

Just dig a hole—drop in a bulb, right side up

Add a few handfuls of earth, water...

Walk away whistling

Suddenly it's Spring

Your Springtime can be electric with beauty. Take tulips. They range in color from pure white to almost black, from softest pink to deepest purple. They add special brilliance to any garden. Daffodils often beat the robin in announcing Spring. Their golden beauty—seemingly so fragile—defies winter's final blasts. And you can't mistake the fragrance of a hyacinth. It's the very breath of Spring. Dutch flower bulbs: so simple to grow; so easy to care for and so inexpensive. For the best, be sure they're marked "Imported from Holland." For a FREE copy of "Your Garden Next Spring," a handsome, full-color, 16-page magazine, send 10¢ for mailing costs to: Netherlands Flower-bulb Institute, Inc., 29 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10006. Now: room to room carpeting.

It used to be done room by room. The parlor got the best carpet. Because everyone behaved in there. The dining room got a dark, dreary pattern. So spills wouldn't be catastrophes. And bedrooms often got hand-me-downs. No more. Now there's one fiber that fills every carpet need in the house. Cumuloft® nylon. It gives you deep, plush pile for living-room luxury. It's so easy to keep clean, you can pick a cheery color for the dining room. It's non-allergenic, safe for the nursery. And so economical, you can carpet all the bedrooms without feeling extravagant. Cumuloft nylon is incredibly long-wearing, too. Even where the traffic is heaviest—on the stairs, in the hallways, in the family room. (You see, every carpet of Cumuloft nylon pile is made to meet mill and Chemstrand quality standards. The most uncompromising standards in the carpet industry.) Now, what about carpeting the kitchen and bath? There's no reason not to. In fact, Cumuloft comes in so many rich colors and textures, the more rooms you have the better you'll like it.

And that just about covers everything.

When a family needs fall cleaning helpers, Wheeling comes on strong.

Steel strong. Even those six handsome steel utility cans all decked out in fashionable colors. No worry about their wilting in the heat or cracking in the cold. Or rodents gnawing through. And the color — it's a thick vinyl coating baked onto the steel. You couldn't chip it with a sledge hammer.

Yes, steel — Wheeling quality steel — gives you strong, long-lasting helpers for spring, summer, autumn and winter. Whether you want the famous Wheeling galvanized can or the new decorator-hued ones, a pail, a bucket, a trash basket or a charcoal scuttle.

They're economical, too. See them all at your Wheeling Corrugating Company dealer soon.

Personal maid

Better than a personal maid is the vibrating electric hair brush that gives the necessary 100 strokes per day and massages the scalp to crowning glory health, sheen. Stimulates the scalp. Relaxes tired neck and shoulder muscles, too. Pink or sandalwood. $9.95; extra brush heads $1.65 ea. Ppd. J. W. Holst, HG10, 2470 Britannia Rd., Sarasota, Fla. 33581.

A royal welcome

Roll out the red carpet and give your guests the full V.I.P. treatment. Great for parties, special occasions, or for welcoming friends or relatives from out-of-town. Runner, six feet long, is made of red felt, and stenciled in gold. 6′ by 18″. $4.75 ppd. Gloria Dee, HG10, P. O. Box 2000, Mount Vernon, N. Y. 10551.

Dog waterer

The K-9 canteen assures your pet of fresh drinking water in whatever quantity he needs daily. A sanitary white heavy plastic jar is completely leakproof. And it holds a full gallon. In unusually warm weather it holds ice cubes to chill water. Drinking trough is red plastic. 50c post. Alexander Sales, HG10, 140 Marbledale Rd., Tuckahoe, N. Y. 10707.

Frozen food labels

No more by guess and by golly as you get frostbitten fingers searching through your freezer. Stick on these labels that need no moistening—peel up, press on. Space to write kind of food, weight in pounds and ounces and date. 2″ by 1¼″. 100, $1; 200, $1.75; 400, $3. Ppd. Handy Labels, HG10, Box 509, Culver City, Cal. 90231.

Puffing pixie

Begorra—a leprachaun that smokes! All in green, of course, he actually puffs on tiny cigarettes. The wee sprite, just 4″ tall, is made of plaster. Send him to a friend who's struggling to quit smoking. Pure delight at just $2.50 postpaid. Extra cigarettes are 25c the pack. Order from Rollin Cheney, HG10, 775 E. nspiration: Historic Poland Dining room floor: Montina Corlo Delicate beauty and a classic tradition are hallmarks of Polish decorating—and of a new floor from Armstrong: Montina Vinyl Corlon.

Montina is made of stone-like chips of vinyl veined with color. They are set in deep, translucent vinyl to create intriguing, pebbly texture. This textured surface has a practical advantage, too. It helps hide scuffs and heel marks.

Montina comes in wide rolls and creates a floor with scarcely a seam from wall to wall. And you can put contrasting colors in custom designs.

Montina Corlon can be used anywhere in home—even in most downstairs playroo directly over the concrete.

PERMANENCE AND CHANGE

In today's fast-moving, fast-changing world, we all long for something that can be counted on to stand still. A sense of permanence is essential to security and serenity, and the one place we can ensure permanence is at home.

The seeds of permanence are sown with your selection of a site or a neighborhood to live in, and they flourish with the affection you develop for a beautiful view, with the satisfactions of working on your own land, of watching a shrub or a sapling you have planted grow to maturity. A sense of permanence emerges from the care with which you plan your house or plan to live in it, from the comforts and pleasures you create for each member of your family, from the furnishings and bibelots you collect over the years to fill personal needs or bring personal delight.

But people change, or they should. And as they change, their needs and tastes change—not only the fluctuating tastes of young people, but mature tastes as well. For even the most independent spirits reflect to some degree the taste of their time, and the taste of the time is always changing. A house from which all change is barred looks not merely old-fashioned, but obdurate, insensitive, dead.

Where do these conflicting needs for permanence and for change leave us? In H&G's opinion, the answer to both lies in the word continuity—the art of judiciously preserving the best of the past as you move toward the future.

A slow, smooth, graceful movement, however, is never quite so easy to bring off as an impulsive leap. It takes, first of all, a healthy confidence in your own taste, the strength of your own esthetic convictions. And since everything must have a beginning, assuring continuity requires a canny eye for appraising the life expectancy of the new. This means the ability to judge it solely on its merits for you, remaining equally impervious to the mere novelty of a modern design or the popularity of a currently fashionable traditional style. It also means being able to predict for each new acquisition its long-range possibilities after your present need for it has passed.

Obviously continuity is dependent upon quality (of materials, construction, finish) as well as upon care (it is well to remember that cleanliness is the best preservative: air-borne dirt can wear out some things as fast as hard use).

Above all, continuity calls for a sensitive appreciation of the things you already own and have lived with, countered by a lively imagination to see what a big difference one small change in them can make. For it is the relatively small but frequent changes that give permanence its vitality. Continuity, in fact, might be defined as permanence continually renewed.

A HOUSE THAT TIME CANNOT WITHER, NOR CUSTOM STALE

CASA CONTENTA

An indignant and wily foe of calculated obsolescence, Mrs. Clive Runnells has put her enemy to rout many times during her life, and in no house more implacably than in Casa Contenta, her winter home in Hobe Sound, Fla. Designed in the Mediterranean style by architect Kemp Caler, the Casa is a rambling, winged curlicue, painted for coolness, in the Portuguese manner, the pale blue of a faded hyacinth—a pretty pallor that ends at the front door. Under-roof, Mrs. Runnells cares not at all for pastels, and with the help of interior designer William Baldwin (he has worked with her on four houses, is starting on a fifth), she has strewn her rooms with deep clear blues and pinks and greens, pert as flowers and foliage against white walls. Fresh, sparkling, gay, this lacquering of fabric and paint hides a secret: practically everything in the house Mrs. Runnells has had for donkey's years. All she does is keep her possessions healthy and blooming, a feat simpler than it sounds and as rewarding as sustaining a friendship.

Acquisitive as Pooh, she never stops buying furniture, fabrics, bibelots, rugs—what have you. If she can't use them at the moment, she stores them away, either for her children or for that possible next house that may be looming somewhere on her bright horizon. But rarely in her life has she bought anything she regretted or, depending on its importance, does not cherish. She has that rare form of intuition that senses when something will stay in style—or will not. Inherent shoddiness, however gilded, she skips by on the double, and halts for nothing unless it stores, deep down, the inimitable kernel of quality. (Continued)

THE LIVING ROOM'S TREASURES

Casa Contenta's principal living room is a bit statelier than its garden room, which you see on our cover. Nevertheless it is an open-arms kind of room geared for comfort and coolness. All the furniture came from Mrs. Runnells' former Hobe Sound house except the two scarlet Chinese hatboxes, recent acquisitions put to dashing use as end tables. All the coverings, however, are new, and although the pattern of the print was changed (it used to be butterflies), the deep blue is a repeat. Mrs. Runnells finds it cool, calming, and a nice color to have around. Among her more important treasures are the porcelain foot warmers on the shelves over the sofa and the two filigree lamps—all of them trophies of a shopping spree in Japan.

One of the two terraces is curled around the living room's great bay window

Mrs. Runnells owns nothing that, as far as she can predict her future tastes, she is likely to tire of. Enormously sentimental, she often has curtains and bed trappings, when they wear out, copied in the identical fabrics rather than new ones (this is where her storehouse serves her well). "Something that is really good once, is always good," she insists. She likes change, but only to perfect a room that, in her eyes, has never been quite finished. When the final touch has been added, a sixth sense tells her so, and she has learned from "fussing too much" to leave perfection alone. In Florida, however, Mrs. Runnells does not live in Mycenaean splendor. Casa Contenta is a lighthearted house built for fun, sun, entertaining, relaxing, and, as tropical houses must be, endurance. Every fabric in it is of cotton, and the Moroccan rugs are as tough as the goats that sired them. There are conventional curtains in only two rooms, for in Florida shutters are better. Lovingly, she deprecates some of the furniture (none of which she is about to part with), saying it is right for the Casa—"It's a holiday house!"—but for nowhere else. Which could be. But there are more than enough treasures to give the house character and, as far as simpler chattels are concerned, enough loving care, superb upkeep and renewal to make Mrs. Runnells succeed where Ponce de Leon failed.

THE LIVING ROOM BAY

As though a giant had picked it up and set it down, the living room's bay window group was transplanted in toto from the old house. Newly re-covered, fresh as paint, the sofa and chairs hug the bay like a snug wheel with an early modern coffee table for a hub. Brand new are the Moroccan rugs, the eyelet embroidered curtains and the lamp plinths—fluted wood columns lacquered the blue of the porcelain bases and an effective one-piece way of bringing light up to the proper level without tables.

GUEST ROOM: "MEXICAN HAYRIDE"

Mrs. Runnells' tag for one of her guest rooms was prompted by the fact that the furnishings, although charming companions, are so diverse: iron beds from Spain, Victorian chairs from her mother's house in Philadelphia, Moroccan rugs, Mexican bric-a-brac. Bedcovers, skirts and canopies are exact copies of former trappings caught in a fire in her former house.

THE DINING TERRACE

Almost a cabaña, the poolside dining terrace can, and often does, seat fifty guests at a flock of fold-up storable tables. At other times, it is used as a porch, even in windy, rainy weather when the canvas curtains are pulled and anchored to the floor. The aluminum furniture, repainted, re-covered, came from the old house, as did the "rafraîchissoirs," old pets of Mrs. Runnells that once cooled wine in France. Reformed, they now make admirable Floridian homes for begonias and ivy.

continued

Every house, Mrs. Runnells believes, should have its ivory tower. Hers is her dressing room, a queen-sized compound of bath, mirrored closets, massage salon, and snoozing spot: She naps on an old French daybed under the wing of a favorite painting by Jack Davidson. The pink fabric is one of her darlings; re-cut, the curtains are from the old house. New rug, designed by a French artist and woven in Mexico, was found in a shop in Phoenix, Ariz.

ROUND-THE-CLOCK BEDROOM

"I live in my bedroom," says Mrs. Runnells. Which means she does all of her desk work, most of her reading, and a great deal of chatting in a very personal climate of Eden that existed in a former bedroom and was simply re-created. Here is more of the prized pink chintz, and its strié pattern is copied in paint on a chest of drawers. On bed and chaise is a floral partner bought in Paris twenty years ago and still going strong. ("The French know their business!") Over the chest, a special delight: an Austrian mirror etched in German with every woman's question: "Mirror, mirror on the wall, who is fairest of us all?"

HOW LONG WILL MODERN LAST?

The talent for creating a home with a satisfying sense of continuity depends in large measure on the ability to appraise the new—the ideas, the materials, the designs of today. What are their chances of survival? How can you tell the difference between passing fashion and timeless style—between the long-chance experiment ("let's see how it will work") and the enlightened solution to a problem squarely faced ("why did no one think of that before")? Contemporary design, like contemporary history, is a rather bewildering forest that is often hard to see for the trees. In both cases, the best guesses about the future are sometimes made by looking backward, so in order to answer the question, "How long will modern last?" we might well start by asking "How long—and how well—has it lasted?" And we are not rushing history when we ask that question today, for the first modern houses built after World War II are now almost twenty years old, the lifetime of the average mortgage.

Modern houses were built long before the war, of course—including the "prairie" houses of Frank Lloyd Wright. But their numbers were infinitesimal compared to the Dutch Colonial, Tudor, and "modern" Georgian designs that crowded most architects' drawing boards. And for a decade or so before 1937, the majority of modern houses (apart from California where a contemporary style was gradually evolving from an indigenous tradition) reflected the International Style that had been transplanted from Europe and South America and never quite taken root. Well planned and well built as many of those early modern houses were, their blocky contours look oddly old-fashioned to us today.

On the other hand, many of the modern houses built immediately after the war look shabby—partly because shortages, labor scarcity, and zooming prices precluded their being really well built, partly because their designers failed to appreciate the problems of maintaining some of the materials that contributed to the modern look. Such failures, of course, were not confined to houses of contemporary design: similar miscalculations brought about the early obsolescence of many a traditional house. But for a truly unprejudiced look at the staying power of modern, we should stay away from the known failures and turn to houses that were acclaimed unqualified successes when new.

Recently H&G visited two such houses—one built four years before Pearl Harbor, the other, four years after V-J Day. Both are still owned and lived in by the people for whom they were designed and neither has yet been substantially remodeled. The earlier house is the one John Yeon designed for Aubrey R. Watzek at Portland, Ore. The other is the famous glass house that architect Philip Johnson designed for himself in New Canaan, Conn.

In plan, design, and materials the two are as far apart as they are in geographical location. But each represents the early, if not the first, use of certain ideas that we have since come to take for granted and other ideas that even today seem so new it comes as a shock to realize they date back so many years.

THE HOUSE OF WOOD—1937

Built entirely of wood, the traditional native material of the Northwest, the Watzek house marked two innovations in the use of wood: The exterior was sheathed not in shingles or clapboard siding, but in flush horizontal boards of Douglas fir, and most of the rooms were paneled in wood—in itself an old idea but at that time almost forgotten.

The Watzek house turned its back on the street—a highly unorthodox procedure for those days. What is more it was built around an enclosed courtyard, a semi-sheltered outdoor room of the kind that is still news today. (See "A House Divided," September, H&G and "A House of Surprises," August, H&G.) And the only door in what appeared to be the front wall of the house opened into the courtyard (and still does) where a covered loggia led to the house itself.

At a time when "bringing the outdoors in" was a brand new and daring phrase, this house was painstakingly oriented to two, sharply contrasting outdoor views—an intimate vista of the planted courtyard and a big dramatic view of Mount Hood, 50 miles away. It was these views—plus beautiful materials—that were used in lieu of decorative ornament.

The glass areas of the house clearly foreshadowed today's glass walls and the shared identity of walls, windows, and/or doors. In each room, a series of rhythmic, modular glass panels, extending from ceiling to waist height or from ceiling to floor, included some fixed panes, some that opened as doors or casement windows. But when all were closed, you couldn't tell (still can't) which were which.

The numerous inventive details—sliding louvered screens at some of the windows, planter beds recessed in the floor, compartments for radio and movie equipment concealed by sliding wall panels—were not matched even in modern houses until years later.

The Watzek house was one of only five American houses illustrated in the 1949 edition of a European book on modern architecture. To see how the house looks today, please turn to pages 188-191.

THE HOUSE OF GLASS—1949

Built of glass and steel, the building materials of the machine age, the Johnson house was nevertheless acclaimed by some critics as one of the most romantic houses of the postwar period. An oblong box with four glass walls, each pierced with a central glass door, it possesses a precise symmetry rare since the houses of Palladio. More important, it brought the outdoors in to the ultimate degree. Sitting inside the house was (and is) like sitting outdoors with greenery (or snow) on every hand, yet being at the same time blissfully protected from wind, rain, cold, or any other discomfort that might vitiate a wholehearted delight in nature.

This was one of the first houses to consist actually of one large room, with the living, dining, cooking, and sleeping areas marked off by furniture arrangements, freestanding storage dividers and, in this case, a large circular brick chimney enclosing a bathroom. It was also one of the first houses with a wholly open-to-view-kitchen—a chest-high line-up of counters, cabinets, and appliances that turned an elegantly deceptive walnut back to the eyes of guests.

Reviving an ancient custom with the impact of a modern innovation, the floor from one end of the house to the other was paved with brick. And a new-old grandeur of scale was achieved by doors that reached clear to the 10½-foot-high ceiling (a dramatic measure that recently has begun to be widely emulated).

Even in such a house, the glass would have to be screened occasionally, but conventional curtains, when closed, would have muffled it in fabric, and when open, would have bunched clumsily at the corners. The architect's solution, brand new at that time, was a series of free-hanging fabric panels that could be pulled across the glass individually on a series of four ceiling tracks.

When it was built, the glass box created such a stir that an important consideration in its design was often overlooked: Even though planned to meet only the limited needs of a bachelor, it was never intended to be a complete, self-contained house. "I knew I could live in a glass box only if I had someplace else to put the things I didn't know what to do with," says the architect-owner. The "someplace else" was the almost windowless brick guest house. As a pair, the one transparent and one opaque house foreshadowed the multiple house that began to appear only a few years ago. (Since completing his own house, architect Johnson has adapted the same basic ideas to houses for families with children.)

The house of glass was first published in H&G in October, 1949. To see how it looks today, please turn the page.

THE SEEDS OF SURVIVAL

As revolutionary as these two houses may have seemed when they were built, each incorporated certain traditional elements that gave it roots in the past, and in consequence a sense of timelessness. Each house was specifically designed for its site and even more significantly, the site—in the form of the views it afforded—was integrated with the design of the house. Inevitably, as the site has matured, the house has mellowed. Both houses were marked by a high degree of quality—in materials, construction, and meticulousness of detail. And since the materials were on the whole easy to maintain, both houses have been well preserved.

The only conclusion we can draw from these case histories is that excellence—whether in a Greek temple, a Renaissance palazzo, a Federal mansion, or a modern house—will endure. The older it gets, the brighter it glows.

THE HOUSE OF GLASS TODAY

Serenely settled on its manicured shelf of land against a backdrop of trees grown taller and fuller, the house Philip Johnson built for himself sixteen years ago looks more than ever like a precisely cut jewel.

After sixteen years of waxing, the brick floor has acquired a satiny sheen, a deep cordovan glow. Meanwhile the hefty girls presiding over the space—a sculpture in papier-mâché by Elie Nadleman—have been immortalized in the 12-foot-high replica that stands in the foyer of the New York State Theater at Lincoln Center.

Since the cabinets that screen the sleeping area are only 6 feet high, you get a generous view of treetops even in that direction. All electrical outlets are set in floor, and lights, except for one waist-high lamp, are hidden in black cylinders placed on the floor, where they are almost invisible.

At dusk when the glass walls reflect the surrounding trees, the house becomes a transparent mirage.

The round swimming pool, added a few years ago, contrasts with the straight lines of house and guest house and completes the original design for three elements precisely placed on a carpet of lawn. Lipschitz sculpture is another pre-planned addition.

Few changes have occurred in the Johnson house since it was built, other than additions made either to complete the original plan or to create an extra source of delight. The furniture, most of it designed by architect Mies Van der Rohe, was already nineteen years old when Mr. Johnson moved in, so chairs and benches have been reupholstered in a shaded creamy beige leather. A rosewood dining table that could not take the strong sun in the southwest corner of the room has been replaced by a table with a marble top. And there have been additions and subtractions among the sculpture. The only major remodeling has been in the guest house. The wall was removed between two of the three bedrooms and the whole space was transformed into a kind of muffled inner sanctum where an automatic rheostat magically controls lighting hidden above the new columned double-domed false ceiling. When you switch the control lever into one of its five or six positions, the light slowly waxes or wanes, apparently without human aid.

In a newly made pond at the foot of the steep slope behind the house, Mr. Johnson a few years ago built his folie, an arched pavilion of cast concrete that is a tour de force of false scale. From the house it looks elegantly lofty, but only a rather short adult can stand erect in it.

Panels of printed fabric that slide on ceiling tracks line all four walls of inner sanctum in guest house, and screen the two round windows. New double-domed ceiling, actually suspended from real ceiling, was designed to exert a calming effect. More of this house on page 24

THE HOUSE OF WOOD TODAY

The enclosed courtyard of the modern house near Portland, Ore., that John Yeon designed twenty-eight years ago for Aubrey R. Watzek looks as if it had been there for centuries. The house walls, originally finished with a silvery gray stain and now beautifully weathered, seem to reflect the green of the mature and opulent planting. Guests enter courtyard through a deceptive doorlike gate, then walk along covered loggia at left to front door.

Not until you walk around to the back of the house do you discover its most dramatic façade—the elegant portico outside the two-story living room—and its strong vertical lines are even more impressive now that the Douglas firs and western red cedars native to the site tower over the shallow pitched roof. Perimeter planting has flourished with little coddling, for outside the courtyard only native plants were used.

Ever since it was new, the house has had a look of permanence because it was so closely related by design and materials to its natural setting. Foundations, retaining walls, steps, and chimney were all built of native shale which frost had broken up into varying thickness.
At the left of this grassy walk at end of bedroom wing is a vine-draped private entrance to courtyard.

The sheltered ambiance of the courtyard has been kind to the more exotic plants and trees used there: flowering crab, magnolia, Japanese maple, oleander in tubs. Flower beds are supplemented by pots of daffodils and tulips in the spring, fuchsias, geraniums, and dahlias in the summer.
Covered loggia leads from front door, past the pool (beyond railing) to entrance door at corner where courtyard wall joins house.

Almost nothing has been changed in the Watzek house, not even the furniture, most of which was specially designed for the rooms by Mr. Yeon, who also designed the landscaping as well as the house itself. "The house was built when my mother was living and is larger than I would build for myself today," Mr. Watzek says. "But it has been an easy house to keep up because of the extensive use of wood—the oak floors, the paneled walls. And the windows are easy to wash because the panes are so large." The living room paneling of noble fir (a native wood that grows high in the Cascade Mountains), although it was finished only with colorless wax, has not darkened with the years, but remains its original golden honey color. And the whole house has retained undiminished the qualities that have endeared it to its owner from the beginning: "simplicity, warmth, openness —with plenty of light and sunshine flooding the rooms."

One of the great delights of the house is the unfolding sequence of varying spaces as when you turn from the low-ceilinged hall into the expansive 14-foot-high living room, right, which was carefully designed on an axis with Mount Hood, 50 miles away.

At the other end of the living room, above, a deeply recessed smaller window offers a contrasting, small-scale view into the courtyard. Sliding wall panels near fireplace (at the right) conceal compartments for record player, record storage, film projector, and screen.

As you turn down the hall in the opposite direction, you face the big three-sided window of the dining room, below, and watch it widen until the mural of trees and wild flowers extends clear across the width of the room. Wood-paneled walls here are painted white, the canvas covered plaster ceiling, a warm coral. Original built-ins include recessed buffets on both sides of room.

THE TRUE MEANING OF comfort

The essential question of comfort is: how to survive most pleasantly, once we are born. Birth is emergence into light, cold, noise, hostility, and manners. Comfort is ease, intimacy, warmth, the sense of being protected and loved. The summum bonum of comfort is probably the womb. Second best: the nest, the cave, the home, whatever shelter the creature finds or builds to protect himself from the inclemencies of nature, to please his mate and to propagate his species. "If nature were more comfortable," a heroine of Oscar Wilde's exclaims, "we would not need architecture." Comfort is better understood by women, as any woman knows who has had to reorganize a bachelor's quarters.

I dislike women who claim not to need comfort: they are cold and unmotherly or else hypocritical. I distrust those who like it but who are unable to create it; they are like those species of blackbirds who, too indolent to build their own shelters, usurp the nests of other fowl. "Le style est la femme même." The comforts of a home are the very extension of a woman's warmth and hospitality. Luxury can be bought by wealth, but the creation of comfort entails time, diligence, planning, imagination, a sense of fitness, a capacity for love. I think that one of the reasons why twentieth-century America has developed the highest standard of comfort in history is because its women have had such a strong voice in demanding it. They are assisted, of course, by the miracles of technology, and by the democratic ideal that all beings are created with an equal right to comfort.

The discomforts of luxury

Whereas comfort means being without need and may involve survival, luxury offers enjoyment beyond physical well-being. In botanical terms a "luxuriant" plant is one in which the organs of nutrition are more developed than the organs of reproduction: the plant eats more than it needs to thrive and reproduce its species. Luxury usually entails formality, and it can be extremely uncomfortable, as it was at the court of Louis XIV [illegible] thousand fresh tuberoses were planted daily in the gardens of Fontainebleau, but, for dearth of facilities, the courtiers relieved themselves in corridors and out of windows. Some 500 men were engaged in the preparations of the king's luxurious meals, but his food arrived stone cold because of the lengthy ceremony of its service. Madame de Maintenon sweltered in summer and froze in winter because the King refused to put shutters on her windows: they would have spoiled the formal symmetry of his architecture. "We shall all die of symmetry!" she exclaimed. She was a woman and understood comfort. Marie Antoinette, in the 1760's, found the relaxation that Madame de Maintenon had longed for by building Le Hameau and dressing as a milkmaid. For what happened two decades later, see Flaubert's definitions: "Luxury: the downfall of [illegible] great states . . . Comfort: the greatest invention of modern times."

The very word "comfort" is a relatively new invention. Its present sense is only two centuries old in the English language. Originally derived from the two Latin words con and fortis (with strength), it was used in England from the twelfth to the eighteenth centuries in a strictly spiritual sense. It meant moral aid and sustenance, spiritual support, as in the sixteenth-century translation of Isaiah: "Comfort ye my people," and in the psalm "I will praise Thy name, O Lord, because thou art so comfortable." You only gave comfort to or were comforted by those you loved. But sometime in the 1760's the word "comfort" fled the realm of spirit and entered the street, the drawing room, the dwelling. When, in 1775, the influential linguist Dr. Johnson writes about "the comforts of a warm home," and when Boswell enters in his journal that Child's is his favorite club because it is "dusky, warm, and comfortable, with a society of citizens who talk politics very fully," we know that the word is firmly established in its new, materialistic sense. It now means well-heated, well-bedded, well-fed, well-sheltered. From England it invades the Continent a few decades later, and it is described in the nineteenth-century Larousse, with peevish chauvinism, as "that word which the English borrowed from us, and which we have recaptured."

Words arise as new desires need to be described. The new, physical sense of the word "comfort" was a concept of the Enlightenment and of the democracies that followed it. It expressed that intense quest for earthly happiness which characterized the eighteenth century. It flourished with the growth of the natural sciences, with the new concern for mankind's health, with medicine's revolutionary endorsement of bathing the body. Wesley's preaching that "Cleanliness is next to godliness," was crucial to the development of "confort moderne." The new sense of comfort thrived on Rousseau's optimism: man, being born good, deserves comfort, and behaves best when most at ease. Equality, liberty, informality: in the very decades when the word took on its bodily meaning, a new class of men toppled the ceremonious hierarchies of baroque courts, and requested that their own comforts replace the luxuries of an elite.

Padded status symbol

Few single commodities reflect the leveling, democratic character of comfort better than the armchair.Throughout the Middle Ages, the chair with a backrest had been the luxurious prerogative of kings and bishops; serfs and petty nobles alike huddled on backless benches and stools. At some seventeenth-century courts, no two nobles could sit on armchairs in the same room: it was a prerogative of the man with the highest title, and an usurpation of this privilege led to long courtly vendettas. The padded, rounded armchairs made available to the rising middle classes of Europe in the 1750's was a status symbol as powerful as the ownership of a car in the 1910's, a yacht in the '30's, or a private movie-viewing studio in the '60's. It was also the first chair since Greek times designed with a concern for the contour of a man's body, a concern crucial to our twentieth-century commodities. The new eighteenth-century armchair must have given its owner both the old and the new sense of the word "comfort." It gave him physical comfort for his spine such as he had never enjoyed, and the moral support of knowing that he had a new place in the social hierarchy. "You, too, can be seated like royalty!"

A few months ago, a French magazine still ran an advertisement claiming that a certain make of upholstered sofa had "confort Anglais." Having originated the modern sense of the word, the English speaking nations enlarged the concept. Since civilization began, whatever empire has been most powerful, be it Rome, Persia, Byzantium, or France, had set the world its style of luxury. But as world leaders, England and the United States began an important precedent: instead of setting the fashions of luxury to subservient nations they have modeled its standards of comfort.

As the world's first industrial power, the fate of England depended on giving the masses physical well-being to keep their good will. To a rising class of factory workers and industrialists the new nineteenth-century comforts meant the paving of streets, improved methods of heating, gaslight, and plumbing, the cheap mass manufacture of upholstered furniture and textiles, the control of disease by vaccination and antiseptics. A German traveler, as early as 1820, remarked that "the English think that soap is civilization." Physical comfort, by Victorian times, had become a moral category, and the Victorians were understandably smug about it. A definition in the 1833 edition of Crabbe's Synonyms runs to this effect: "Comfort, that genuine English word, describes what England only affords. Comfort must be sought for at home, pleasure is pursued abroad."

Charles Dickens' American Notes, his travel journal, vividly expresses the discomfort of a nineteenth-century Englishman in venturing "abroad." Although the United States was destined to inherit and vastly improve British standards of comfort, it seemed a raw and uncomfortable frontier in the 1850's to a Victorian accustomed to punctilious manners, substantial upholstery, and a diligent class of domestic servants. Dickens was appalled by the bare furnishings of the best American houses, by the familiarity and paucity of America's servant class, and by the general informality of American manners, "marked by a prevalence of the two odious practices of chewing and expectorating." He sums up: ". . . American customs, with reference to the means of personal cleanliness and wholesome ablutions, are extremely negligent and filthy."

It took a century before another Englishman, Alfred North Whitehead, could write about the United States that "its diffusion of comfort among the masses is one of the highest achievements of civilization." By the time that judgment was made, the United States had taken England's place as the leading political power and had replaced it as the world's most comfortable nation.

The American Revolution

Since that shift of authority has occurred, the United States has revolutionized previous standards of comfort in three major ways: (1) Automation is steadily shrinking the small gap between the need and its fulfillment. Comfort is now immediate relief, immediate supply. (2) In the servantless society which Dickens predicted for us, comfort is increasingly geared to women's needs rather than to men's. (3) Mass-produced comforts are being brought to a major part of our population at the price of a disturbing anonymity. For if advertising gives any clue to our national desires, the creature comforts of the 1960's must be "distinctive," "distinguished," and "unique" to be desirable.

The first two points have in common that womblike principle which is the essence of all comfort. At night, twentieth-century men and women increasingly demand silence, (Continued on page 254)

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mrs. Cleve Gray, her painter husband and their two small sons live in rural Connecticut in a rambling eighteenth-century house with "yard-thick" stone walls and an uncommon amount of space and privacy. Keeping pace as she does with a breathless modern schedule, Mrs. Gray rates privacy the greatest comfort and time the greatest luxury—"but actually," she adds, "each is both a comfort and a luxury." Ex-newspaper woman, she is now a free-lance writer and contributing editor to Art in America.

BRIGHT IDEAS FOR BORROWING

Rooms and corners of rooms that designers create for exhibitions can be a mine of inspiration if you learn to look at them the right way. Representing as they do flights of imagination uncircumscribed by the demands of a particular client or house, they are not very likely to fit your own needs and tastes ready-made. But after you have enjoyed your first impressions and noted how each designer has met the challenge of the exhibition committee's assignment, look again. Study the color combinations, the use of materials, the decorative accents. These are the elements you can borrow and adapt to your own, probably quite different, needs. To demonstrate the technique, H&G attended the Tour of Décor put on every few years by the Women's Board of the San Francisco Museum of Art and devoted this year to rooms for cooking and dining, some in the museum, others in Ghirardelli Square—an exciting new shopping center in a remodeled chocolate factory. Stimulated by the inventive settings, we came back with a notebook of ideas for decorating, kitchen planning, menus, and entertaining, many of them several steps removed from the main theme of the show.

spired by unusual utensils

Robert Mason and Michael Vincent designed for Thomas Cara, Ltd., a Milanese kitchen, RIGHT, in which a baroque scroll pattern was played against black and white checks. Their utensil: the polenta pot on the stove. Idea: a tile-lined cooking area (wallpaper stood in for tile).

Burton Wolf lined his inviting country kitchen, LEFT, with tile-patterned wallpaper, furnished it with French antiques. His utensil: the marmite on the table. Idea: old hotel key rack to hold herbs.

Robert K. McNie enlivened his white, Moroccan-flavored living room with a zebra rug, colorful cushions and hangings. His utensil: a couscous-cooker placed on the brass-studded chest for a cook-and-serve buffet. Ideas: latticed wood window panels lined in thin silk to cast a rose-colored glow; cushions covered in scraps from worn antique rugs.

Elizabeth Banning arranged an elegant Caribbean terrace that needed only a roof to transform it into a handsome dining room for less clement climates. Her utensil: the iron caldero or stew pot in the brazier on the ledge. Idea: the amusing touch of a clay chicken perched on the caldero to identify its contents.

Merede Leedy decorated her freehand adaptation of a Japanese pavilion in a restful scheme of blue, white, and natural wood. Her utensil: a cooker for mizutaki (Japanese version of the boiled dinner). Idea: yukata cloth (the narrow fabric of summer kimonos) used as wallcovering, held in place with wooden battens.

Howard Terhune dreamed up a terrace-to-cook-on with a mobile chopping-block work table at one end, a barbecue at the other. His utensil: a salad bowl. Idea: herbs in simple clay [illegible], painted soft green, antiqued) [illegible] iron wall [illegible].

were invited to create

ROOMS FOR ENTERTAINING

composed around engaging collections

Tony Duquette updated a classic conceit—the shell grotto—to shelter a tea party. His collection: rare orchids. Idea: modular panels paved with shell mosaic edged with color.

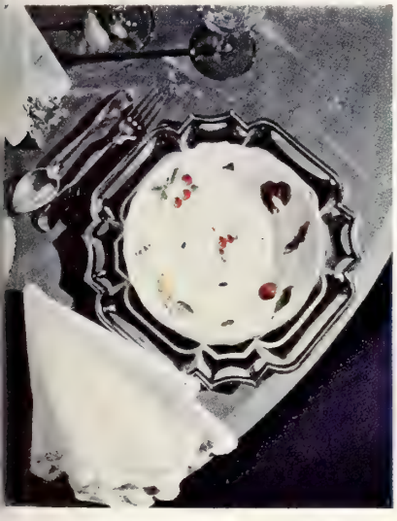
Eleanor Forbes contrived a clean-lined comfortable corner for café brûlot and conversation. Her collection: antique oriental bronzes. Idea: the cabinet door covered in brilliant silk as a background for small objects—here, antique Japanese sword guards.

Anthony Hail lined a study with naïvely stenciled antique paneling, set up his table for an evening of chess. His collection: chess sets. Idea: bread, cheese, and fruit, nuts and port as a savory late evening snack.

Everett Brown fashioned a black-and-white dining room blazed in red and gold for supper after the opera. The collection: black-and-white prints and drawings. Ideas: a traditional printed fabric as a dashing foil for modern graphics; daisies in pots lining a shelf.

Anthony Hail covered walls and sculpture pedestals with fabric to set off Tiffany's glittering table. The collection: sculpture. Idea: the flip of lacquer-red chairs in a coolly blue and green room.

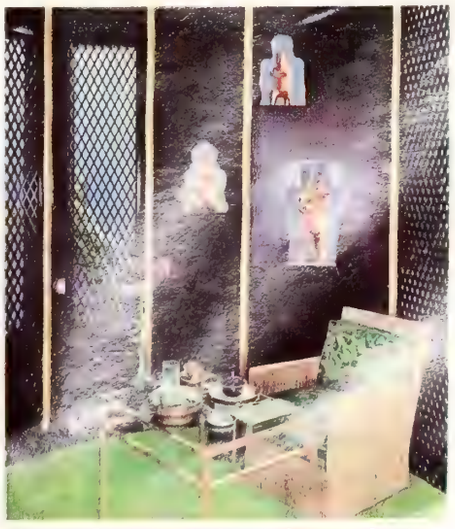
Jeannette Kapstein laid a hunt table for dessert in a porcelain-fresh dining room with fabric-covered walls. The collection: old blue-and-white china—English, Chinese, Dutch. Idea: the subtle charm of a table set with china in a multitude of patterns.



Val Arnold devised a library-dining room for a [illegible] ing collector. The chi[illegible] lection: antique jades in book[illegible]. Idea: the inviting look of capacious tapestried chairs, a lowered table for dining.

Frank D. Stout adapted his design for a dining alcove from the Japanese and set the table for a Japanese dinner. The collection: old Japanese oil plates (used to catch drippings for lamps and candles). Idea: the unbacked lacquer frames holding the plates.

Iichael Taylor staged a sumptuous sup-er party in a candlelit Venetian garden avilion looped and festooned with trips of red, green, and white silk. The ollection: garden sculpture. Ideas: hairs upholstered in a bouquet of col-rs; wild flowers planted between pav-ng stones; planter used as wine cooler; quared silver service plates, BELOW.



Clair L. Young composed a quietly colo-ul study for tête-à-tête dining. The collec-ion: Capo di Monte regimental figures. deas: oval dinner plates; upholstery ebbing used as dado and cornice strips.

Merryvale furnished an informal dining room with country pieces gathered from many different lands. The collection: eighteenth-century faïence. Idea: the witty touch of a bowl of real strawberries in an arrangement of trompe-l'oeil vegetables and animals.

Barton Davis masked an indoor garden in a breakfast room off a bedroom with lattice and panels pierced with niches. The collection: Tarascan tomb figures. Idea: black patent leather as a foil for sharp color.

How a single stroke can work
the enchantment of

and give a room new vitality

The wherewithal of change need not be anywhere near as complex as th all-out transformation once implied by "doing over" a room. If you a fond of almost everything you possess and want nothing more than change of mood or a little general revving up, it is perfectly possible give a room new vitality with only one fairly important innovation. O piece of furniture—or a pair, or a group—can do the job not only b introducing a variation in line and function, but (sometimes) by fillin out a too empty room or slimming down one that is too rich in bulk. shift of scene at the windows—different curtains, a new wrinkle in th way of louvers or screens, even something as simple as new shades will bring a room up-to-date as fast as a shift of backdrops alters a stag Your broadest opportunity is the floor, where anything can be made happen. From wall to wall, you can pour out all the color and patter you like—or, should you be weary of these lively elements, you ca replace them with quiet texture or sheen or the serenity of newly sub dued hues. However come by, your change will pay a double bonus: th stimulating delight of owning something new, and the brightened spi it of a room that needed only a few vitamins to put it back on its fee

can be a wonderful catalyst

By virtue of size, shape, finish—or all three—a new table, a sofa, a pair of chairs, or a bed will always, in one way or another, give a room fresh visual punch. It may also, by adding a new facet of usefulness, enhance the room's livability. Even when change is ordained by wear and tear, it will be far more refreshing, both for you and the room, to replace the worn pieces with things that are just as useful, but step up the tempo.

A NEW TABLE IN A NEW HEIGHT that bridges the gap between a tea table and a coff table can give a simple room a touch of traditional elegance, especially when the newcome like this table, is of mahogany and Queen Anne in style. Long legged enough to contribute litt bulk, the 25-inch-high table has a large drawer and pull-out panels at each end—nice litt space makers. The painting over the sofa is by Pierre Lesieur. FLOOR-HUGGING SOFA, above, with its built-in look, would change the mien of any room to one of concentrated, squashy luxury. Both the sofa and its matching chair are of the same snug height (seat cushions are only 15 inches from the floor), and each is covered in leather tanned to the velvet of chamois. Seating: Jens Risom. Painting by Asoma: Findlay Gallery.

VERSATILE GAME TABLE AND CHAIRS, left, can create a dining-and-game corner with none of the hackneyed look of the standard apartment dining ell. Only 26 inches high, the table serves equally for meals, games, letter writing—a one-man show. Chairs with castered front feet can be wheeled about to augment the conversation group, a heaven-sent way of breaking up the static pattern that dining furniture often ordains when stationed in the living room. All furniture by American of Martinsville. Interior design by S. Squire Assoc., for Mediterranean Towers.

A PAIR OF LOVESEATS, opposite page, in one clear, singing color, can be a daring way to step up a room's pace. These flaunt their flippantly hued upholstery and contemporary lines in a quiet Early American room (very long on patina, very short on bright color), seasoning its mellowness with a look of today. FABRIC-PANELED SHUTTERS, opposite page, can bring the tingle of mystery to a plain-Jane room, since solid shutters below the windows imply the existence of full-length doors leading, who knows, to enchanted gardens. The fabric panels—flat lengths shirred on rods at top and bottom and easily replaceable —also make revitalizing seasonal changes. Shutters, ready-made in several sizes, by Joanna Western Mills; fabric by Berkshire-Hathaway. Interior designer: Jack Steinberg of The Unicorn.

SLIDING FABRIC PANELS across one whole wall of a room may effect a change as remarkable as breaking through a new window. In designer Jack Lenor Larsen's dining room, panels of sheer natural linen crisscrossed with blue, green, and yellow, appear to be screening a wall-to-wall sweep of glass rather than two far-flung windows. Hung on a two-channel track, each panel moves independently. "Paneltracs" by Kirsch (to see how they work, please turn to page 255) ; linen by Win Anderson Fabrics.

is like a new face

A shift of scene at the windows may radically alter a room's architectural character by suggesting a sweep of glass wall or the presence of tall doors. It can make a narrow room look considerably wider, a low-ceilinged room look loftier, or, by a simple shift in color, change the whole focus of the room's palette.

A SINGLE LIVELY PRINT, left, used in a new way at the windows and repeated on the bed, can have a surprising space-stretching effect on a small bedroom. The upper tier of café curtains, replacing sill-length curtains, hangs from a valance; lower tier hangs to the floor; side curtains span the whole width—making window and room seem much bigger. Fabric by Bloomcraft; bedspread by Morgan-Jones.

SHADES PLUS SHUTTERS, below, make a crisp, contemporary replacement for curtains. At the windows of this bedroom the decorative theme is carried by the shades made by laminating the same cotton plaid that covers the beds to standard shades and finishing with similar bands of red. The formerly exposed old-fashioned radiators beneath the windows were enclosed, turned into window seats, topped with cushions in a larger-scale plaid. Shutters by U. S. Shutters.

A NEW SHADE IN A NEW HUE, above, can shift the color emphasis in a room by adding a generous dollop of one of the minor colors in a wallpaper or fabric. Replacing white shades in this young girl's bedroom with pink ones subtly altered the mood of the room by bringing out pink in wallpaper and bathing everything in a rosy glow. Shade by Breneman-Hartshorn. Interior designer: Paul Krauss.

A SWITCH TO STRIPES, right, that restate at the windows the major colors in the room, is a quick and dramatic way of intensifying them. In this guest room-library, floor-length curtains—replacing an upper tier of café curtains matching the bedcover—shift the emphasis from pattern to color, joining pink and orange of the furniture to color of wall. Interior designer: Barbara D'Arcy of Bloomingdale's.

A BOLD CARPET, opposite page, will bring the fresh look of today to a room furnished for the most part with antiques and traditional patterns and accessories. The white-latticed rug that replaces a plain carpet in this country dining room makes everything in sight seem as up-to-date as the Formica-topped dining table. Magee carpet.

PALE VINYL TILES, right, covering a dark wood floor, can shift the mood of a room from traditional European elegance to the cool romantic look of the Middle East. In this bedroom, the classic Moorish design on the white tiles (they are 12-inch squares) provides quite enough pattern to balance the large areas of plain white: the piqué bed canopy and curtains and the painted walls. Chateau vinyl by Amtico. Interior designer: David Barrett.

A CHANGE UNDERFOOT
is an invigorating tonic

As the largest area you can change in a single stroke, the floor offers a happy range of opportunities. Depending upon the tack you take, you can bring to new bloom a collection of antiques, add an exotic flavor to a room grown too familiar, or bolster its colors with a new foundation.

A WASH OF COLOR on the floor—muted by the wood tone that tends to soften a transparent stain—is a marvelous new way to establish a dominant hue without overpowering the subtle colors in a wallpaper or fabric. Refinishing the floor of this sitting room with a tough washable stain in H&G's Green Gay perked up the green in the wallpaper, emphasized the fresh look. Dura Seal stain

FLOATING MOSAIC

Of course the mosaic in Mr. and Mrs. Harold Watkin's Kentfield, Calif., pool does not really float; it is supported on concrete legs, yet seems light as a lily pad. The errant jets keep the mosaic pattern shimmering even when the pool is empty. This multicolored oasis in the midst of an oasis was one of those happy afterthoughts that indeed transformed a pretty but unexceptional swimming pool into a year-round joy. And when the pool is swarming with swimmers, the island supplies both a convenient handhold and a pleasant conversation center. The mosaic top itself was designed and executed by Ray Rice. The landscape architects, Lawrence Halprin & Associates.

UNDERCOVER GARDEN

This one is not really under cover, neither is it actually roofed, but it is enough of both to become an immediate delight to the beholder. The John Platts' Portland, Ore., house stands against a hilltop, and the rock garden crowds between the house and the summit. So what more natural (once you have thought of it) than to curve a narrow reflecting pool at the garden's apron into the wide covered porch? Naturally in taking such near-liberties with plants, great horticultural restraint—skill even—is required both in the design and in the impeccable care required. Landscape architect, Richard W. Painter.

You may pay five cents to put a good idea to work—or five thousand dollars. You may pay nothing except the effort of doing something a little differently from the way you, or for that matter anyone else, would normally do it. A good idea can have two, three, or four dimensions (in the landscape, time is one of the most important dimensions of all). Whatever it is and whatever results from it, the impact on the people exposed to it must be immediate, unmistakable, and understandable. A good idea will wear well—if it does not, you will quickly be tired of it and its usefulness will be ended. Best of all, it will work even better in an old garden than a new one.

Once your idea is put into effect it must attract immediate attention in order to accomplish its purpose of transforming your garden, yet it should not be simply a show stopper. Too luminous a highlight could blind you to the rest of the garden's merits. And an inappropriate object, however valuable or however successfully it might grace another setting, would surely diminish the garden it was supposed to enhance. The ideas —and their embodiments—on these and the next two pages meet all the tests we can think of: some of them surely are spectacular, some are merely beautiful, some are fanciful, some are pleasant amalgams of all these qualities with a strong dash of practicality added. Perhaps best of all, each has alternatives that could seem equally inspired.

POOL-IN-A-POOL

One is for show, so to speak, and one to grow on. What would have been a too empty forecourt in the California house of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Keaty was transformed by a shallow but wide brick-walled water garden beneath and about a stylized shell-like fountain. It takes but a few clumps of papyrus and comparable plants to make the big pool a garden, only a simple symmetrical jet to make the little pool a fountain—plus, of course, a perfect sense of proportion and design. Perhaps the reason this patio adornment commands more attention than many similar water effects is that it comprises two wholly dissimilar constructions—one, the quite conventional brick circle, the other a quite conventional but equally simple fount in its midst. Designed by Lawrence Halprin & Associates.

IVY CURTAIN

The big tree and amiable cherub, TOP OF PAGE, would be enough to catch and hold the eye—but the real center of attraction is the astonishing cascade of English ivy pouring over the wall of this San Antonio garden. The ivy pre-empts the whole scene—tree, bench, bambino, and all.

THREE-DIMENSIONAL WALL

This wall goes Thomas Jefferson one better (see page 221), since it is pierced as well as serpentine. The one-brick-thick construction in front of Mrs. I. J. Kempner's house in Houston, Tex., is textured by the shadow traps created by spaces between the bricks. The curves form fine plant niches, and the whole wall both conceals and glorifies the entrance.

WHEEL WITHIN WHEEL

This is the nether millstone—but one designed to help turn apples into cider, not grain into flour. While the ordinary flat millstone has become almost a cliché of garden ornamentation, this one marks a relaxing conversation center as well. While the gigantic stone is the lodestar, it would avail little without the great paternal apple tree, the airy lightness of the curving iron bench, even the immutable fury of the graven goose. Part of a larger garden in Wilmington, Del., this is still self-sufficient, a whole garden in its own right

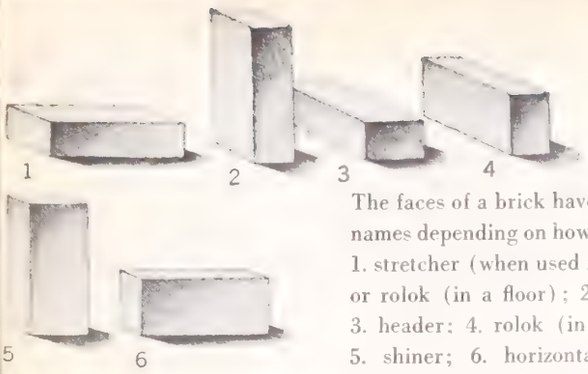
CONCRETE CUTOUT

The difference between this garden wall on Long Island, N. Y., and a similar wall with a conventional doorway in it is akin to the difference between the sound of laughter and the snarl of rush-hour traffic. Not the friendliest of unadorned structural materials for a garden wall, poured concrete can be a delight when handled with imagination. One of the secrets of making a successful doorway in a solid wall, quite apart from the design of the arch, is to enclose it completely—top and bottom, as well as sides. Another is to be sure that it frames a view—or even a mystery—beyond. Both these points are involved in the almost universal popularity of the Chinese moon gate. And both were engaged in the creation of such an antic traverse as this in an ordinary cast concrete wall. For more transforming ideas, please turn to page 258.

THE BEAUTY OF BRICK

Architects and landscape architects are looking today with reawakened appreciation at the ancient material that has been called "the best prefabricated building component ever invented by man." Brick, in addition to its sound structural virtues, offers rich visual assets: a range of mellow natural colors; textures that invite the play of light and shadow; a capacity for composing fascinating patterns that resemble weaves of giant strands of yarn. Here and on the next two pages are some of the delightful ways that brick can be used.



By combining two or more of the traditional brickwork patterns you can create especially arresting designs for terraces or floors. Four different patterns are used in this terrace designed by H&G: The border panels are laid in the American herringbone pattern, the shield-shaped corners in the somewhat similar English herringbone, and both are edged with row of bricks on edge. The large central area is laid in a pattern of concentric circles that takes advantage of the grace with which bricks, despite their angles, can form curves. The subtle modulation of colors was obtained by ordering the bricks in an assortment of compatible colors known as a blend, in this case a blend on the dark side. The bricks were dry-laid; i.e., without mortar (except for the pool border), on a level bed of 4 inches of sand over 4 inches of gravel. Outdoor furniture by Touchstone; brick from Alwine Brick Company. See page 241 for other patterns for paving floors and terraces.

WILLIAM MARIS; EZRA STOLLER ASSOC.

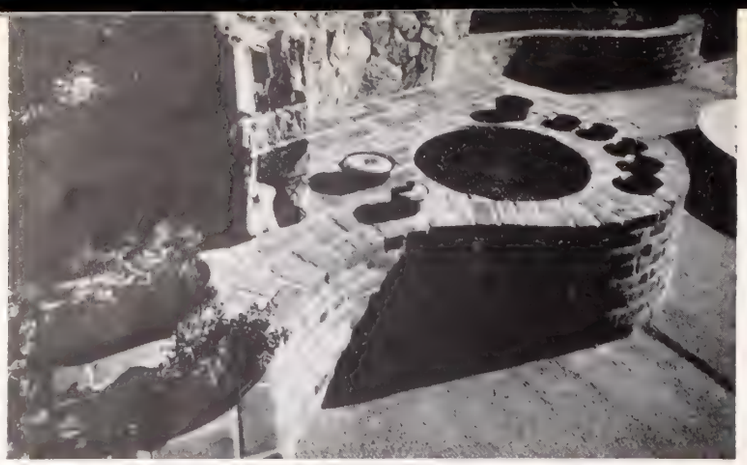
The faces of a brick have different names depending on how it is laid: 1. stretcher (when used in a wall) or rolok (in a floor); 2. soldier; 3. header; 4. rolok (in a wall); 5. shiner; 6. horizontal shiner.



In use for at least 5,000 years, brick has served almost every style of architecture from Roman and Byzantine through Regency and Victorian. Today it is being employed increasingly in contemporary houses, both for solid structural walls and in the form of veneer over a structural framework. Because of its rich decorative quality, brick is also growing in popularity for indoor use, and in the garden it seems to have a natural affinity for plants and trees.

The warm natural color of brick comes from the earth itself, from the clay that is shaped and baked (traditionalists say "burned") to form the hard blocks. Since clays differ in color as soils differ, they produce bricks in beige and yellow and in tones shading from off-whites through darkest grays as well as in endless nuances of pinks and reds. A New Englander who has fallen in love with a shade of California brick may feel momentarily frustrated by the fact that brick is rarely shipped over long distances. But this geographic limitation has its esthetic aspect: Products of the earth look best on the land from which they came.

The over-all color of brick masonry is especially beautiful when bricks of several related tones are mixed at random. The blends sold by brick companies usually contain several shades to a load, or you can order equal quantities of different shades and make your own blend. It is the blended colors, along with the rough-weathered finish, that attracts many people to antique or used brick. Today, you can also get bricks finished on one face with a tile-like glaze in one of several clear, bright colors.

The rich and varied texture of brickwork has two aspects: The first is the texture of the brick itself, which can be made smooth or rough in a variety of ways, such as tool-scoring, sand-molding, water-striking. The second aspect is the larger-scale texture of the finished masonry, which varies according to the mortar technique. The mortar joints can be made flush with the bricks, concave, overflowing, or scored. And still bolder textures can be created by recessing or projecting individual bricks or whole rows or courses. When you stand close to a brick wall or pavement, you can see clearly the complexities of such textures, but as you move away, the complexities dissolve into a subtle softness that no simple flat surface can achieve.

The facility with which brick can be used to create an almost limitless number of patterns is due partly to its range of sizes, partly to its shape. The standard American brick measures 8 by 3¾ inches by 2¼ inches thick. But the handmade Colonial-style brick is 10 by 4 by 3 inches, and the Norman and Roman styles are still longer. Add to the variety of patterns suggested by these various sizes the fact that the six faces of brick offer three different shapes (see above), each of which can be set either horizontally or vertically. You can also get bricks in squares and in an assortment of decorative forms that serve as the building blocks for classic architectural moldings in designs similar to wood moldings. For information on the care of brickwork, see page 240.

Molded shapes, such as the concrete base of this barbecue counter, can be faced with brick. Top is in "basketweave" pattern, wall in "running bond."

Rugged texture can be given to a wall by recessing the mortar joints. For deeper texture, several rows of handmade Colonial-style bricks in this garden wall are recessed and top is stepped back or corbeled. For safety underfoot, steps and walk are paved with smooth bricks laid with flush joints.

Rhythmic shadows on the corner of a house are produced by quoining—i.e., slightly indenting every fourth row of bricks. On the slope of the corbeled chimney where it narrows in girth there is a switch of the exposed brick face from the "stretcher" to the "shiner."

Molding and dentils over a doorway can be made of brick as well as wood. The component bricks specially designed for this purpose are standard shapes to be found in all brick catalogues—so are bricks that compose the ornamental volutes below the pediment.

A barrel vault ceiling may be faced with brick. For the arcade of this house in Alabama, the ceiling bricks were laid over a temporary vaulted ceiling of plywood, then topped with reinforced concrete. When masonry had set, plywood was removed. Architect, Fritz Woehle.

A serpentine wall one brick thick is self-reinforcing as well as beautiful. While a straight brick wall of similar height and thickness would be structurally weak, the serpentine curves offer excellent resistance to buckling and severe winds. The classic example in rican architecture is the wall Thomas Jefferson for the University of Virginia. Rounded capping as those topping this wall are standard shapes.

Arches of brick are as old as the Roman viaducts. Here they border a covered walkway leading from a contemporary Illinois house to its garage. The wall and the 8-inch-square solid brick columns are laid in the "running bond" pattern. A double row of "rolok" forms the arches and a single row of "soldier," the shallow cornice at roofline. Bricks are painted off-white. Sills are marble slabs. Architects: I. W. Coburn & Associates.

The last bastion of the antiseptic, sterile look, banished long since from today's cock-of-the-walk kitchens and bathrooms, seems to be the laundry. A puzzling fact, when you consider that none of the activities that take place in the laundry today pose any threat to decorative materials and delicate colors. There are no fumes to cloud the walls, no grease to spot the floor—only the fresh clean presence of soap and water. And since the room is more likely than not to be small, it takes very little in the way of decoration to make it gay and inviting. Pastel equipment offers one starting point. But surrounded by color and pattern, standard white equipment can make as pretty a splash as a white-lacquered table or a white-covered sofa in the living room. Color on the floor, brightly painted cabinets, pretty wallpaper, even the simplest of curtains—each by itself can go a long way to make the laundry a room to linger in. And this, as a bonus, can increase the room's utility by suggesting that the laundry would be a pleasant—as well as the most efficient—place to mend the clothes as they come and go. Above all, a sparkling laundry—whether it is located next to the kitchen, near the bedrooms, or en route to the garage or porch—is a room whose door can always be proudly left open.

Daisy-strewn wallpaper lush with country greens makes a spirited background for a full complement of white equipment in the laundry of a Connecticut house. Unlaundrylike details such as the decorative ceiling molding, the arched doorway, the ruffled white curtains help to account for the fact that although this laundry opens to the front hall its door is almost never closed. HAPPY MARRIAGES OF WINE AND MEAT

by James A. Beard

While the pairing of wine and meat, like all good marriages, is ultimately a matter of individual choice and preference, there are some well-established guidelines that can contribute greatly to the happiness of the liaison. The rule of thumb about serving a red wine with a red meat, for example, is generally a sound one when you are having a roast. Yet the dicta about what goes with what are more relaxed these days. While you would usually choose a light red to accompany a veal roast, some people drink, with perfect assurance, a white with this delicate meat. Similarly, with a boiled beef dish such as pot-au-feu, you might prefer the freshness of a white to the body of a red. And although a perfectly roasted filet should certainly be accorded the compliment of a fine Burgundy, Bordeaux, or premium American red, it would be folly to lavish the same wine on a hamburger or a beef stew, where a modest European wine or an American Mountain Red would be much more appropriate and compatible. So, common sense is the best guide to follow when picking a wine for a dish. The following chart, while listing the established marriages of wine and meat, also indicates where other choices are just as good.

Beef	Accompanying wine
Porterhouse, sirloin, and similar hearty steaks, plainly cooked. London broil. Hamburgers	Red: Châteauneuf-du-Pape, Pommard, Médoc, Spanish Rioja, or California Pinot Noir. For summer outdoor eating, lightly cooled Beaujolais
Steak au poivre, steak Diane, steak au Roquefort	Red: Châteauneuf-du-Pape; young Julienas or Fleurie; California Zinfandel.
Filet mignon, tournedos, Châteaubriand, whole roast filet, beef Wellington, beef scallops, beef Stroganoff	Red: Médoc or St. Emilion of a good year; Vosne-Romanée or Corton of a good year; Côte Rôtie of a good year; California premium Cabernet Sauvignon.
Roast prime ribs, roast sirloin	Red: Graves, such as an Haut-Brion; Pomerol

Roast Meat Cook Book

By James A. Beard

The eighteenth-century wit who remarked, "Heaven sends us good meat, but the devil sends cooks," probably had reason for his quip. Although roasting is the earliest known method of cooking meat, it is by no means the easiest. Even in America, a country of meat-eaters with a reputation for raising some of the world's best beef, a perfectly cooked roast is still something of a rarity. For while our improved kitchen equipment has made roasting as much a science as an art, a really fine roasting cook must still be blessed with (or acquire) the practiced eye, sensitive finger, and the uncanny intuition of the exact moment to take the roast from the oven that characterized the traditional rôtisseur. Variations in cuts, grades, and sizes of roasts can all affect the end result, and the charts that time a joint by weight are not only fallible, but practically useless. In addition, the cook should be skilled in giving the meat the almost imperceptible seasoning that makes the telling difference in flavor and texture.

The days of the turnspit were perhaps the golden era in roasting. There are few gastronomic delights to equal a spitted joint, brown and juicy, roasted to a turn. The secret of roasting is the even circulation of heat on all sides of the meat, at which the spit excels. If you don't have a spit (many ovens are now equipped with them and there are excellent rotisseries on the market, both electric and gas), roast your joint in the oven on a V-shaped rack set in a shallow pan or on the rack of the broiler pan. But never use the conventional, misnamed roaster, a deep rackless pan that stews the bottom of the meat in fat and juices as the top browns.

ROASTING TEMPERATURES FOR OVEN AND MEAT

There was a time when roasts were put into the oven at high temperature and roasted for ½ to ¾ of an hour, at which point the heat was reduced and roasting continued until the meat was considered done. Today we find that slower cooking at one temperature makes for more even-textured, even-colored meat. You can in fact roast at temperatures as low as 180° or 200° with astonishingly good results. At these temperatures, of course, your roast will require from ⅓ to ½ again more cooking time.

Certain roasts may be cooked more quickly than others. For example, a leg of lamb can be cooked at 350° or 375° if you watch it carefully. Pork is best if roasted at 300°–325°, with a generous amount of cooking time, and basted to give the skin or crackling a nice flavor and texture. Veal should be roasted slowly and not be overdone. With veal, try to gauge the point where it is juicy with just a bit of firmness in it, rather than letting it go on to the stage where it is stringy and dry. Mutton, if you are fortunate enough to find a source for it, should be very well aged and cooked in the same manner as lamb.

There is no reason for cook books, meat thermometers, and various public agencies to perpetuate the idea that an inner temperature of 140° will yield rare beef. Inevitably it will be medium rare or even medium. If you wish to have truly rare beef, remove the roast from the oven at 120°–125°. Allow it to rest in a warm place for 15 minutes—this is nothing more than a slight cooling process—so it will become a bit firmer and easier to carve. Rare meat is pink from the outer fat to the bone or center—not bloody, but juicy and pink (or red, according to your definition of color). If you want your beef "bleu" it should come out of the oven a few degrees before reaching the rare stage.

Lamb should be removed from the oven at 130°–135° if you want it rare, as many people think it should be. If it is allowed to reach 160°, which is often prescribed for "pink" lamb, it will be an unappetizing gray-brown color and, for some of us, ruined. The same temperature can be used for a saddle of lamb or a boned and rolled shoulder. Baby lamb, on the other hand, should be roasted until it is barely pink—to a temperature of about 150°—for best results. Again, allow your roast to rest for 10 minutes or so before carving. Veal should be roasted to an internal temperature of 150°–160°. This temperature applies to the leg, shoulder, and saddle.

Stuffed breast of veal should be roasted to 170°, because it is a strangely textured cut of meat which requires rather long cooking to make it tender. Pork must be roasted to a temperature of 165°–175°, to the thoroughly cooked stage, for a variety of reasons. It is safer to eat (although trichinae are killed at a much lower temperature), it is easier to carve, and, quite simply, it tastes better.

If you can find a meat thermometer with a full dial, ranging from 0° up, by all means buy it. It is preferable to those that key various cuts of meat to certain temperatures. Do not leave the thermometer in the roast, but insert it only long enough to check the temperature from time to time. Some ovens, however, have a thermometer attached on a cable, which you insert and leave in the roast, and this gadget is extremely efficient. You can set the alarm for the desired temperature and check no further.

It is equally important to take the internal temperature of a roast before you place it in the oven if you want to time it properly. Obviously a roast with an icy interior will take longer to achieve the prescribed temperature than one that has been removed from the refrigerator for a period of time. It is surprising what 2 or 3 hours at room temperature will do to speed the roast on its way.

Pastry-wrapped Beef Wellington decorated with pastry shapes made with cookie cutters, might be surrounded by a brilliant garnish of artichoke bottoms filled with piped puréed carrot or baby carrots, bundles of tiny green beans held in carrot rings. Cordless carving knife does a perfect job of slicing crust and rare beef.

BEEF ROASTS

Prime Rib Roast of Beef

A standing rib roast is best if it is large—at least three ribs. If you want a smaller one, my advice is to broil it as you would a steak. A five-rib or larger roast can be magnificent when presented at table. Have it cut short, and, if possible, well trimmed and tied so that carving will be easier. Never worry about leftovers, for few things are as delicious as cold roast beef. It may even be frozen after cooking and stored for several weeks.

Naturally, the roast should be either USDA Choice or Prime. There is a great difference in butchers and their treatment of a roast of beef. Some do not age beef long enough. If you have a co-operative butcher, try to order your roast a fortnight or so in advance, in order to let it hang for an extra amount of time.

To prepare the roast, score the fat and rub it well with freshly ground black pepper. Also rub some of the pepper into the flesh and on the bone side. Place the roast on a rack, rib side down. Roast at any of the following temperatures, without basting:

200°—approximately 30–35 minutes per pound.

300°—approximately 15–18 minutes per pound.

325°—approximately 13–15 minutes per pound.

For rare beef, the inner temperature should register 120°–125° when the thermometer is inserted into the thickest part of the meat without touching the bone.

Salt the meat during the last 15 minutes of cooking and after testing the temperature a final time. Place the roast on a platter, this time resting on its broader flesh side. Allow the meat to settle for 12–15 minutes before sending it to the table.

You may serve the pan juices with the meat or a Bordelaise or Périgueux sauce (see page 236). Horseradish is considered a must by many, as is mustard, but if you are doing justice to your roast by drinking a fine claret with it—such as an Haut-Brion 1952—you will certainly forego either of these condiments.

With the roast serve oven-browned potatoes, small buttered new potatoes, or Potatoes Anna. A second vegetable might be braised onions in Madeira or yellow turnips with mushrooms.

Roast Sirloin of Beef

Ask your butcher to give you a roast from the sirloin or shell, from which he cuts steaks. This is the short loin and contains some of the most expensive meat on the market. However, the fat is more perfectly distributed than on a rib roast, and the meat carves beautifully. Roast as you would a Prime rib roast. Also carve as you would a rib roast, or you may rest the sirloin on its bone side and cut straight down.

Serve with Potatoes Anna or sautéed potatoes, and perhaps petits pois. If you would like a sauce for the beef, serve one of those suggested for rib roast, or a Béarnaise. Drink a good St. Emilion—a Château Cheval Blanc or an Ausone.

Rump Roast of Beef

This cut is not as well known in the United States as it is in Europe. However, it can be flavorful and tender, and if correctly cut, slices beautifully at table. It is not as butter-tender as the previous roasts, but it is excellent in texture and makes an interesting change from the usual cuts. The roasting rules are the same as for the rib roast. Pepper the meat well and rub with a small amount of salt. Roast on a rack to an internal temperature of 120°–125°, salt well, and let stand for about 15 minutes before carving. A Sauce Madère would go well with this roast.

Serve with jacket potatoes and an excellent salad. Drink a good Beaujolais, a Fleurie, or a California Pinot Noir.

Flavor variations for these roasts:

1. Rub the roast well with rosemary and pepper before roasting.
2. Rub garlic in the fat and flesh and along the bones before roasting to perfume the roast lightly.

Roast Filet of Beef

In these days of small kitchens, limited storage space, and quick cooking, the filet is an ideal choice for a dinner party and lends itself to a great variety of flavorful preparations. The cut itself is expensive, but there is no bone and little fat.

Filets weigh 4–10 pounds or more and have a coating of kidney fat on one side. This is easy to remove, as is the membrane underneath.

Before roasting, remove the small end of the filet (the "filet mignon") and save it for a tiny sautéed or skewered steak.

Filet of Beef Wellington

Cream cheese pastry or brioche dough
Butter
1 pound mushrooms, finely chopped
Salt, pepper
1 filet, about 6 pounds, well trimmed
⅓ cup cognac
Foie gras or mousse of foie gras
1 egg, separated
¼ cup cream

Prepare the pastry (double or triple your usual recipe) and chill it well before rolling. Melt ¼ pound butter over low heat, add the mushrooms, and let them cook very slowly, stirring occasionally, until the water in them has evaporated and they have turned quite dark. Add additional butter if the pan appears to be dry. Add salt to taste and a few grinds of pepper. Set aside.

Trim the filet and rub it well with butter. Roast on a rack in a 325° oven until it has reached an internal temperature of 120° (it must remain rare through the second stage of cooking). Remove from the oven, flame with cognac and season with salt and pepper to taste. Allow to cool thoroughly.

Roll out the pastry to fit the filet—you will need enough to envelop it and to overlap on the underside. If you have some pastry left over, cut it into decorative shapes for the top of the crust.

Spread the foie gras or mousse of foie gras over the filet. Then spread the mushroom mixture on the pastry, roll up the filet in the pastry, trim it and seal the edges with egg white. Turn the pastry-covered filet over so that the overlapping edges are on the bottom, and place on a piece of aluminum foil. Transfer to a rack. Decorate with the pastry cut-outs, securing them with water or egg white.

Beat the egg yolk and cream together and brush the pastry well with the mixture. Bake in a 425° oven for 10 minutes. Reduce the heat to 400° and bake another 10 minutes. If the crust needs further cooking (it should be golden and cooked through), reduce the heat to 350° and cook a little longer.

Serve the filet with sauce Périgueux, tiny green beans, a purée of carrots with butter or braised celery. Drink a Chambertin or Gevrey-Chambertin.

STERLING

For information write Lunt Silversmiths, Dept. HG-4 Greenfield, Mass.

Flamed Roast Filet of Beef

5–6-pound filet
Olive oil
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1½ teaspoons salt
⅓ cup cognac, heated
Chopped parsley

Rub the filet well with oil and freshly ground pepper. Place on a rack in a roasting pan and roast in a 350° oven for 45–50 minutes, or until the meat thermometer registers 120°–125° (for rare). Brush with oil occasionally, if necessary. Salt the roast and let it rest for 10 minutes. Remove to a hot platter and blaze with the heated cognac. Sprinkle lavishly with chopped parsley.

Garnish the platter with grilled or baked tomatoes and watercress. Serve with sauce Périgueux (see page 236) and asparagus Hollandaise.

Marinated Filet of Beef

5–8-pound filet
1 cup Japanese soy sauce
3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
2 tablespoons chopped fresh ginger, or 1 tablespoon chopped candied ginger, washed free of excess sugar
½ cup sherry
¼ cup peanut or olive oil

Trim the filet well. Combine soy sauce, garlic, ginger, and sherry in a large bowl. Rub the filet thoroughly with the oil and place it in the bowl. Turn a number of times, and let it marinate for several hours, turning once or twice.

Place the filet on a rack, and roast in a 350° oven for 45–50 minutes, or until the meat thermometer registers 120° (for rare). Baste with the marinade several times during the roasting. Remove from the oven, and let it rest for several minutes before serving on a hot platter. Pour pan juices over the filet.

Garnish with broiled mushrooms and watercress and serve with wild rice and toasted almonds. Drink a Châteauneuf-du-Pape.

Elizabeth David's Savory Stuffed Filet of Beef large onions, thinly sliced tablespoons olive oil

tablespoons butter
cloves garlic
8 pitted black olives, coarsely chopped
½ cup chopped cooked Virginia or country ham freshly ground black pepper, salt teaspoon thyme
egg yolks, beaten
tablespoons chopped parsley
filet, about 7 pounds

Sauté the onions in the oil and butter until just limp, then add the garlic, olives, ham, 1 teaspoon pepper, thyme, and 1 teaspoon salt, and cook until well blended. Stir in the beaten egg yolks and parsley, and cook for about 3 minutes.

Cut the filet not quite through in rather thickish slices, and spoon the stuffing between slices. Run a needle and string through the middle of the filet, or tie it securely. Place on a rack, brush with oil or butter, and roast in a 300° oven for about 50 minutes, or until the internal temperature is about 125°. Let it rest for 10 minutes. Salt lightly, and place on a hot platter with a garnish of watercress and tiny glazed carrots.

Serve with a Sauce Bordelaise and tiny buttered new potatoes, and drink a Hermitage.

Shapely Crown Roast of Lamb on round silver platter with filling of tiny peas and onions would look well ringed by mounds of rice pilaff (molded in timbales), artichokes with centers replaced by Béarnaise sauce. Frills for bones are cut from white paper, taped.

LAMB ROASTS

For years lamb was the most unpopular meat in the United States, and no wonder. It was mostly roasted until it was gray-brown in color, stringy in texture, and rather tallowy in flavor. The recent upward swing in lamb consumption is clearly due to the fact that pink and even rare lamb has now become popular and the meat therefore is more palatable.

For the most part the lamb we get in this country is a well-matured animal which, in the prime or choice categories, is tender and flavorful. There is also a certain amount of baby lamb available at fancy butchers around the country, but this brings premium prices at all times.

The choicest cuts of lamb for roasting are the baron (the saddle together with the legs), the saddle, the leg or gigot, the rack, which makes an excellent roast for a small dinner party, and the crown. The boned and rolled shoulder is ideal for spit roasting.

Lamb, to be pink, should roast to 130° on the meat thermometer and rest for 10–15 minutes before being carved. Taking 130° for a norm, you can adjust the temperature up or down, according to your own taste.

Rack of Lamb Persillé

The rack is best if roasted at a higher temperature than the other cuts and basted often. A rack should be served at once.

1 rack, about 6 chops
2 cloves garlic, very finely chopped
¾ cup bread crumbs
½ cup finely chopped parsley
Butter
Salt, freshly ground black pepper

Ask the butcher to cut the rack so that you can carve right through the chops without having to struggle with the bones. Trim it and wrap the bone ends of the chops with foil. Blend the garlic, the bread crumbs, and parsley. Rub the roast well with butter and freshly ground black pepper. Place on a rack in a roasting pan, and roast in a 375° oven, basting every 10 minutes. After about 20 minutes, test for internal temperature. If it is near 130°–135°, remove from the oven. Blend the degreased pan juices with the crumb mixture, salt the roast and spread an even film of the crumb mixture over it. Dot with butter, and return to the oven until the mixture has browned nicely and the rack is done.

Serve with sautéed potatoes and broccoli au buerre noir. Drink a light red Bordeaux.

Crown Roast of Lamb

This is a very attractive roast when properly trimmed and tied. You may have a smallish crown roast or one made with a double rack. Allow about 2 chops per person.

Fill the center of the roast with a ball of foil to keep the crown in shape during roasting, and cover the bones with foil or cubes of fat to prevent them from charring. Season the roast well with freshly ground black pepper and tarragon, and roast on a rack in a 325° oven, allowing about 13–15 minutes per pound for pink lamb. With a crown it is difficult to take a reading on a meat thermometer.

Let the roast stand for about 10 minutes in a warm place. Remove the covering on the ends of the ribs and replace them with paper frills. Fill the center of the crown with any of the following:

1. Tiny new peas mixed with tiny onions, well buttered.
2. A rice pilaff mixed with finely cut and quickly sautéed lamb kidneys.
3. A purée of chestnuts, with braised chestnuts as a garnish.
4. Braised chestnuts and Brussels sprouts.
5. Sautéed mushroom caps sprinkled with tarragon, parsley, and chives.
6. Cracked wheat.
7. Wild rice and almonds.

Serve the pan juices, or anchovy-flavored Hollandaise sauce or a Béarnaise sauce, substituting fresh mint for the tarragon in the latter.

Also serve a Bibb lettuce salad tossed with diced cooked beets. Drink a modest Bordeaux wine such as a Château Grand Puy Lacoste or a Cos d'Estournel.

Saddle of Lamb

The saddle is sometimes called the double loin or double rack. The best saddles are cut from the loin. Ask the butcher to remove all excess fat and the long, flat flank sections. The saddle should then be rolled and tied so that it looks trim. Rub well with freshly ground pepper, a little salt, and a bit of rosemary. Place on a rack and roast in a 325° oven, allowing about 12 minutes per pound, until the internal temperature has reached 145°. Salt again just before removing from the oven. Let stand for 10 minutes in a warm place before carving.

Remove the strings which hold the roast together and with a sharp knife cut the meat in long, thinnish slices parallel to the spine. Run the point of the knife along the bone to loosen the slices. Repeat on the other side. Turn the roast over and remove the small filets on the underside. Slice them in rounds. Serve each person a long slice and one or two of the small slices from the filet, with some of the pan juices.

Potatoes Anna and lightly sautéed zucchini are excellent with this. Drink a good red Chassagne-Montrachet.

Variations:

Season the saddle well with rosemary and a little garlic. Roast as directed. Broil or roast at least one lamb kidney, trimmed and soaked in milk for 1 hour, for each serving. Carve the roast and garnish it with the kidneys and the rounds of the filet. Sprinkle with chopped parsley, buttered crumbs, and salt to taste. Serve with Hollandaise sauce seasoned with garlic and finely chopped anchovy filets to taste.

Roast Leg of Lamb

Have the leg cut without chops attached and with the shank bone left intact, not cracked as one finds so often. The leg should be well trimmed and all excess fat and the membrane removed. Rub it with freshly ground pepper and a touch of rosemary and place it on a rack in a shallow pan. Roast in a 325° oven until it registers 130°–135° when tested with a meat thermometer. Salt well 15 minutes before removing from the oven. Allow to stand about 10 minutes before carving.

Serve with the pan juices and tiny buttered peas. Drink a very light red wine—a Moulin-à-vent, young and fruity, would be extremely good.

Garlic-Studded Leg of Lamb

Peel and sliver 4–5 cloves garlic. Make incisions in the leg with a very sharp pointed knife (such as small French paring knife). Force the slivers into the incisions and rub the roast well with pepper and a touch of rosemary or tarragon. Place on a rack and roast as in the previous recipe.

Serve with white beans, blended with the pan juices, and a bit of peeled, seeded, and finely chopped fresh tomato. Drink a Chinon or a Bourgeuil.

Variations:

Provençal I: Cut 4–6 cloves garlic into slivers. Make fairly deep incisions in the leg and alternate garlic and anchovy filets in the incisions (you will not need to add much salt to this anchovied leg). Roast. Serve with a ratatouille and drink a Châteauneuf-du-Pape.

Provençal II: Make incisions in the leg and stuff with garlic, pistachio nuts, and anchovies, pushing them deep into the incisions. Rub the leg with a touch of thyme and summer savory and roast. Salt lightly and serve with a gratin of eggplant. Drink a well-chilled Tavel.

Gigot Made to Taste Like Venison

This dish used to be a 4-day affair. However, a new product on the market called Instant Meat Marinade short-cuts the time.

1½ cups red wine
Juice of 1 lemon
6–8 peppercorns, crushed
2 envelopes Instant Meat Marinade
5–7-pound leg of lamb
3 cloves garlic, slivered

Combine the wine, lemon juice, peppercorns, and Instant Meat Marinade. Place the lamb in the marinade, and run a fork through the meat according to directions on the package. Make incisions in the leg and insert the slivered garlic. Remove the leg from the marinade after 15 minutes and place on a rack in a broiling pan or shallow roasting pan. Heat the marinade in a pan.

Roast in a 325° oven, basting every 20 minutes or so with some of the heated marinade. When the internal temperature has reached 135°, transfer the leg of lamb to a hot platter and allow to stand for 10 minutes before serving. Combine the pan juices with the remaining marinade and cook down by a third. Strain and correct the seasoning. Serve with the lamb.

Also serve a purée of chestnuts blended with butter and nutmeg and beaten with a small amount of cream, or braised turnips. Drink a Gevrey-Chambertin or a California Pinot Noir.

Note: If you make a regular red wine marinade, marinate the leg for 4 days before cooking.

Shoulder of Lamb

A boned and rolled shoulder may be treated in any of the ways suggested for leg of lamb. It is an ideal roast for a rotisserie or a spit because of the absence of bones.

VEAL ROASTS

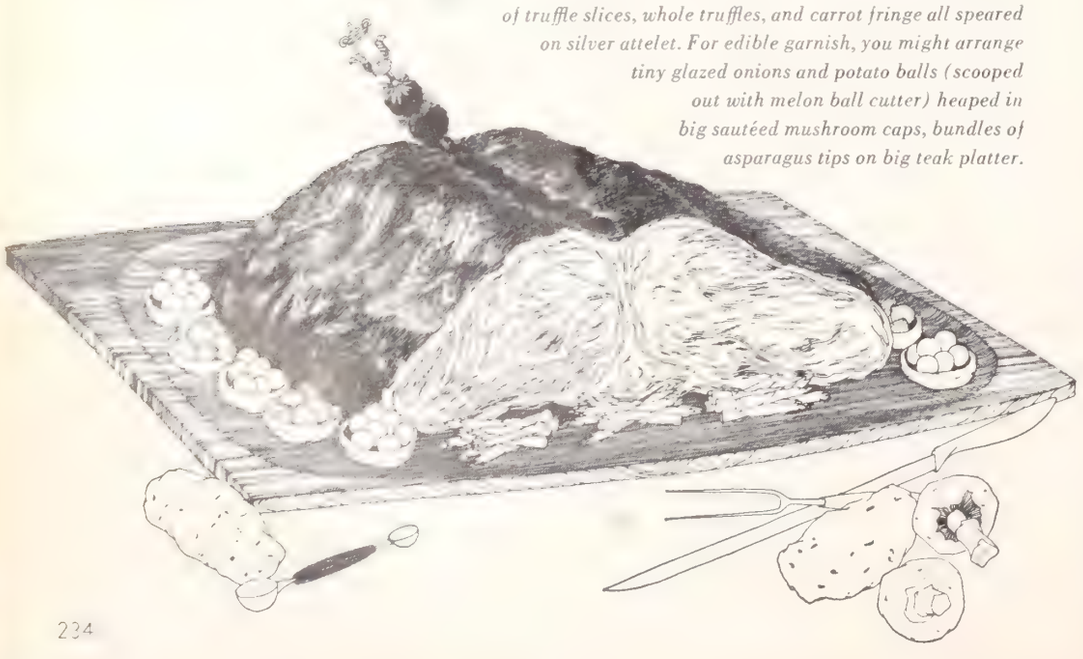
Veal is the most difficult of all meat to find in its best state. When it is young and whitish-pink in color, it is unbelievably good. Unfortunately, this is as hard to come upon in the United States as brontosaurus filets! Most of the veal we get is almost baby beef, of a rather dull, ashes-of-roses color. If you have a good Italian butcher or a butcher who supplies local meats, you may find a source of fine veal. A certain amount is being developed around the eastern seaboard under the name of plume de veau. It is superb white veal, carefully tended and accordingly expensive.

The double loin, which corresponds to a saddle, and the loin (sometimes called the tenderloin), which is a boned rack, are the best cuts for roasting. If you can get young white veal in your community, the rump makes a delicious roast, and the cut which corresponds to the eye of the round in beef is also excellent.

Veal should be roasted covered with foil or cooking parchment for part of the time. Sear it first or brown it under the broiler and then cook it slowly. Overcooking robs the meat of its juiciness and makes it tasteless. Veal needs seasonings and additives; without them it can be dull fare.

Ask your butcher to bard the veal and tie it securely. This keeps it moist and juicy. Have a well-seasoned sauce with roast veal.

Saddle of Veal Prince Orloff



This classic dish is tricky to make, but the effect is impressive if you are giving a large dinner party.

Saddle of veal, trimmed and tied
Bacon slices
Salt, pepper
2 or more cups Sauce Soubise
Slices of truffle
Grated Parmesan cheese

Wrap the saddle of veal with the bacon slices, tying them securely, and place on a rack in a shallow roasting pan. Roast in a 325° oven, basting with the pan juices from time to time, until the veal reaches an internal temperature of 165°–170°. Season with salt and pepper a short time before removing from the oven.

Transfer the saddle to a hot platter or board and remove bacon. With a very sharp knife remove both filets by running a knife around the bone. Cut each filet into scallops large enough for individual servings. Brush the bone section of the saddle with Sauce Soubise. Replace the scallops, brushing each one with Sauce Soubise and placing a slice of truffle on each. Reassemble carefully so as to make a perfect saddle. Then spread the entire roast with Sauce

Spectacular Saddle of Veal Prince Orloff lends itself to decoration of truffle slices, whole truffles, and carrot fringe all speared on silver attelet. For edible garnish, you might arrange tiny glazed onions and potato balls (scooped out with melon ball cutter) heaped in big sautéed mushroom caps, bundles of asparagus tips on big teak platter.

Soubise, and sprinkle lightly with grated Parmesan cheese. Place under the broiler or in a very hot oven for a few minutes to glaze. Arrange a row of truffle slices along the center of the roast, and place on a hot platter with a garnish of tiny braised onions and potatoes. Serve with a string bean purée and drink a Médoc of a fine year.

Sauce Soubise

3 fairly large onions, finely chopped
1 cup rice
3 cups chicken stock
1 teaspoon salt
White pepper
2 teaspoons sugar
2 tablespoons butter
3–4 tablespoons heavy cream

Cover the onions with water, bring to the boil, and cook for 6 minutes over medium heat. Put the rice and stock in a saucepan and bring to a boil. Add to the onion mixture with the salt, pepper to taste, and sugar, and pour into a well-buttered casserole. Bake at 350° until the rice is very soft and rather mushy. Purée the mixture, reheat with the butter, and stir in about 3–4 tablespoons heavy cream. The sauce should be thick and rich. To make sure it is thick enough, let it cook down a little before adding the butter and cream. Makes about 2½ cups.

Roast Rump or Leg of Veal

Roast the meat on a rack in a 325° oven, allowing about 22 minutes per pound, until the internal temperature is about 165°. Baste occasionally during the roasting. Before roasting, place a veal knuckle in a roasting pan and brown it under the broiler or in a 450° oven. Sprinkle the knuckle with flour and brown that as well. Transfer the bone and its juices to a deep kettle and add 1 quart water, 1 cup white wine, 1 teaspoon tarragon, 1 small onion stuck with 2 cloves, 1 clove garlic, and 1 small carrot. Cover and simmer for 2 hours. Strain through a piece of muslin or linen. Add 1 cup dry white wine and reduce the broth by ⅓. Correct the seasoning. This sauce may be served as is or with these variations:
1. Thicken sauce with beurre manié and add ½ cup finely chopped sautéed mushrooms.
2. Add 12 finely chopped anchovies and 1 tablespoon capers

Ham-Larded Loin of Veal

8–10 strips country ham or Smithfield ham, about 6"–8" long and ⅜" thick
Medium dry sherry
Double loin of veal, boned and tied Ham fat, bacon, or fat pork
Salt
½ cup currants, soaked in 3 tablespoons sherry

Soak the ham strips in 1 cup sherry for 1 hour and insert them in the veal with a larding needle. If you have a whole ham, cut the fat in thin slices from the top to cover the veal.

If ham fat is not available, cover the top of the roast with bacon rashers or fat pork. Roast on a rack in a 425° oven for 30 minutes. Reduce the heat to 350°, cover with a piece of foil or parchment, and continue roasting, basting occasionally with sherry, until the roast reaches an inner temperature of 160°–165°. Remove the bacon or ham fat and the foil for the last 45 minutes and baste the roast with the pan juices and additional sherry, if desired. Salt to taste.

Majestic Roast Fresh Ham needs only a simple colorful garnish. One possibility: baked tomato shells filled with piped spinach purée, tiny pastry boat (baked in barquette molds) bearing Burgundian Mustard.

Remove the roast to a hot platter and allow to stand in a warm place for 10 minutes. Skim excess fat from pan and add currants and additional sherry to taste to the pan juices. Heat thoroughly and serve with the roast.

Potatoes, thinly sliced and baked in a shallow dish with broth and butter, like scalloped potatoes, are a perfect accompaniment. Also serve with a purée of carrots dressed with butter and a touch of marjoram or summer savory. Drink a good Médoc with this roast.

Roast Rack of Veal

Rack of veal
Butter
Tarragon, freshly ground black pepper, salt
White wine
1 cup fresh bread crumbs
¼ cup chopped parsley

Rub the veal well with butter, tarragon, and pepper and place on a rack in a roasting pan. Roast in a 400° oven for 20 minutes, basting with melted butter and white wine. Reduce the heat to 325°, cover the roast with foil, and continue cooking until it reaches an internal temperature of about 155°–160°.

Mix the crumbs with ½ cup butter and the parsley. Salt the roast to taste and then spread it with the crumbs. Increase the temperature to 375° and return the roast to the oven to brown nicely. Serve with the pan juices, sautéed potatoes, and artichokes with a Hollandaise sauce. Drink a Meursault.

PORK ROASTS

Pork is a versatile meat that lends itself to complementary seasonings and tastes even better cold than hot. Pork should be thoroughly cooked, but it should not be overcooked. Cook to an internal temperature of at least 160° to be safe, and to a maximum of 180°.

Roast Fresh Ham

The pork leg cut or fresh ham is quite versatile. It may be cooked either boned or with the bone in. Because of its size, it takes time to cook perfectly in an oven set for 325° or 300°. The fat covering eliminates the need for basting, but an occasional basting with red or white wine or broth does help the flavor and keeps a delicious moisture in the meat.

Rub the roast well with sage, freshly ground black pepper, and touch of garlic. Place on a rack in a shallow pan. Roast to an internal temperature of 175°. Remove from the oven, and allow to stand for 15 minutes in a warm place before carving. Serve with Lyonnaise potatoes, sautéed apple slices, and Burgundian Mustard.

Burgundian Mustard

2 tablespoons finely chopped sour pickle
1 tablespoon finely chopped sweet pickle
1 cup Dijon mustard
1 teaspoon cognac

Blend the finely chopped pickles thoroughly with the mustard and add the cognac. If sealed in a jar, this will keep for several days.

Fresh Ham, Italian Fashion

1 fresh ham, boned
3–4 sprigs Italian parsley
3–4 stalks fresh basil or 1½ teaspoons dried basil
2–3 cloves garlic
Salt, pepper
White wine
Beurre manié
Chopped parsley and chives

Stuff the ham cavity with the parsley, basil, and garlic. Rub with pepper. Tie securely. Place on a rack and roast in a 300° oven, allowing about 25–30 minutes per pound and basting well with warmed white wine. Salt about midway in the cooking time.

When the roast has reached an inner temperature of 175°, remove to a hot platter. Skim the excess fat from the pan juices and combine with enough additional white wine to make 2 cups. Reduce this slightly, and thicken with beurre manié (small balls of flour and butter kneaded together). Add chopped parsley and chives to the sauce. Serve the pork with this sauce, potatoes puréed with cream and butter, and broccoli sprinkled with Parme[illegible]. Drink a sparkling white [illegible]

Fresh Ham, Norman Fashion

1 fresh ham, about 8–9 pounds, boned
Nutmeg, white pepper, ginger
Sweet cider
Salt
½ cup calvados or applejack
1 cup heavy cream
4 egg yolks

Rub the roast well with nutmeg, pepper, and a touch of ginger. Place on a rack in a shallow roasting pan, and roast in a 325° oven, allowing 25 minutes per pound, until meat thermometer registers 175°. Baste often during cooking with sweet cider, slightly warmed. Salt 15 minutes before removing from oven. Flambé with warmed calvados or applejack. Remove to a hot platter, and skim excess fat from the pan juices. Heat juices and combine with heavy cream mixed with egg yolks. Stir until nicely thickened and smooth, but do not allow to boil. Correct the seasoning. Serve the pork with this sauce, buttered noodles, sautéed salsify, and candied apple rings. Drink sparkling cider, if available, or a fine Alsatian wine.

Pork Made to Taste Like Wild Boar

1 fresh ham, boned and tied
3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
12 peppercorns, crushed
½ teaspoon nutmeg
Pinch ground cloves
1 teaspoon thyme
1 bay leaf
2 strips orange peel
1 large onion, sliced
Red wine
Oil
Salt
Beurre manié (optional)

Rub the ham well with the garlic, peppercorns, nutmeg, and cloves and place in a large, deep container with the thyme, bay leaf, orange peel, onion, and enough red wine to cover. Marinate for 4–5 days, turning it at least once each day.

When you are ready to cook the roast, remove from the marinade, dry thoroughly, and rub with oil. Place on a rack in a very shallow roasting pan, and roast in a 325° oven, allowing 25 minutes per pound. Baste with the strained marinade from time to time. Salt about midway in the cooking time. When the roast has reached 175° on the meat thermometer, remove to a hot platter. Add the pan juices to the remaining marinade. Cook slightly, and taste for seasoning. You may thicken this with beurre manié if you wish. Serve with the roast.

Roast Loin of Pork

Probably the loin of pork is the most popular cut, and the best for eating cold. This constitutes the entire rack and is usually sold in one piece or divided into rib end or loin end. You may cut the ends from the loin and roast just the rib chops or the loin chops. The bones should be cracked and the roast tied so that the carving process is easy. A loin of about 4 pounds will be ample for 4 persons, with some left for another meal.

Rub loin well with freshly ground black pepper and a little thyme, and place on a rack in a shallow pan. Roast in a 325° oven, allowing about 25 minutes per pound, until the interior temperature registers about 170°. Salt well, remove from oven, and let it rest for 10 minutes. Skim off excess fat from the roasting pan, add a cup of hot stock or broth, and let the mixture come to the boil. Simmer for a few minutes. Serve with the pork. With this have boiled potatoes lightly whipped with butter and heavy cream and well seasoned with salt and pepper and sautéed apple slices. A good rosé wine is in order here, or, if you prefer, champagne.

Variations:

1. Insert 2 or 3 garlic cloves in the pork and rub with thyme, freshly ground pepper, and salt. Roast as directed. About halfway through the roasting process, baste well with red wine. Continue basting with the pan juices and additional red wine until the roast is cooked. Serve with sautéed onions and tiny new potatoes. Drink a light red carafe wine.
2. Rub a 5-pound loin with a bit of sage, freshly ground black pepper, and a little nutmeg. Place on a rack and roast in a 325° oven for 2 hours. Remove from the oven and pour off excess fat from the pan. Add to the pan 4–5 apples, cored, peeled, and cut into thin slices. Sprinkle with 1 tablespoon sugar. Return the pork to the oven and continue roasting until thoroughly cooked. Remove the roast. The apples should be soft by this time. Add 1 cup cream, bring the apple-cream mixture to a boil, and blend. Correct the seasoning, and serve with the pork. With this have sautéed cabbage.
3. Rub a 4–5-pound loin of pork with garlic. Place it in a bowl and add ⅔ cup Japanese soy sauce, ⅔ cup sherry, 2–3 halved cloves garlic, and 2 tablespoons chopped fresh ginger or candied ginger. Turn the roast in this mixture, and let it stand for 3–4 hours, turning several times. Place the loin on a rack and roast in a 325° oven, basting from time to time with the marinade. Remove from the oven when the meat thermometer registers 170° and allow to rest for 10 minutes. Serve with broiled pineapple and a barley casserole.
4. Rub the loin with garlic. Cut a deep incision lengthwise along the top of the roast, parallel to the bone. Insert slices of truffle, cut about ¼" thick, letting them overlap. Tie the roast very tightly and sprinkle lightly with freshly ground black pepper and a bit of nutmeg. Place on a rack and roast in a 325° oven for approximately 25 minutes per pound, or until the roast registers 170°. Baste several times during cooking with Madeira or sherry. Half an hour before it is done add ½ cup stock or broth to the pan and baste again with wine. Salt the roast to taste. Remove to a hot platter and let it rest 10 minutes before carving. Heat the pan juices, after removing excess fat, and add 1 tablespoon finely chopped truffle. Serve with a purée of chestnuts and braised endive. Champagne is delicious with this.

Crown Roast of Pork with Sauerkraut

The crown is sometimes made with two rib ends of the loin and sometimes with the entire loin, which makes a most spectacular roast. Wrap the ends of the rib bones with foil to keep them from charring. Rub the meat with freshly ground black pepper, a bit of sage and rosemary, or just sage and garlic. Make a heavy cushion of foil to fill in the center of the crown while roasting. Place on a rack and roast in a 325° oven, allowing about 25 minutes per pound. Baste from time to time with white wine.

While the roast is cooking, wash 3 pounds sauerkraut, and place it in a kettle lined with strips of bacon. Add 1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, a few juniper berries, and enough white wine to barely cover the sauerkraut. Bring to a boil and simmer. A half-hour before the roast is done add a Polish or a garlic sausage to the sauerkraut and let them cook together. When the roast has reached an internal temperature of 170°, remove it to a hot platter. Discard the foil and replace with paper frills.

Remove the foil from the center, fill the center with the sauerkraut, and garnish with slices of the sausage. Serve with boiled parsley potatoes and a salad of Bibb lettuce and grated beets. Drink a fruity Alsatian wine such as a Gewürztraminer.

Roast Smoked Loin of Pork

Smoked pork loin is a great delicacy. When purchasing it, ask how much cooking it needs. Some types require a full 30 minutes per pound at 300°, while others, because they are hot-smoked and therefore practically cooked, require mere reheating, or about 12–15 minutes per pound at most.

Treat a smoked loin exactly like a fresh loin of pork. Baste with white wine or sherry during cooking. Remove from the oven, and allow to rest for 10 minutes before carving. Serve with buttered new potatoes and the sauerkraut given in Crown Roast of Pork with Sauerkraut.

Quick version of classic brown sauce is made with canned bouillon.

SAUCES FOR ROASTS

Quick Basic Brown Sauce

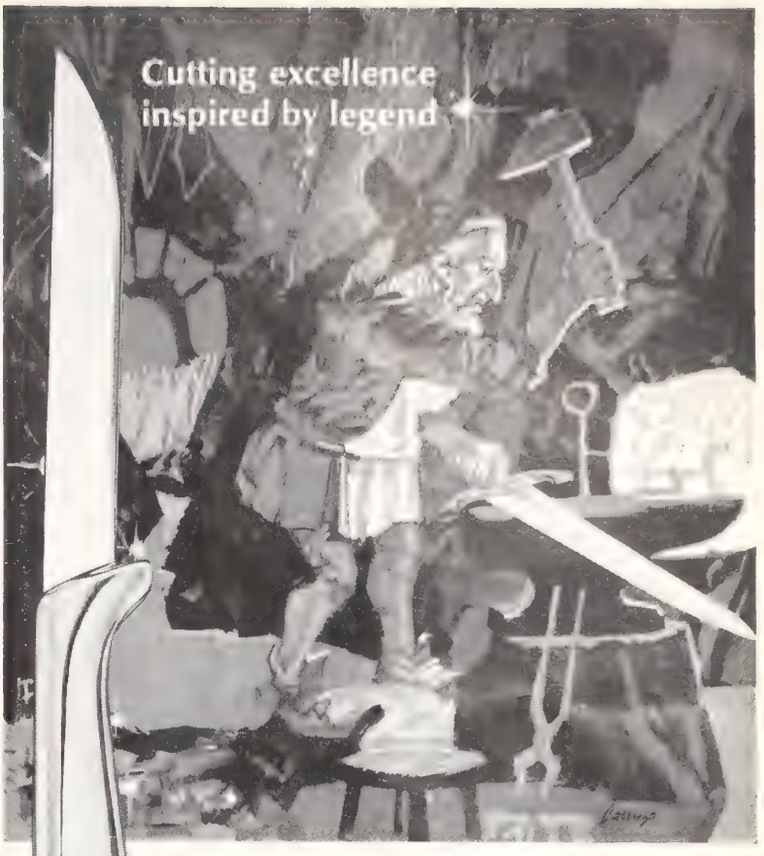
3 shallots or scallions, finely chopped
3 tablespoons butter
1 cup red wine
10½-ounce can beef bouillon (not consommé)
1 teaspoon tarragon
Pinch thyme
Salt, pepper
Beurre manié

Sauté the chopped shallots or scallions in the butter. Gradually add the wine and bouillon. Let it come to a boil and add the seasonings. Cook down for a few minutes. Add beurre manié to thicken to taste. Let simmer for a few minutes and strain.

Bordelaise Sauce

Add a little poached marrow to the brown sauce. Correct the seasoning and add a touch of chopped parsley.

Sauce Diable



Add 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard and a few dashes Tabasco to the brown sauce. Stir well.

Sauce Périgueux

Add finely chopped truffles to the brown sauce.

H&G's gourmet's guide

Quick Gourmet Recipe of the Month

Filet of Beef
with White Truffles

5-6-pound filet
Butter
5 white truffles, grated
Freshly ground black pepper, salt

Cut the filet in 6–8 slices, not quite through, and butter each one well. Grate the truffles and add an equal quantity to each cut. Tie the filet well and rub it with softened butter. Also rub freshly ground pepper into the filet.

Roast on a rack in a 350° oven for about 45–50 minutes, or until the meat thermometer registers 125°. Baste several times with butter or the pan juices during the roasting. Salt to taste. Serve with pan juices and fondant potatoes. Drink a Vosne-Romanée.

Note: This particular filet can be done with a barding of fat trimmed from a cooked Virginia ham. The result is a delicious change from any roast filet.

If you want good coffee, you need a clean pot.

Ever see a cleaner 3-year-old pot?

The Corning Ware® Electromatic percolator is made of smooth non-porous Pyroceram® brand ceramic. Stale coffee oils simply can't adhere to it. So there's never anything in the pot to spoil the taste of the coffee. The percolator pictured above is owned by Mrs. R. B. Chamberlin of Horseheads, New York. It's been making her coffee automatically, perfectly, for nearly three years. Keeps her coffee hot without re-perking, too. It's a great gift. HOW TO TAKE CARE OF BRICK

As ancient and familiar as brick is, few modern householders are experienced in the care of a brick floor in a living room, a brick wall in a kitchen, or a brick counter adjoining an outdoor terrace barbecue. Here are a few of the problems that may arise with various types of brick construction, and the solutions recommended by the Structural Clay Products Institute.

Crumbling mortar

There are two things that can go wrong with exterior structural brick: The foundation may settle and cause zigzag cracks in the mortar, or the mortar itself may become flaky and start to crumble away. Mortar is mixed "on the job" and the mason may have been careless about the recipe. Whatever the cause, crumbling mortar joints should be "tuck pointed"—that is, the old mortar should be cut out to a depth of $\frac{3}{8}$ inch to $\frac{1}{2}$ inch and replaced with a newly mixed mortar. In a short time, the new joints will weather to match the old ones that are still sound.

Painted brick

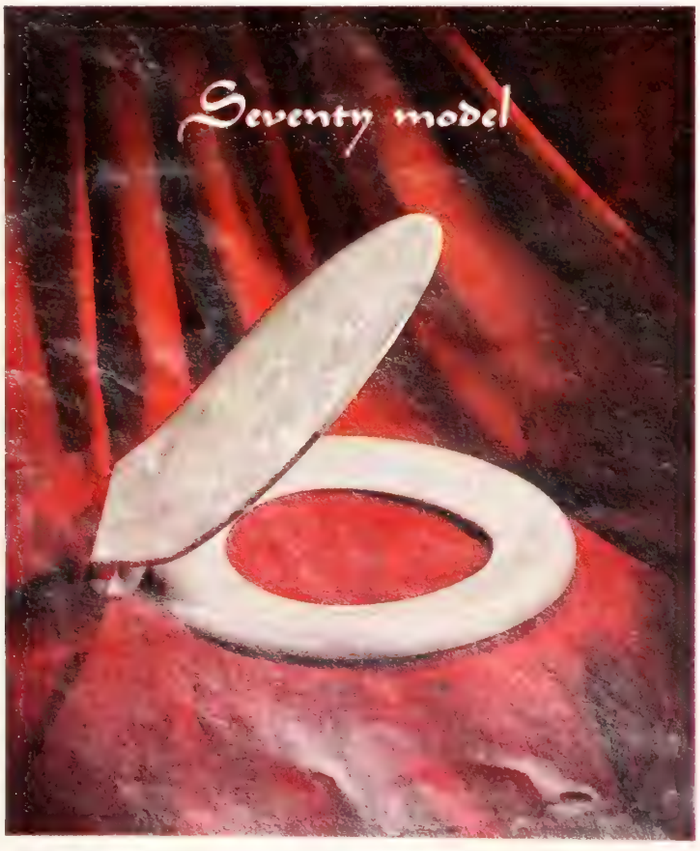
Some people like to paint brick once, then let the paint slowly weather away. Others like to keep brick well covered with paint, periodically renewed. No matter which effect you prefer, make sure only a masonry paint is used. This is a water-based cement concoction designed to let the brick breathe through the paint coating. If brick is completely covered with a paint that makes a watertight film, moisture can build up behind it and cause damage.

Outdoor cooking areas

Brick used around cooking pits or barbecues may become fat-spattered, and since brick is porous, staining may result. Rain and sun will wear away or even out most stains. But if some persist and disfigure the face of the bricks, scrub with a stiff bristle brush, a good scouring cleanser, or clean wet sand. If your outdoor fireplace is partially protected by an overhang so weather can't bleach out stains, you might have the cooking and serving areas cleaned every few years by a professional steam-cleaning service.

Fireplaces

The inside of the chimney should be checked every year or so, to make sure that excess carbon deposits don't block the draft. This is particularly important if you cook in your fireplace, for layers of grease can build up inside the chimney and cause a fire. The brick facing around an old fireplace is often covered with smoke and grime which can be removed with a stiff bristle brush and scouring powder. Stains may also be removed by sprays available at masonry supply houses.



New brick fireplaces are usually cleaned immediately after they are built. The mason uses a weak solution of muriatic acid to remove any mortar stains or chunks of mortar which have been spilled and hardened on the face of the bricks. These lumps are removed with a wooden paddle; metal tools should never be used in contact with acid. But acid cleaning is recommended for red brick only. In the case of light pink, buff, or gray bricks, it is best to check with the manufacturer as to the most appropriate solution to use, since the wrong preparation may leave a greenish stain that will not come off.

Brick floors

Like brick walls, brick floors need to breathe in order to prevent a build-up of damaging moisture. If you are installing a new brick floor, be sure to ask the mason whether or not there is a vapor barrier underneath the brick. If there is, you can safely seal the floor with varnish or shellac. If there is no vapor barrier—or if you are not sure—it is better to finish the floor with a low-solid-contact wax. Some people use nothing at all—simply keep the floor clean by sweeping.

Interior walls

In a new house, brick walls need no finish once they have been cleaned by the mason. If old brick walls have been exposed by knocking off a plaster coating, some bricks may have to be replaced and the joints "tuck pointed." If the wall is really disfigured and stained, steam-cleaning or a light sandblasting may be necessary. Once the wall is clean, it may be left as is.

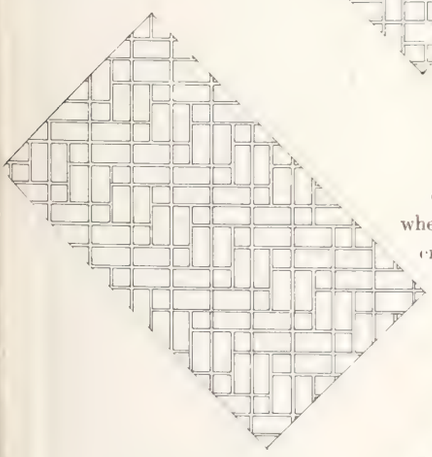
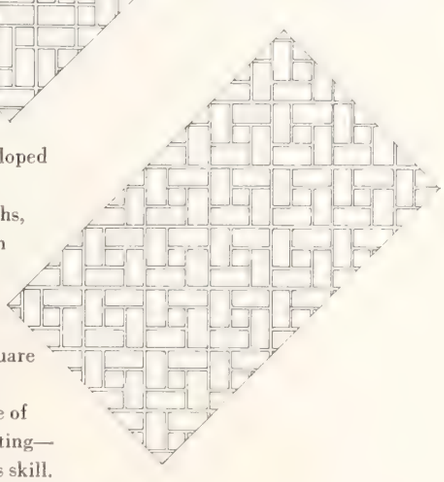
HANDSOME PAVING PATTERNS



Too often the repertoire of the bricklayer is limited to a few patterns. To help break this unnecessary design barrier in a time of brick renaissance, we have chosen a sampling of patterns that illustrates brick's versatility. Based on classic European pavings, some are over 2,000 years old, but still provide fascinating designs for today's floors or terraces.



Portuguese herringbone is based on old Roman pattern. Small squares were originally glazed tiles; now half bricks are used.

Dutch parallel, right, works well as an interior floor. Strong lines show up even when partially covered with rugs or furniture.

Spanish multidirectional pattern, left, has an op art quality. Especially interesting when used on a large terrace with enough space for many repeats, design seems to change direction as you walk around.

Roman square, right, developed over 2,000 years ago, is well suited to small hallways, baths, and kitchens because pattern is repeated every 12 inches.

Belgian pinwheel, below, needs a minimum 12-foot-square area to show off design. Costs more to install because of unusual amount of hand-cutting—the true test of a bricklayer's skill.

The monastic sleeping area beyond the walnut cabinet-divider has been enlivened by a new acquisition—a brightly painted sculpture (of automobile body scraps) by John Chamberlain.

"The kitchen" — a counter-high line-up of equipment and storage — has been augmented by a second oven and by a mobile white-plastic-topped walnut cabinet (at right). The latter usually stands directly behind the glass front wall of the house, but a few of the sliding fabric panels screen it from view.

Originally, the bathroom, enclosed in the round brick chimney, was wholly lined with cork except for the concrete floor of the open shower. A few years ago, the walls were resurfaced with leather tiles and the floor with mosaic tile, turning the whole room, in effect, into a shower room. (The guest house bathroom has been supplemented by a sauna designed by the architect, Reino Aarnio.)

In the guest house, the sliding panels of fabric serve not only as curtains, but as screens for bookshelves and storage. Like the fabric panels in the main house they operate on four ceiling tracks —a custom-installed device that is now available as a standard fixture (page 255).

The doors of the guest house, too, are full floor-to-ceiling height. Leverlike door pulls were specially designed and custom-made, but similar pulls have since become standard. MUSIC IN TWO DIMENSIONS IN A 21-INCH BOX

by Faubion Bowers

Lewis Freedman, the new, young, and earnest director of New York's educational television Channel 13, or WNDT, likes to tell the story of how, recently, his station showed some silent film classics. The only musical accompaniment —unobtrusive, he thought—was a piano. Nonetheless, complaints poured in by telephone: "The music's too loud." During a later rerun, when the operator suggested to discontented callers that all they had to do was turn their sets down, fresh complaints came in: "The picture's too blurry." The point of this story may be that people are funny, but its moral is more profound: how closely eyes and ears are related, and how much they depend on each other in the process of understanding.

Anyone in the theatre knows from experience that if the lighting is dim, audiences cannot hear, and if the lights are too glaringly bright, a slight cough on stage is magnified; a pin drop is a little explosion. At the Metropolitan Opera House, where so many of the scenes and sets are dimmed—predawn castle turrets, dungeons at midnight—the problem of relating and proportioning sight and sound is tricky. For all the bellowing, even the best singer needs illumination to expand the resonance of his voice.

The old-fashioned way of attending a concert was to close your eyes and nod your head in time to the music. It was thought, at least when I was growing up, that you could hear better if, like the blind, you saw nothing. Certainly today, the sight of a Sviatoslav Richter, the great Soviet pianist, closing his eyes in the middle of a sometimes difficult, sometimes emotional passage gives credence to this idea. Radios and records teach us differently. Most people, you surely have noticed, turn on or put on music and, with nothing to watch, leave the room. They begin their household chores, settle down to a good book, initiate conversation, or meditate on their own faraway thoughts. There is far less inattention in a concert hall where the experience of music is direct and immediate, thanks to the assist of the eye. Most people do not turn on TV and leave the room. It would seem that Richter's eye-shutting is not in the last analysis to hear better, but to concentrate on performing. It increases his tactile sense, so that the feel of the keys in his hand is more secure and more finely attuned. The externalization of his inner hearing is not distracted by the sight of how he is doing it. In short, for the listener-viewer, the eye is a guide, focus, and interpreter for the art of musical understanding.

In no other field is the relationship between eyes and ears more vital than in the field of television. The potential of TV's multitudinous channels for disseminating classical music and revealing it properly to mass rather than select audiences is enormous. An artist such as the pianist Vladimir Horowitz, for instance, could fill a concert hall nightly from now until summer, but his one program scheduled for television this winter will reach more people in an hour than he has played to in all his career. Maria Callas has neither the voice nor the strength left to appear as often and in as many places as her fans may clamor for her, but television has become the answer to these demands. Like it or not, TV is both creating a cultural boom and responding to it.

This is especially true of educational television in all its divisions, subsidiaries, and ramifications. National Educational Television, or NET as it is abbreviated, is a producing and distributing house of culture with a hundred major-city stations scattered throughout the nation and dependent on it for their cultural material. These stations are linked into Eastern, Western, and mid-Western networks, and reach, it is conservatively estimated by pollsters, 90 per cent of TV's total watching public, or roughly 6,000,000 viewers.

The technique of televising music is, in a sense, the art of teaching viewers how to listen. To present music as a visual experience, that is, to show sound, is a discipline requiring superb expertise. In the early days, when serious music was first and very, very rarely televised, mistakes were many. The viewer was often imprisoned by a stationary camera in a fixed position. Producers believed that all they had to do was to put the camera in the equivalent of a good seat and just reel away. But TV is a substitute experience by its very nature; its life is the action of the camera. Occasionally in the old days some producers attempted a more adventurous approach. While the trumpets in the Eroica symphony blared away, the camera showed us the boom boom boom of the tympani. The effect was incongruous—not that the drums weren't there, but it was misemphatic to show them at that particular moment. At other times the camera would wildly scan one section of the orchestra while a melody sang sweetly off in another section. Eventually it would be located, only to be taken up by another set of instruments in another spot. And the camera's search would resume. Happily, these gross errors are gone, along with their era. But much still remains to be done toward focusing the eye of the camera on the sound of the music.

The camera vs. the eye

The basic question is, how can you put music in a box—"a breadbox," as David M. Davis, NET's director of Boston Symphony telecasts, calls it. The box renders everything flatly two-dimensional on an approximately 21-inch screen. As for sound, alas, the reproduction of the 4-inch speaker does not compare favorably either to high-fidelity stereophonic records, or radio. To say nothing of the difficulty of cramming a hundred-man orchestra into this space, the natural barrier between TV and music is demonstrated by the modest example of the string quartet—only four people with their music stands and instruments. Surely these should fit and pose a minimum of problems. The technicians assure us otherwise. If you establish the camera shot from a spot comparable to the ideal center seat of a concert hall, all you get on the screen are the music stands. The players' faces appear when they lean forward or towards one another for the closeness required by ensemble niceties. But even in this fleeting togetherness, the formal black and white of their dress photographs poorly, as does the unfortunately harsh glaring white of the music paper on the stands.

On educational TV, producers with a high spirit of experimentation solve much of this problem by using four cameras, one to each instrument. Thus the camera achieves what the eye can do in a concert hall: watch the playing intimately and follow the technique of individual instruments in detail. An expert cameraman directed by a genuine musician such as Allan Miller, for instance, can actually exceed the perception of the average eye and ear at a chamber music concert. Television can give a greater sense of closeness, can underscore a melody, a harmony, a nuance which might be missed if the eye were not directed to it and thus able to help the ear to hear.

Televising music is, obviously, different from televising sports, for which the camera goes where the ball goes. The ball of music is more elusive, and the rules lack Hoyle. While the fundamental principle is, "where the tune is, there goes the camera," this rule is best observed in its breach. The camera cannot move with every trill and frill of elaboration, nor should it be fixed for long stretches in a single spot. Either way, eye muscles begin to ache with strain, and the ear becomes confused. But the camera can rightfully move to a player's hands, face, instrument, ensemble, and even to the players of an undermelody. The camera captures a highlight, or underscores a soft, unnoticed halflight. The need for a camera closeup on an actor's face, so that you can better hear what he is saying and better see what he is feeling, has always been accepted. Now this co-ordination between camera and performer is being explored in music. So seriously is the problem being faced that one branch of music, opera, holds an annual "World Congress for Opera on Television." This year particularly, the interpretive function of the camera and its relationship to both music's meaning and its performance are being exploited. TV's illumination of music—paralleling perhaps the psychological advantage of lip-reading, even to those with normal hearing—is rapidly turning into an art.

The human factor

One conflict remains: the performer himself. With TV cameras stationable anywhere in any number, the frontal, concert hall type performance is too static. Ultimately musical performers will have to be trained in the type of performance called for by TV, much in the same way they now take stage deportment and practice their bows and gestures. Educational TV has already begun to make inroads on the blandness of give Sydney a great modern building of world renown.

Another aspect of the second Sydney is the terraced hous of the old inner suburbs which architect Walter Gropius consi ered the city's architectural treasures. Most, were built fro about 1880 onwards, and embellished with balconies rich in ca iron lace. Verandas and balconies had become popular in Au tralia during the eighteen thirties and forties and had led to widespread use of graceful cast-iron columns, balustrades, a railings brought over from England as ship's ballast—and American travelers today, reminiscent of New Orleans.

Once despised, the old houses in the inner suburbs of Pa dington and Woollahra are now being cherished and restored. like to walk through Paddington or around The Rocks, whe there are old streets of houses with cast-iron lacework and t rounded windows and simplicity of the late Victorian perio Fortunately, some of these lovely buildings will be preserved the plan to redevelop the area.

While some Australian cities had to cultivate their beaut Sydney had beauty thrust upon it. The Harbour is a gre drowned valley whose steep sandstone ridges and rough boulde strewn troughs are blanketed with eucalypts. Suburban hous have been restricted mainly to the tops of the ridges and to t seaside escarpments. There are still masses of wild bushland an a richness of animal and bird life. This unique and enforc union with nature has influenced the design of the better mode houses. The steep slopes, the vistas of blue water and feather topped eucalypts, are as integral a part of the house as the wal and roofs and rooms. The same integration is seen in the garde themselves, in the mingling of the indigenous and exotic. Eve spring, Sydney is the Azalea City, and its showpiece is the 20 yard-long Azalea Walk in the Royal Botanic Gardens. The lan scape design of the 60-acre Royal Botanic Gardens on the D main, with their century-old buttressed trunked Moreton B figs, is a legacy from Lachlan Macquarie's wife, Elizabeth, a admirer of the English landscape gardener Lancelot (Cap bility) Brown. The wide splashes of green lawn and curvi walks were planned to beguile the eye and feet to the rugg foreshores of the Harbour.

Australia's Capital

Canberra, the Federal Capital, 160 air miles from Sydne is completely different from any other Australian city. Lik Washington, Chandigarh, and Brasilia, Canberra is a planne city. Designed by the American architect Walter Burley Griffi who won an international competition in 1912, it preserves muc of his original concept of three central axes with throughway Intelligent use has been made of trees, broad lawns, wide drive and water: a created lake now bisects the city.

Although Australia's cast iron is perhaps the most varie and imaginative in Sydney, it is also a distinctive feature the later cities of Melbourne and Adelaide. Melbourne's inn suburbs are still clustered with cast-iron decorated houses an terraces built from 1860 to 1890. Linden in St. Kilda is a joyo essay in filigree iron lace on a house of simple lines. Como Toorak, with its Georgian-influenced form and veranda an iron-balustraded balcony, is even more beautiful.

Both Melbourne and Adelaide were laid out on the popul gridiron plan. This gave Melbourne spaciousness, fine stree such as Collins, and a splendid boulevard, St. Kilda Road. B the plan also gave equal emphasis to every street, so that, lik most Australian cities, Melbourne lacks a civic focal point.

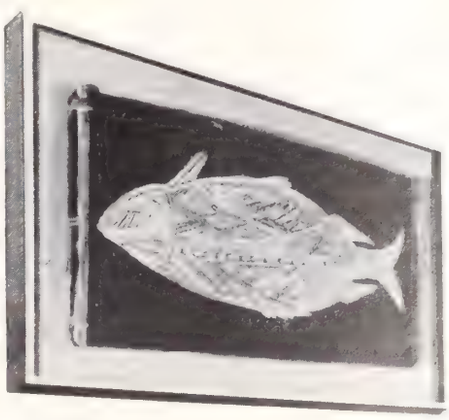
Adelaide, by far the most charming and eye-pleasing

Australian cities because of its wide tree-lined streets and the homogeneous character of most of its public buildings, was one of the first cities to be planned with a green belt. A green wedge of park land, divided by the River Torrens, separates the city from the suburbs. With a population of only 600,000, Adelaide is still a city to walk in.

The tree-lined boulevard of North Terrace shelters a wealth of Victorian public buildings, and the colonnaded and shuttered historic Ayers House. Only a short walk away is North Adelaide with its early Victorian buildings. But it is the late Victorian houses, ranging from the subtly restrained to fantasies and follies, that give the city its special flavor of gaiety.

Adelaide has hot summers, and its gardens resemble those of the French Riviera with the emphasis on bougainvilleas and succulents. (Melbourne, on the same latitude in the Southern Hemisphere as San Francisco is in the Northern Hemisphere, has a cooler climate that favors deciduous azaleas and rhododendrons.)

Almost as typical as the blue gums and Sydney red gums in Australian gardens and bushlands are the acacias (wattles) whose cascades of perfumed blossoms range from the palest cream to the richest orange. Many lovely native flowering shrubs either grow wild or are increasingly cultivated—waratahs, hakeas (or needle bushes), bottle-brushes, leptospermums, Grevilleas (spider flowers). Some of the most beautiful are the delicately petaled members of the boronia family—the boronias proper with four starry pink or white petals and the ruelike fragrance, the bell-like correas, the wax flowers with five petals, and the zierias with four.



Australia's cuisine

You can eat well in Australia and drink the uniformly good dry red and white wines of a century-old industry. The fish, oysters, crayfish, prawns, scallops are first class. In a dozen Sydney hotels and restaurants you can order a bouillabaisse as splendid and intriguing as that of Marseilles, as well as fish such as John Dory and pearl perch prepared and sauced in the manner of Brittany and Normandy. Queensland mud crabs Creole style are a gourmet treat which all visitors should try. Steak Diane originated in Australia.

You can also buy paintings in Australia, and by overseas standards the prices are low, even for works by such world-renowned Australian painters as Sidney Nolan, Russell Drysdale, and William Dobell, the distinguished leaders of a vigorous school whose works are regularly shown in the capital cities. Works by some of the younger and less well-known painters are exceptionally good buys. So are the totemic paintings on bark by Australian aborigines which are eagerly sought here and abroad. They are priced all the way from $5 to $150 or more. Aboriginal art has some similarities with (Continued on the next page)

In another mood, bijou terraces of Victorian houses in Woollahra combine wrought iron with gingerbread trim on roofs.

Australian aboriginal bark paintings with the motifs taken from nature make unusual and interesting wall decorations when sympathetically framed. Best of the aboriginal work comes from Arnhem Land in the far north.

bushman art—the same verve and spontaneity. The approach is primarily intellectual: the artists applying the ochres, pipe clays, and charcoals are not concerned so much with the decorative and beautiful as with the invisible world of their sacred myths. At the same time, only artists who have quickened to the grace of a leaping kangaroo or the nervous, high gait of an emu could capture them with a few simple lines.

You will need to be somewhat cautious, however, in buying aboriginal art. Inevitably, there has been commercial corruption of some of the art of Arnhem Land, the 34,000-square-mile reserve in the far North that is the source of the best bark paintings, although work from Oenpelli, Grotte Eylandt, and Milingimbi has been only moderately affected. Yirrkala, also noted for carved wooden figures, shows more changes, but good work still comes from there.

In addition to bark paintings, you can buy other aboriginal works such as boomerangs, spears, bone vases, didjeridoos (drone pipes), and grass baskets. But don't bargain on getting a genuine return boomerang or a stone axe: they are rare hand-made artifacts. Four sources for bark paintings and other aboriginal handicrafts that I can vouch for are the Aboriginal Museum and Art Gallery at Darwin; the Methodist Mission, Milingimbi, Arnhem Land; the Church Missionary Society, 93 Bathurst St., Sydney (Oenpelli and Groote Eylandt barks); and the Department of Aboriginal Affairs, 132 Grenfell St., Adelaide. Geoffrey Spence of the Darwin Museum supplies museums all over the world, and will try to meet your requests. Alan C. Fidock, the school teacher at Milingimbi, is also very helpful and represents an outstanding artist, Malangi.

Browsing through the junk shops, you may occasionally discover some early colonial cedar furniture, Georgian silver, copper, and pewter, but the greatest shopping rewards are for the lovers of Victorian furniture and other antiques. Somewhat easier to ship home are the plates, salad bowls, ice buckets, salt and pepper sets made of attractively grained Australian woods. Blackwood, mulga (an acacia) mountain ash, silver ash, and Queensland maple are among the finest woods used for these purposes as well as for contemporary furniture.

I usually advise my friends from overseas to buy Australian opals. They come in polychromatic variety with meteorlike gleams of red, green, yellow, orange, and milky blue. The black opal from Lightning Ridge in New South Wales, finest of all, has a dark heart which throbs with fiery color. Opals cost from about $23 a carat to $230 a carat for the now scarce black opal. Opals from Coober Pedy and the greenfired stones from Andamooka—both in South Australia—are growing in popularity.

Australian semi-precious stones such as petalite, chalcedony, agate, jasper, rhodonite, amethyst, prase, rose quartz, bloodstone, fossil wood, and topaz are set in bracelets, pendants, pins, and cuff links. Golden-lace agate, an unusual opalized agate from southern Western Australia, is a mustard-yellow opaque gem with a black spider-web pattern. Fossil wood, from 150,000,000 years ago, has interesting graining, ranging from pale straw to dark chocolate brown. Baroque jewelry from the better shops is a must for anyone with an urge—or an obligation—to return home with things Australian.

Australia, as Australians frequently complain, is not tourist-minded. The discoveries have to be made by the discriminating. But, perhaps, the country is all the more rewarding for that.

LAWRENCE WELK WITH BOB RALSTON AT THE THOMAS CELESTRITY

In our opinion no electronic organ compares with the Thomas," says Lawrence Welk.

We use a Thomas on our ABC Television Show, and also the Hollywood Palladium. And I have one in my home," Mr. Welk likes Thomas best. We think you will, too—when you see how easy it is to play. Yes, play. Even if you don't read music. How? With Color-Glo. Just press a button. The keyboards light up to show you which notes to play. You'll be playing a tune in just 15 minutes. Chords and all. You'll like the fun Thomas brings to parties and the way it brightens family life. You can add a Thomas to your family for as little as $12.25 a month, after normal down payment. Choose from 34 models in a wide range of furniture styles. Every model carries a 5-year warranty on tone generator boards—heart of the Thomas. Your Thomas dealer is listed in the Yellow Pages. For a free brochure, write: Thomas Organ Company, Dept. 112, 8345 Hayvenhurst Avenue, Sepulveda, Calif. Subsidiary of Warwick Electronics, Inc.

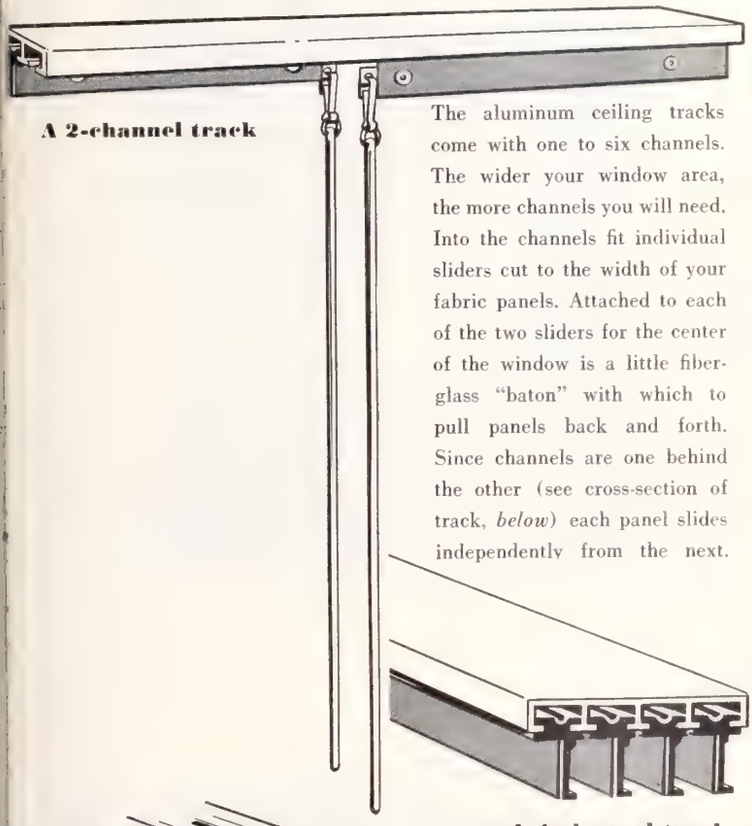
privacy, and darkness, control of temperature, the total pliancy of all surfaces to their bodies. If these placentalike conditions are lacking, they resort to the artifices of medications, ear plugs, masks, or vibrating machines to sink into a precious oblivion. By day, the automation of modern comfort makes us grow increasingly impatient. With electronic ovens, thermostatic heating, frozen TV dinners, dehydrated soups, and the headache pills that work "fast, fast, fast," the gap between the want and its fulfillment becomes continually narrower. Although the maturity of the individual has always been measured by his ability to wait for the fulfillment of his desires, technology seems to be dragging the human race in the reverse direction, back towards a level of infantile impatience. Technology conspires to bring us back to that ultimate state of comfort: a womblike condition in which our desires are perpetually foreseen and constantly fulfilled, in which our space is instantly contoured to our needs.

And that formidable client, the American woman consumer, is modeling her commodities on increasingly female principles. I sat in my Eames contour chair the other day and read advertisements which praised a latex-foam mattress "with air-buoyant comfort that adjusts instantly to your every curve"; a stretch bra that "breathes with you for greater comfort"; an electric iron "shaped to contour a woman's hand for greater comfort." How far can we go in our search for curved, maternal space? One anthropologist predicts that the rational end for the human race, in its search for womblike comfort, is to live suspended in water.

Search for uniqueness

Comfort for All was the title of one of our most popular women's publications at the turn of the century. "Uniqueness For All" would make a fast-selling title for a periodical in the late twentieth. The most novel aspects of contemporary American comfort are the revolts against its mass-produced anonymity and the search for distinction, personality, and character. This ironic twist in the history of a word is an inevitable result of our leveling process. For the luxuries of an elite—be they bathrooms, frigidaires, automobiles, air travel, or hi-fi's—are fated in a democracy to become the comforts of the masses. And many of the commodities which are being distributed to millions in the United States today, like color television, are so extraneous to our physical well-being that they are not really comforts but luxuries. We find ourselves in a paradoxical position: although our nation still has poverty pockets tragically devoid of the most basic commodities, the motto of our present aspirations is no longer "Comfort for All," but "Luxury for the Many."

The phrase "comforts of home," which the nineteenth century so idealized, only retains its desirability in the 1960's if it is qualified by an important new set of adjectives. We are being told that kitchens should be "inspiring," that bathrooms should be "dramatic," that housewives should be "creative," that bath towels should be "an experience in luxury," that bedspreads should be "boldly-textured and color-clued to you," that rugs should be "intriguing" and that vinyl floors can look Moroccan, Roman, or Aztec. We are urged to buy "uniquely aged" whiskeys, kitchen-sink fixtures with "a sculptured look," cabinets with "rich heirloom quality," refrigerators decorated by pop artists for "a custom air," Fords "quieter than Rolls-Royces," and we are told to feed our pets "the aristocrat of cat foods." Comforts having been depersonalized by mass-distribution, luxuries have become the goal of our aspirations. Our simplest conveniences, be they nylon coats, polyethylene gloves, vinyl floors, or acrylic plates, strive to emulate such old-fashioned "distinctive" luxuries as furs, leather, marble, mosaic, tile, alligator, tortoise shell and Meissen china. We can look forward to the day when technology will make the democratic, simulating comfort undistinguishable from the aristocratic, exclusive luxury, and when the metamorphosis of one into the other will be complete.

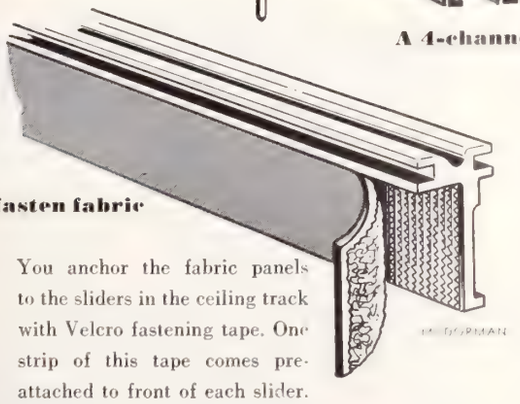


The physical sense of the word "comfort" is shifting in its value because its physical demands have been fulfilled and taken for granted. North Americans have achieved that state of informality, equality, and physical well-being which the Enlightenment thinkers envisioned and which gave the word its materialistic meaning. We have been called "the affluent society," "the overweight society" and perhaps our greatest luxury is the luxury of waste. We advocate abundance, excess, and gigantism. As the largest amount of surplus grain in history rots in our warehouses, the posters on our highways scream out: "Longest Motel Beds in Town! Triple Scoop Malteds! All the French Fries You Can Eat! Two Foot Long Hot Dogs! Hamburgers Bigger than in Texas! We are not comfortable anymore but luxuriant, like those plants which eat more than they need to thrive and to reproduce. And this luxuriance tends to make us extremely *un*comfortable. One of the most sought after conveniences of the 1960's, a luxury which will become a mere comfort in a decade, is the at-home sauna bath in which Americans strive to sweat off the excesses of their collective abundance.

King Cyrus of Persia traveled accompanied by four cartloads of boiled water from his sacred spring. Louis XIV, who may have understood comfort less well than any other great monarch of history, preferred to be accompanied by his crystal chandeliers. And a recent census states that 19,000 Americans have equipped their cars with telephones. The physical objects of comfort have always been relative. They are more relative than ever today, when we have reached a state of uncomfortable luxuriance.

This may be a good time to return to the older and less materialistic sense of comfort. A more lasting sense of it is to be found in the common parlance of this most hospitable of all nations, where the phrase "make yourself comfortable" is interchangeable with the words "relax, make yourself at home." It is also found in such simple and poignant words as "she makes me feel comfortable . . . she makes me feel uncomfortable." For comfort is a psychological attitude, an atmosphere of acceptance, ease and love created only by individuals. Luxury can be bought. Comfort must be created. Luxury can be pure matter, the substance of which the shelter is built, its rareness or its quantity. Comfort is, in part, the harmonious proportioning of the space inside that shelter. In even greater part, comfort is foresight; it is created by an individual who can foresee the needs of other persons in that shelter before their need is even felt. The lasting sense of comfort is a spiritual one, as it was before the eighteenth century, thriving on thoughtfulness, instinct, hospitality, and warmth. And I suspect that it is created by the nest builders, by the females of the species. Males provide the materials, be they humble or luxurious. Females organize them into Comfort.

HOW TO COMPOSE A NEW WINDOW LOOK



The window treatment on page 207, composed of sliding, floor-to-ceiling fabric panels, is wonderfully easy to copy. Hung from a channeled ceiling track, the panels pull out one after the other to cover the window with a smooth mural of fabric. When you draw them back, one panel conceals all the rest. And since there are no folds or pleats, you need only half the yardage required for curtains. The best materials are tightly woven fabric, heavy shade cloth, or woven wood strips. The panels hang free and are weighted with an aluminum bar inserted into the bottom hem. This new system, called "Paneltrac" and made by Kirsch, may be ordered through a number of stores throughout the country. For the name of the dealer nearest to you, please write to: Kirsch Company, Sturgis, Mich., 49091.

A 2-channel track

The aluminum ceiling tracks come with one to six channels. The wider your window area, the more channels you will need. Into the channels fit individual sliders cut to the width of your fabric panels. Attached to each of the two sliders for the center of the window is a little fiberglass "baton" with which to pull panels back and forth. Since channels are one behind the other (see cross-section of track, below) each panel slides independently from the next.

A 4-channel track

How to fasten fabric

You anchor the fabric panels to the sliders in the ceiling track with Velcro fastening tape. One strip of this tape comes preattached to front of each slider. You then sew the complementary mesh-faced strip to the top of each fabric panel. To hang fabric panels, press the tapes together. To take curtains down for cleaning, peel tapes apart.

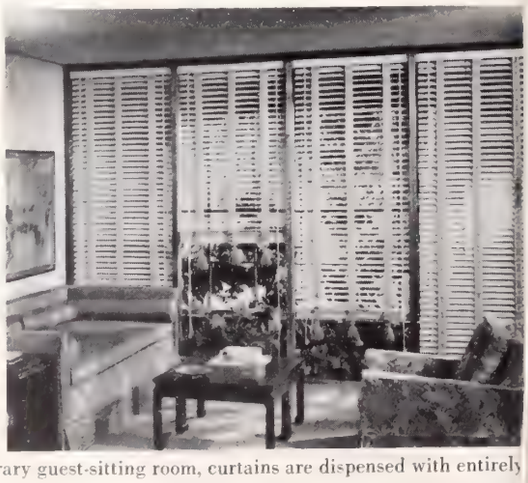
Timeless Traditions for Windows

THE VENETIAN BLIND

Marco Polo is credited by most historians with having had the wit to include the Venetian blind among his travel trophies. Just where he found it remains his secret—Persia, probably, since the Italians call the blind persiana, and the French, jalousie à la persienne. This country knew it first in Colonial Williamsburg, where a local upholsterer advertised blinds "same as the Governor's." And same as the governor's, they are unsurpassed today as devices for controlling light, privacy, and ventilation simultaneously. Ordained by function to be classically simple, they are a quiet complement to any kind of curtain you can think of.



Amid eighteenth-century grandeur

In the Governor's Palace in Williamsburg, Va., the parlor blinds are painted the deep cream of the walls on one side, stained the color of the floor on the other: pull-of-a-cord chiaroscuro. Elegant partner for gold curtains, green and white braid covers blinds' tapes.

Sole adornment for a modern glass wall

In a contemporary guest-sitting room, curtains are dispensed with entirely and refreshingly. The whole glass wall is hung with a solid bank of blinds with white slats, their functional tapes hidden beneath red and white braid woven in a geometric pattern and finished off (like so many bell pulls) with an Edwardian flourish of fat red tassels. Braid by Conso

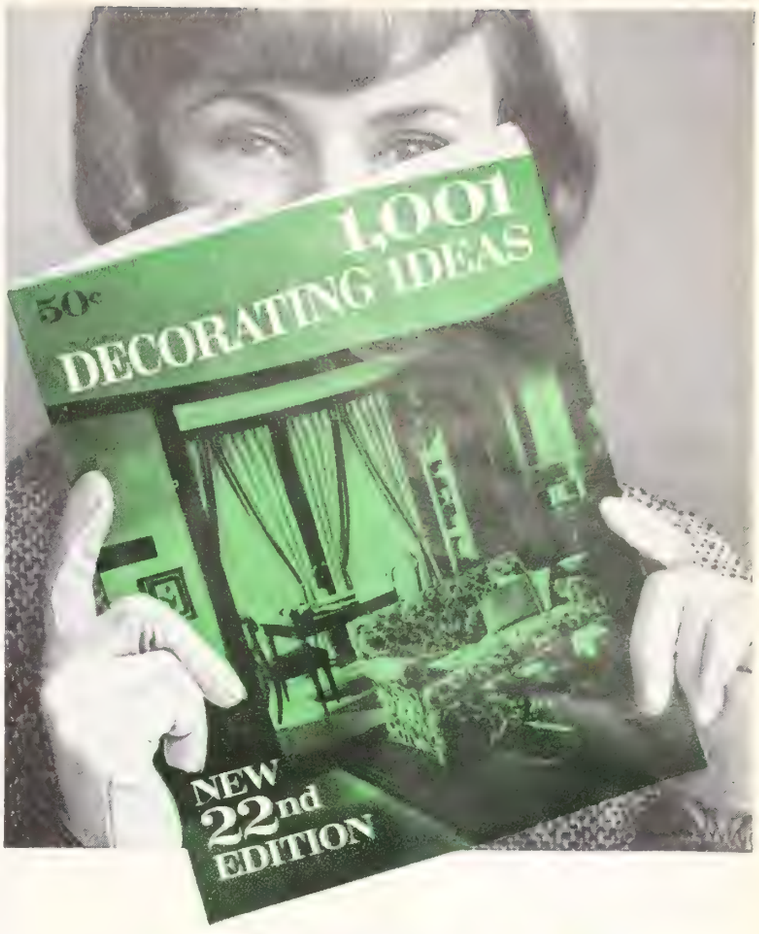
Cloak for a king-size window

The newest type of Venetian blinds employs slats only one inch wide and—instead of tapes—Dacron cords. The result is an easy-to-clean, non-sag, lightweight blind, prettily textured, yet strong enough to span a wide window. Interior design: JoAnn Barwick for Mediterranean Towers.

Sun screen for a kitchen

Old Sol is barred from a curtainless kitchen by a gay little blind that has green and white slats inside, all white for the neighbors.

A disappearing act



Nocturnal privacy in a flowery living room is assured with white Venetian blinds—at the corner windows. By day, the blinds can be pulled into a tight accordion, snug against the top reveal of the window, quite out of sight behind the curtain-headings.

In splendid tandem with shoji panels

Spectacularly exploited, Venetian blinds prove how grand they can be in a room with an Eastern rhythm. A vast glass wall is hung, alternately, with white blinds and shoji panels for a blend of light—filtered through the panels, controlled by the blinds.

WOODLAND CLEARING

A whole landscape is transformed by what is a subtly simple, level, earthen terrace in Mr. and Mrs. Harry O'Hara's Memphis, Tenn., woods. The little pool and trickling waterfall are part of the terrace's charm (and the landscape's drain system against the rainy season). Many shrubs were added as naturalistic underplanting by J. Duke Moody, L.A.

SCULPTURE TO MARK THE WAY

TREE FOR CONTRAST

F*ew ornaments improve a landscape more fittingly than a fine plant. But to do the job properly, more than just any old plant is required. On this page are two examples in Boston's Arnold Arboretum. The three trees above are all hornbeams, but the one at left, Carpinus betulus, is outstanding even among its kin.*

RALPH BAILEY

TREE FOR RARITY

T*his weeping pagoda tree looks as uncommon as it actually is. It is but one of a number of special forms of Sophora japonica, most of which flower much more freely than this rather slow-flowering variety that produces white flowers in late summer. Before you shop for a rarity, remember that virtuoso placement is often half the landscape battle.*

Digger's moon: Both time and temperatur are right for turning the garden earth

The earth revolves around the sun at a speed the seasons cannot quite keep up with. Thus the air temperatures in October, which should be similar to those of late February and early March, are actually more like April's. The ground temperatures lag even farther behind the season, so that the soil a spade's depth below ground is as warm as in June—and as mellow. These conditions are almost ideal for the practitioner of gardening's oldest rite—digging. Conditions are right for the digger because the air is cool enough to keep the sweat out of his eyes as he works, and because most of the other urgent chores about the garden have been done. Days are shorter, to be sure, but full moons come closer together this time of year, and the leisurely practice of moonlight digging can be one of the year's great pleasures.

Conditions are right for the garden bec, ise the earth is usually still light, mellow, and r enough to be worked without risk of harm e to the digger's back or to the soil's own phy al structure. (The risks of substantial damag t soils worked in early spring may be great, ie- cially if they are oversupplied with clay part es or are waterlogged.)

What part earth-turning plays in your y ly program, spring or fall, depends, of course on what kind of garden you have. How you d e turning depends on your gardening bent, ur physical condition, and the nature of your gro d. Some gardeners, for good and sufficient rea s. have the digging done for them and their int st in this discussion will be academic and seder ry at best. For others, the choices of methods ld

The relatively primitive heavy shovel, with footrest on handle and arrow-shaped blade, has given way to the modern fork, shovel, and straight spade.

Differences in digging tools are just a matter of time

Digging hoes, new and old, depend for their effectiveness on balance and the pitch of the blade as well as the length and shape of the handle. New models differ only a little.

The years have touched these tools lightly: all in use when Mr. Jerome Eaton brought them f Europe recently (sickle at left is still on the mark implements are as varied as the tasks to be done.

It is assumed that all major lawn construction has already been done. If for some reason it has not been, then heavy commercial tilling is probably in order. Able-bodied and well-conditioned amateurs can rent big tillers in many areas and operate them effectively with a little practice. Generally, however, big jobs are best contracted for. Growers of vegetables may well wish to do their fall earth-turning on the same basis—except that small vegetable patches are scarcely worth hiring a tiller for. Ground that has been long under cultivation, and is now friable and of proper texture, should be reworked as little as possible except to "fold in" long-range supplements (compost, for instance) or turn under cover-crops (say, winter rye sown in late summer).

New land—that is, land in sod or heavy cover-crops—can stand a more vigorous turning than earth currently well cultivated, but even such land is best left rough, to be broken down by winter frosts, or to hold and absorb winter rains without impairment of soil structure or harmful erosion.

The manual tools of the digger's trade have not changed fundamentally over many centuries. Some of the spades and hoes, opposite page, are still in use in Europe and other parts of the world. Modernization has come both in material and design—the kind of steel used for the cutting heads, the turning and shaping of the wood handles. And with tools both old and new, the principles of use, below, remain the same. As you can readily see (as if you didn't know), the digging tools are of two main sorts: the (Continued on next page)

The modern digging fork is especially useful for turning and bashing meadow and sod land.

RALPH BAILEY

The modern but ageless grape hoe, with its practical and graceful handle, is perfectly designed to cut, slice, and draw anything from loam to sod.

Part mattock, part grape hoe, this superbly balanced tool is light, sharp, has a 4-foot handle, and is capable of precise handling.

Shape up now for luxuriant shade next summer

Summer dryness, sudden storms, insects and disease can seriously damage your trees. Now's the time for trained Davey experts to prune away branches that are split, broken or lost to summer dieback. Dead branches are prime breeding places for disease.

Also, heavy, weakened old limbs should be cabled and braced against winter winds and crushing ice storms. Their loss would deprive your trees of their natural shapeliness—and deprive you of their rich shade.

Insure luxuriant spring beauty of your trees with vital Davey deep-root feeding. Our experts will use long-famous inorganic Davey Tree Food for normal soils, or the new Organic Tree Food developed by Davey to rejuvenate worn-out and clay soils. And be sure to give your lawn its fall feeding—with Davey-Green Lawn Food. Keeps lawns greener longer!

spade tools, which require a thrust and levering stroke, with the unturned earth as the fulcrum, and the hoe tools, which call for a chopping and drawing stroke. Of the two, most people seem to regard the spade as the most adaptable to turning earth, both new sod and old loam. For deep heavy work, that may be correct. But in the average garden, if there is a limit to the depth of cut required and to the physical strength to achieve it, a digging hoe may well be the best tool to use. Historically, the hoe has had the edge over the shovel since plowing was first done with a crooked stick.

Best of the sod busters, in our opinion, are the four-tined digging fork, the round point shovel, and the digging hoe or mattock in that order. The best of the loam turners are the square-bladed spade, the digging hoe, the pointed shovel, and the fork. Whether your spades, shovels, and forks have long or short (with D-shaped grip) handles is purely optional and arguable. Some gardeners are strong advocates of the one; an almost equal number favor the other. One thing is certain: the heavy steel-strapped nursery spade is not for earth turning, but it is indispensable for cutting big earth balls and opening holes when transplanting trees and shrubs, also for rock work, where it is convenient to have a spade that can double as a crowbar without snapping the handle.

The digging hoes (the true mattock or grub hoe is too heavy for clean sod turning) have mid-length handles, shorter than the ordinary light garden hoe, longer than the pick mattocks. One excellent digging hoe, with a curved blade 6 or more inches wide at the beveled cutting edge, bears the somewhat medieval name of grape hoe. Also called an eye-hoe, because the tapered handle fits into a large tapered eye in the blade, this type has a slightly curved handle that is oval in section and marvelously shaped for the human hand. The blade is heavy enough to cut through turf or root-free sod (when filed sharp), yet light enough to swing easily with but little practice. An even lighter and sharper type (see also page 261) has a long straight handle, two blades of differing width, and a balance as fine as a tightrope walker's. The trick, of course, is to take it easy. Watch any good professional tool-wielder and you will see what we mean.

The same easy-come, easy-go policy is even more important with the shovel clan. Lean on them with your foot, lever the load loose, then, and only then, lift and turn as required. And don't hurry. You will finish the job quicker, enjoy it more (yes, we mean enjoy) if you savor its fine points without haste.

A word about the selection and care of digging tools: As to quality, buy only the best. Digging tools—all of them—have cutting edges and are made of tempered steel. Some have thinner blades, finer tempers than others. But all are cutting tools that should be kept as suitably sharp, job for job, as your favorite secateurs. All the digging tools except the pressed steel bargains have beveled edges. The bevel should be retained. Wheel grinding is seldom suitable for such implements: the most serviceable sharpener is a mill file, stroked against the bevel and at only a slightly steeper angle than the bevel itself. File lightly before each substantial use.

More serviceable even than a sharp tool is a clean one. Cleanliness is especially important to spades and shovels, with which the down stroke can be made immeasurably more difficult if the blade has been pitted by rust as it surely will be unless the whole blade is wiped clean and lightly oiled after each use.

One eminent plantsman, who learned his digging in the barracks-like bothies of England, always kept a pair of old trousers hanging just inside the door of his tool house. He used one leg to wipe earth and mud from his digging blades. He used the other leg, impregnated with machine oil, to keep the blades rust-free. Even a woman gardener, nowadays, should be able to make a similar arrangement for keeping tools in shape.

remove paint with paint remover, grease with a good strong synthetic detergent or benzine, gum with turpentine.

Marble

Most experts feel that this splendid material should be treated with the same respect you would give to any fine furniture finish. When cleaning marble (with detergent and water), it is best to wash, rinse, and dry small areas at a time rather than allowing the whole floor to remain wet for a long period. Also be careful not to scratch the marble with the metal parts of the mop. If you have a floor with problem spots, you will find excellent Marble Cleaning Kits at building supply stores.

One thing to be especially careful about in connection with a marble floor is wrought-iron furniture. It should never be left on the marble floor of an outdoor terrace exposed to the elements since rust stains "bloom" under iron. Sometimes these can be eradicated by a rust stain remover—there are several on the market, but the safest bets are those sold by marble companies.

Polishing marble is not for amateurs. It requires patience, hard work, proper materials, and a thorough knowledge of the material. Call an expert.

Terrazzo

This type of masonry, composed of approximately 70 per cent marble chips and 30 per cent Portland cement, combines both porous and non-porous materials, so stains or potential stains should be attacked as soon as possible. The best methods are as follows:

Fresh grease: Use an absorbent material such as chalk, blotting paper, or cotton.

Gum, lipstick: Use solvents such as carbon tetrachloride (keep your head turned away and be sure there is plenty of ventilation).

Ask the experts

Manufacturers of masonry materials and several companies specializing in the installation of masonry floors also have marvelous cleaners for specific situations. If you would like additional information about how to care for your particular floor, write to one of the following associations:

water requirements, and on the complexity of the plumbing work involved. (It is always recommended that a conditioner be connected to your plumbing system at a point which ensures the full benefit of both hot and cold conditioned water throughout the house—in kitchen, laundry, and all baths.) Under normal circumstances, the cost of a fully installed system should run between $375 and $450. Manufacturers point out, with considerable basis for their claim, that a good water conditioning system will in fact pay for itself over the long haul through everyday savings in detergents, fuel bills, plumbing repairs, and the replacement of clothing and other fabrics.

Several leading manufacturers offer a plan through which a water conditioning service can be leased, with the option to buy later. (In some cases, manufacturers will apply toward the total purchase price a part of the rental already invested.)

Like any other sound mechanical improvement in your home, a water conditioner has both personal and practical assets: It provides you with water as close to the ideal as possible for all purposes, and at the same time it increases the dollars and cents value of your house.

Notes for October Gardeners

Ere the "long sobs of autumn's violins" are heard, let us haste to police the yard

First weekend

Reverse bicolors. It is easier to associate Paul Verlaine with the mournful accents of the declining year than with daffodils—but let the one remind you of the other. It will soon be too late to get the daffodils of your choice, not because the autumnal sobs are getting longer, but because supplies of choice narcissus varieties are getting shorter. On the assumption that your staple ordering is all completed (planting also?), we suggest a kind of daffodil for special accent planting that may be new to you—and may also still be in stock: the "reverse bicolors." The narcissus varieties so named are all either of trumpet or large-cup form, and their distinguishing characteristic is a perianth that is or becomes darker than the trumpet or cup. In other words, for the followers of classified lists, the reverse bicolors are generally listed under classes I*d* and II*d*. So in addition to the all-yellows, the all-whites, and the ordinary bicolors with white perianths and colored centers, you have a few—still a very few—of a fourth group. The latter consists of some of the most dramatic, romantic, and costly of all daffodils. The minimum price is likely to be around $1 per bulb. The maximum (which only the wild-and-woolly fancier would pay), around $18 each. But once you have grown some of these (always in a featured position, since they are too valuable to mix with others where their effect might be lost), you will be well and truly hooked. Start with a half-dozen of the least expensive. Then another year it will be easier to invest more (invest is a reassuring verb).

While a few varieties show strongly "reversed" colors as soon as they open, most tend to start with flowers of a more or less uniform shade, with trumpets exhibiting perhaps a deep-toned edge, but generally fading as the flower reaches its peak. In other words, the d group of the division may be closer to the a group before its trumpet color fades out.

Whatever they are genetically, the reverse varieties will fascinate you. Here are three. Try 'Binkie' (pale yellow, with a white cup, and easily the least expensive of all), 'Spellbinder,' a lemon and white trumpet only a little more costly than the first, and 'Nampa,' which costs only twice as much as the second. You could get half-a-dozen each of these three for what many a husband or wife would willingly pay for a spouse's birthday present.

Second weekend

The impeccable ball. In spring, you can get away with sloppy gardening techniques. The year is on the rise: plants are eager to grow; mistakes on the gardener's part tend to be soon hidden by the garden. Not so in autumn. Mishandled plants go into winter mishandled, and they may not recover. This is especially true in the case of transplants. And most especially it is true in the case of plants dug with a ball. The whole purpose of digging and moving plants with an earth ball around the roots is to keep the essential roots from losing contact with the soil and thus drying out before growth can be re-established in the new location. Theoretically there is only one way to dig a plant with a good earth ball and that is with a good earth ball—cut clean and unbroken in mass (unshaken, as plantsmen say). But many a hastily dug and badly loosened ball is moved in spring without critical harm to the plant, which has all the seasonal benefits going for it. In autumn, though, the same careless digging would almost certainly prove disastrous.

Avoid such practices as chopping rather than excavating around the root ball, and prying rather than cutting it free. Follow the rules. Dig a clean trench around the ball—at least a spade's width for small balls, big enough to stand and work in for deep balls. Before you excavate, make sure roots have been cleanly cut around the perimeter of the ball (thrust your spade down first, parallel to the ball's circumference and at right angles to the root to be cut). Then, having cut—and undercut the root mass until you are sure no straggling root is going to hold and tear the earth loose as you lift, rock the ball back, push a half-rolled square of burlap beneath, rock from the opposite side, and draw the rest of the burlap through. Now, tie the burlap tight, lift the ball by the ball, not the plant stem, and reverse the whole process in the new hole. Complicated? Not especially when you get used to it.

Third weekend

Mr. and Mrs. Clean. Everybody, including us, talks about the importance of an autumn clean-up in the garden. And most people—not including us—take that to mean spraying the roses and raking and burning the leaves. More important than most ordinary sanitation procedures (spraying, taking leaves off the lawn and, heaven forbid, burning them) is the simple business of removing the litter that has surely accumulated in some of the right places and almost all the wrong ones. Under shrubs, for instance, the ordinary litter of the garden year will do no harm—may even remain to break down and nourish the plants, to protect the shrub roots, and to conserve moisture. And clean leaves will do little harm until they mat down (and, on lawns, stifle the grass). But the danger even with presumably clean vegetable litter in the autumn is that many a malign insect may take shelter beneath, and many a harmful spore or bacterium may find a protected place in which to multiply, or rest, or both. So, spray, by all means, when spraying is in order. Roses, for instance, must be sprayed if black spot is to be controlled—although mildewed leaves will have done their worst. All leaves infested with black spot must be removed, lest this most damaging of all rose diseases be given a safe winter harbor. Dead leaves around clumps of day-lilies will do the day-lilies no harm whatever—may, indeed, provide some protection against frost heaving of newly set plants. But the same protective leaves may perpetuate whole races of slugs another year—which may mean a decimated crop of pansies or petunias in next summer's borders.

Peonies, of course, are notoriously susceptible to a form of botrytis blight that prevents opening of flower buds. The spores of this infection spend the winter in and on dead peony stalks just above ground level. If you cut off all dead peony foliage just below ground level (being careful not to harm new bulbs), the risk of infecting new growth next spring will be considerably minimized.

Squat, stoop, and squint: that is our motto. The rest is largely at your finger tips.

Fourth weekend

Upstaging plants. If your greenhouse is ideally oriented, your main axis runs north-south (for an even-span type), or the principal bench space receives full south or east light (lean-to type). In either case, if you erect staging, or stepped-back shelves, facing the east-south quadrant, you will make possible the maximum use of winter daylight for the largest number of plants. But what of the remaining space in the greenhouse between such staging and the sunlight? To settle simply for the single level of a bench is scarcely enough. To erect another staging area, similar to the first but to sunward of it, would be to misarrange the plants on the new staging (they would slope the wrong way) and cut the light from the plants on the first staging. Besides, just one layer of plants, so to speak, would leave a great gap overhead. A single shelf above the bench is not satisfactory either.

Here is a suggestion: Suspend plants (true basket plants and others that could prosper in hanging pots) at various vertical levels and at various horizontal points above all sunward benches, and above head height over all aisles. Leave enough space between plants so some sun would always slope through (remembering that winter suns shine at a very low angle) and would always provide moving light as well as points of shadow for all plants below and beyond them. This arrangement may give your greenhouse a lopsided look, especially if it is an even-span structure with the ridgepole running north to south. But most greenhouses are unhealthily traditional in the disposition of benches and plants anyway. A little variety will improve the general effect. Improve the condition of the plants, too, for that matter. Improve the condition of the winter gardener—which is perhaps most important of all.

Reading notice: Frederic P. Lee has revised his superb and definitive Azalea Book (Van Nostrand, $12) to the assured joy of all lovers of the last word. A Washington, D. C., lawyer, Mr. Lee is one of the finest amateur plantsmen in the United States, and his book, considered with the current editions of Clement Bowers' and David Leach's separate massive works on the proper rhododendrons, covers this large combined genus like a geodesic dome. Mr. Lee's is no how-to-do-it book, by the way—even though it and Mr. Lee could tell you how.

Anna N. Griffith has done in A Guide to Rock Plants (Dutton, $5.95) the same kind of service Patrick Synge offered in his Complete Guide to Bulbs a couple of seasons ago. The only drawback to both is that both were written in and for the British Isles first of all. But so thorough is the rock-plant coverage, so up-to-date its taxonomy, nomenclature, and orthography, so knowledgeable its text that no American rock gardener can afford to be without it. An unoriginal testimonial, this, but true. And the illustrations are handsome and useful.

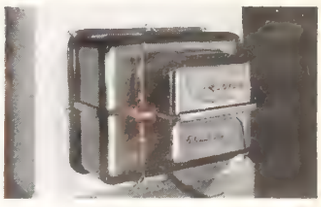
them off the scene on so many Saturday nights, giving them picnic fare, and leaving them on their own for so long. We explained that we thought for once we'd give them a treat.

David smiled. "That's funny," he said. "Because we like those picnics."

"Yep," agreed John. "We have fun those nights. We stay up very late and we play games."

"They're okay," Mark admitted. "Once we get upstairs, no one interrupts us or asks us to do anything."

"But let's do this again some time." David put in quickly. "This was lots of fun! You fooled us in the beginning!"



And they had fooled us in the end. The hypothesis we started with wasn't valid—they didn't resent our customary policy of reserving Saturday evenings for adult parties. More important, we learned that our children like having time "for children only" as much as we enjoy time "for adults only."

As a result of that evening, we made several resolves, including these: serve more spicy foods now that the children are getting older; expect them to be good company at dinner (and, now and then, let manners take care of themselves); interrupt their play less often; let them know more frequently that, despite daily provocations, we do enjoy their company. After all, they do make delightful guests: they arrive when you want them to, hardly notice any dust you have overlooked, and get along fine with the dog.

the concert hall style. On several stations, with tact and perseverance, producers are leading artists to a more fluid type of showmanship, increasing their awareness of what close-ups can mean to their projection of a musical passage. Gradually, by mutual co-operation between cameraman and artist, the magic of contact between performer and auditor will be heightened.

Meanwhile, this is altogether a splendid season for those looking forward to serious music visualized in the home. For those who have never had a chance at the big time of great music and superlative musicians, the schedule for 1965-66 is real cause for celebration. For those who have shied away from music on television for fear of its being boring or inept, this season is a good time to give it another chance. You will be surprised at how effective the televisation has become toward helping you achieve a greater understanding and in enhancing the sheer pleasure of good music well performed.

This season's agenda

This year NET with its vast subsidy from the Ford Foundation, is presenting a Festival of the Arts with dazzling emphasis on important music. One of its two most astonishing highlights, well worth watching for, will be Leopold Stokowski conducting the works of Charles Ives—that strange turn-of-the-century American genius, an insurance man by trade, whose music was more modern than any of his contemporaries, and whose radicalism and dissonance are still not too easy to accept. The other is the first televisation of the French musical miracle play. This primitive religious opera is 700 years old, the oldest real music extant in the Western hemisphere.

Educational TV also has independent stations, such as New York City's WNDT, that dispatch Videotapes of music to other stations on request. Under the guidance of Lewis Freedman ably assisted by ex-conductor, Allan Miller, the program for this 1965-66 musical season is stunning. One innovation has been to make this "Beethoven Year," the first of a series of "one-composer" years in which a total view of a single musician will be presented. Every aspect of Beethoven will be treated, from his personal letters—picayune and querulous—to the self-sublimating, divine last Quartets. Educational television, already within its short span of existence - WNDT is three years old, NET only twelve—has expanded indelibly the value and beauty and grasp of music. The master classes with Lotte Lehmann and Casals, the fireside recitals where a master musician stops and explains why he does what he does and how, the close-ups of great stars such as Leontyne Price, all are famous among cognoscenti and the would-be knowledgeables of music. This year the coverage increases in bulk, in quality, and most of all in technical excellence.

The commercial channels, too, are lining up a series of musical spectaculars, and CBS heads the list. Pablo Casals, the cellist, will be profiled again, this time at the age of eighty-nine years. So will Isaac Stern, that man with a violin and a way. A 90-minute evening at Lincoln Center's Philharmonic Hall with soprano Victoria de los Angeles and Leonard Bernstein has been readied, and Bernstein again will be instructive, informative, explanatory, and decorative with his orchestra and piano and personality at the New York Philharmonic Young People's concerts. David Oppenheim, clarinetist de luxe, will serve as a musical guide, taking Stravinsky back to all his European haunts—to where he lived and composed his familiar masterpieces; to where Sacre du Printemps was booed and hissed; to where his version of "The Star-Spangled Banner" (banned in Boston) was first played—with a finale of Rudolf Nureyev dancing the original Petrouchka. Of course, Ed Sullivan and NBC's Bell Telephone Hour can be counted on to present the latest musical furors, be they tomorrow's Callas, Sutherland, Van Cliburn, or an as yet unknown, unheard sensation.

Television, however antipathetical to music it may once have seemed, is providing us with more this year than ever before in its history. And it is presenting music with ear-and-eye intelligence.

INCORPORATING LIVING FOR YOUNG HOMEMAKERS

KORAB

On the cover: Delectable mounds of real apricots and a selection of antique ruby glass shed their warm harvesty glow on the black marble top of a Biedermeier chest in the Tucson, Ariz., living room of E. F. Sanguinetti, director of the Tucson Art Center. As in so many of the adobe-walled rooms of the Southwest, the humble and the precious, the secular and the religious are offhandedly mixed: the set of bronze and marble urns (the handle of the third just visible at the far right) are eighteenth-century French, as are the ruby hurricane shades on the English Sheffield silver candlesticks. The nineteenth-century ruby vases, English, too, once belonged to Mr. Sanguinetti's friend, actress Edna May Oliver. Peering at them from above: cherubs at the base of a late seventeenth-century Peruvian painting of the Virgin. The hand with the heart tucked among the apples on the Sheffield compote is a relic from a Spanish colonial woodcarving. The apples themselves, to preserve their smoothness and shapeliness, have been coated and polished with paste wax. For a wider view of the decorative exuberance that awaits visitors to the desert states of Arizona and New Mexico turn to page 254.

Fill the control box of Fieldcrest's new Thermaflo Blanket. Set it. And it circulates warmth like the astronauts' newest space suits.

Now you can sleep under a completely new kind of blanket. One that does everything the finest electric blanket does, but without any wires in the blanket.

Instead of electricity, water is circulated through a network of tiny capillary tubes for even, all-over warmth. Without weight. The electricity stops at the control box.

Once you set the control, the temperature doesn't vary so much as an umpteenth. And there are no hot spots—no matter how you bunch it, crumple it, twist it. What's more, you can wash it, fold it and store it just like an ordinary blanket. Of 100% virgin acrylic in antique gold, tawny beige, mist blue, ice pink and verdian green. Sizes for twin, full, full with dual controls, and king-size beds.

Another Fieldcrest exclusive.

Maybe we should have called this one the space blanket.

Fieldcrest makes blankets, automatic blankets, bedspreads, sheets, towels, bath rugs and shower curtains. 60 W. 40 St., N.Y.

The Salton Hotray® will keep meals hot before you serve them, as you serve them, after you serve them, so you can come back for seconds that taste like firsts.

Hot foods should be eaten hot. But seldom are because food cools off too swiftly. So not only do seconds always taste different than firsts—but sometimes, even firsts don't taste like firsts if you don't serve them instantly right out of the oven.

Putting foods back in the oven doesn't help. Because then they overcook. And dry out.

Then there are other problems with hot foods. Such as people coming late. Or people eating the same meal at different times—at breakfast, for example, when people rise at different times.

The Salton Hotray will relieve you of all these problems. And many more. Once and for all. Three meals a day. Every day in the year.

How the Salton Hotray works:

Hot foods lose their flavor in two principal ways. Overcooking. Or cooling off and drying out. Either way, they lose most of what they ever had. A Salton Hotray prevents both of these because the heat of its exclusive radiant heat, shatterproof glass panel is thermostatically controlled to a point right under the cooking point. So the food on it neither continues to cook, nor to stand around growing cold.

The most accurate way to explain the Salton Hotray is this: The Salton Hotray puts foods into a state of suspended animation. Thus, they neither progress. Nor regress. But stay exactly as they were when they came off the stove.

If you're the one who prepares the food at your house then, hopefully, the information you now possess will add years to your life. Enjoy them.

Shown, 'Fiesta,' $19.95. Hotray electric food warmers from $5.95 to $59.50. For catalogue and Gourmet recipe booklet, write to Salton, Inc., 518 E. 72nd St., N.Y. 10021. At these and other fine stores in U.S.A. and Canada. Hammacher Schlemmer, N.Y.; Wanamaker's, Phila.; Hall's, Kansas City; D.H. Holmes, New Orleans; I. Magnin, Calif., Portland, Seattle.

Royal Satin in Firenze® by Wallace.

Firenze is our name for hand textured sterling silver. It isn't new. We borrowed it from the craftsmen of 15th century Florence. But they never dreamt of Royal Satin. This is Firenze in its purest form—a tapered shaft of misted silver. A legacy of the Renaissance in the shape of today. Firenze. The genius of 15th century Florence is the 20th century genius of Wallace Silversmiths. For it was Wallace who introduced misted silver to this generation of brides-to-be. Dawn Mist. Evening Mist. ENGLISH IRONSTONE

Recently at an auction I bought this eight-sided ironstone covered dish. Although I have a number of ironstone pieces, I have never seen one like this. On the bottom is the mark I have copied. What can you tell me about this piece? R.C.J.—Casper, Wyo.

The diamond-shaped mark states that the design of your English ironstone dish was registered at the British Patent Office, London, April 16, 1858, by T. & R. Boote. Charles Mason of Land Delph first made and patented ironstone in 1813. The name came from the potter's mixture that contained iron.

TÊTE-À-TÊTE CHAIR

My satinwood loveseat was purchased in New Orleans, but I believe it was made in France because the name Poytois & Fix is on a faded label beneath the seat. Any information would be appreciated. M.L.W.—Topeka, Kan.

This is a Victorian tête-à-tête or conversation chair dating about 1865-1880. It was probably made in France, but the label may well be that of the upholsterer rather than the maker.

AMERICAN POTTERY MARK

Can you identify this mark, sketched from the back of an old stone china plate my husband dug up in our cellar? J.R.B.—Addison, Mich.

Your plate was made by Knowles, Taylor & Knowles, East Liverpool, Ohio. It was a large pottery in business from 1870 to 1900. Stone china was its mark for earthenware.

Time for a KitchenAid dishwasher.

If you're sick and tired of doing dishes—and who isn't?—it's time you got a KitchenAid dishwasher.

Why KitchenAid? For some very good reasons.

Start at the start. Take that load of dishes and pop them into a KitchenAid Superba VariCycle dishwasher. Both racks pull all the way out. There's a place for everything, from roasters and cookie sheets to dinner plates and glasses.

No need to pre-rinse dishes by hand. Select the wash cycle designed for the load (you have four cycles to choose from). The KitchenAid 4-Way Hydro Sweep wash action takes over. There's a 180° SaniCycle rinse for extra health protection. And an Automatic Rinse Agent Dispenser to help dry everything spot-free.

Now the dishes are done sparkling clean. And thoroughly dry. (Flo-Thru drying did the job, circulating currents of hot air around, over, and under every dish and plate and cup).

Dishwashing? It's a snap—with a KitchenAid dishwasher.

Don't let anyone switch you from the best. See your KitchenAid dealer. (He's listed in the Yellow Pages). Have him show you all the KitchenAid models and the Vari-Front panels designed to match your dishwasher front to your kitchen decor.

Isn't it time you got a KitchenAid?

Owens-Corning Fiberglas makes the Beta yarn, not the fabrics or the bedspreads

A Fiberglas* Beta* bedspread is so beautiful you'd never let anything happen to it.

But it's nice to know you can.

Accidents will happen, but a damp cloth will wipe it clean—if it's a Fiberglas Beta bedspread. Spill, spot, drip, drop—and relax. Fiberglas Beta bedspreads machine wash, never need ironing, won't wrinkle, stretch or shrink out of fit. Firesafe too. That's how Fiberglas Beta bedspreads stay as beautiful as they start—new and fresh-looking year after year after year. See them in leading department stores in your city.

When in New York City visit the Fiberglas Fabric Center at 717 Fifth Avenue. *Fiberglas and Beta are Owens-Corning's Trade-Marks

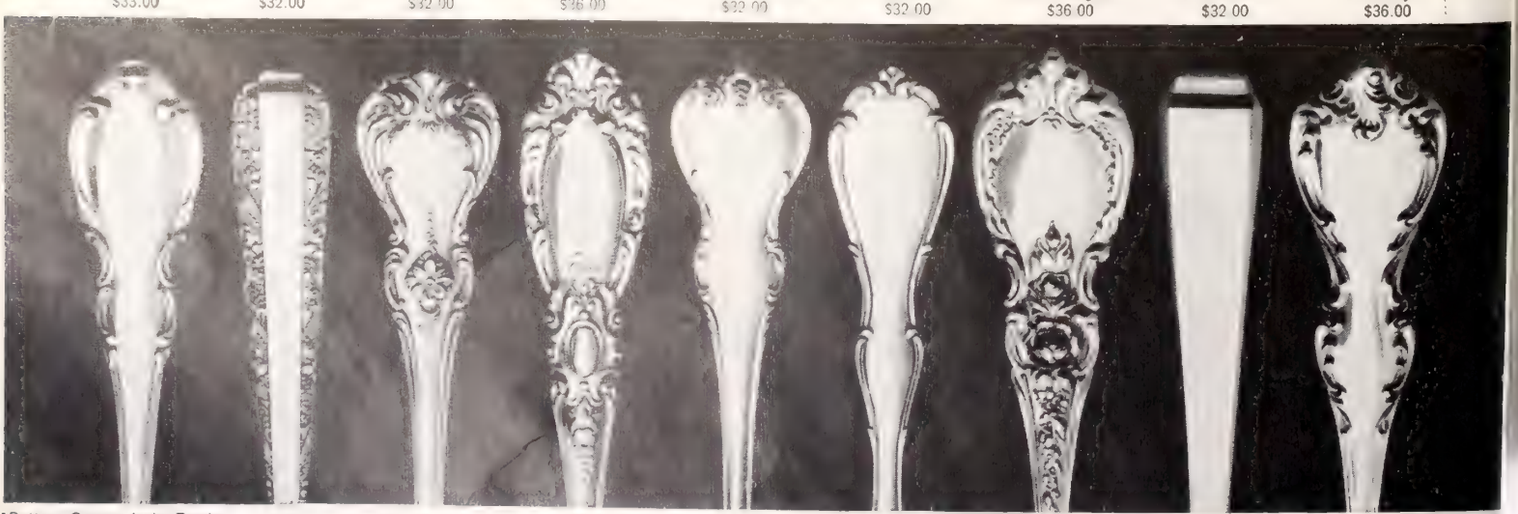
El Grandee®*, 4-piece place setting, $36.00

Towle made this sterling silver spoon yesterday.

(No extra charge for the 167 years of craftsmanship.)



ACTUALLY, the Towle silver tradition is over two hundred and seventy-five years old. It was born in Newburyport, Massachusetts, and Towle continues in the same place today. You rarely find tradition like that anymore.

That's why there's something extra in today's Towle sterling. You can see it. You can feel it. You can sense it. For, like its ancestors, every Towle piece is meant to be admired...and used. Use your Towle sterling for fancy dinners. Or family suppers. Put it in your dishwasher. Towle sterling is as practical as it is beautiful. (Use it regularly and it requires very little polishing.)

Take a good look at Towle before you buy. Study its varied elegance. Pick up a piece. Balance it. Examine its perfect design, its grace, its grandeur that could come only from the oldest silvermaking tradition in America; it dates from 1690.

But you'd better hurry. You've already missed 275 years of great silver.

AMERICAN EMPIRE CHEST

I was told this chest of drawers which was given to me as a birthday gift is about 200 years old. It this true?
G.M.—Roselle Park, N. J.

Your chest of drawers is typical of the American Empire period, so it could not have been made 200 years ago. It is a fine piece of cabinetwork dating between 1825 and 1835.

FRENCH MANTEL GARNITURE

Could you give us any idea of the approximate age and style of this marble and ormolu clock and matching candlesticks? The clock is unmarked. A.D.G.—York, Pa.

The style of your clock and matching candlesticks is unmistakably French. They were made either during the reign of Louis Philippe (1830-1848) or that of his successor, Napoleon III, who reigned from 1848 to 1870.

QUEEN ANNE HIGHBOY BASE

How would you describe this cabinet I have inherited? I was told it is an old Dutch lowboy. A.M.—Stillwater, N. Y.

We believe you have the base of an American highboy, Queen Anne style, 1720-1750. A lowboy of this period would be much smaller.

I would like to know the age and origin of this pipe with an armored knight on the bowl and castle in the background. The brass cap is marked F.B. R.W.—Benton, Ill.

The carved meerschaum bowl, brass cap, and wooden stem of your pipe indicate that it is German, dating after 1875.

GERMAN MEERSCHAUM PIPE

Can you date this bed from the headboard? The side rails have pegs along them. P.S.—Saint Marys, Pa.

It is an American Empire low-post bed, probably Pennsylvania Dutch, 1820-1830. The pegs held a rope lattice used as a bedspring.

Notes for the Hostess

BY DIANA BRYAN

When our children were little, we used to gather them and their friends together every autumn and put on a real Founding Fathers' feast, cooked the way it was cooked in the old days and served in an old-fashioned manner. Now that our children are older, they have asked that we do it all over again for the benefit of their contemporaries who have not had the pleasure of culinary nostalgia. This year, we are holding forth at our ski lodge—surely an appropriate spot, for it is situated on a Vermont mountainside with plenty of beds and board for a horde. I have already sent to Richmond, Vt., for a cob-smoked pork loin from Harrington's custom-cured hoods. Don is going to hand-turn it on a spit over a bed of coals. I'll make johnnycake with stone-ground corn meal which I order from Kenyon's at Usquepaugh, R. I. We will also have a crock of cider applesauce which is nothing more than four quarts of apples and two cups of sugar added to two quarts of sweet cider that has already boiled for twenty minutes. (Then I let the sauce simmer for two and a half hours more.) Succotash is another must. Squanto, the Indian interpreter who taught the Puritan women to make it, insisted that it should contain fresh pork, onions, and potatoes as well as beans and corn. So that's the way we do it. And since our forefathers liked plentiful fare, we are going to have all the side dishes: green tomato chutney, tomato relish, spiced currants, and rhubarb marmalade. For dessert, there will be maple sugar pie (actually, a maple custard baked in a pastry shell) and steamed blueberry pudding. Mulled cider for the non-drinkers and applejack for the hardier should be fit accompaniment for our traditional New England feast.

Much as I enjoy casual living, I am equally addicted to the grand life, too. Vivien Redfern's dinner party epitomized the latter. It was magnificent—the table a tour de force in understated elegance. Her tablecloth was Pointe de Venise lace, a treasure from her mother. But the really opulent point of departure was her Lalique crystal. For a centerpiece, she used her straight and curved jardinières filled with white violets. Her plates and butter plates were the Honfleur design—deep, typically heavy glass with an edge of raised opaque leaves. For water and wine, however, she used her simplest glasses (not Lalique) in order not to detract from the fabulous French crystal. Everything seemed to shimmer—subdued but breath-taking.

The Elissa Ingles gourmet sauces and nuts should, as far as I'm concerned, sit in everyone's pantry for instant haute cuisine. They are analogous to a fine piece of jewelry on a little black dress, turning something simple into something fabulous. I love the sauce vinaigrette made with olive oil—excellent with everything from asparagus and artichokes to roast lamb. Dollops of Ingles' rum and coffee candied pecans or orange curaçao candied pecans are very special on ice cream. And the apricotine dessert sauce with brandy can change store cake into fine pâtisserie. I order this brand from Bloomingdale's, New York.

Speaking of sauces, I have just made a note to serve chilled espresso coffee on lemon ice and have also developed an all-purpose sauce for fish and vegetables: herbs simmered in melted butter and folded into whipped cream, a frothy delight effortlessly made and needing no hard-to-find ingredients.

YOURS TO SAMPLE AT YOUR LEISURE WITHOUT COST...

A new way to get more out of good music —without having to study it

IN THE VIGOROUS CULTURAL CLIMATE of today, an increasing number of American families feel they are missing too much of the "buried treasure" hidden in the works of great composers.

Yet there are so many demands made on a busy family these days. How can one possibly also find time to master the meaning and use of a coda... fugue... triad... harmonic minor scale? Or learn to follow a symphony performance with the orchestra score on your lap?

Fortunately, there is another, far easier way to get more out of good music. There are many things you can learn about music which can deepen your enjoyment without requiring technical knowledge or study. You can steep yourself in the lore of music that adds immeasurably to your enjoyment of memorable recordings.

This is the guiding principle of a unique new confraternity of music lovers, THE VIRTUOSO CONCERT SOCIETY.

Privileges of membership

Approximately every six weeks, subscribers receive on approval a unique package which contains—first of all—a magnificent two-record Virtuoso Concert Album featuring one or more memorable performances by one of the most celebrated virtuosos of our time.

This alone would make membership more than worthwhile. The Concert Albums offered will enrich your permanent record library with consummate performances by such internationally acclaimed artists as Yehudi Menuhin, Otto Klemperer, Herbert von Karajan, Claudio Arrau, and Sir Thomas Beecham. Each album is carefully chosen to reveal the artist at the peak of his genius in a definitive performance which illuminates a familiar work with new insight, or opens the way to unexpected enjoyment of a neglected masterpiece.

The extra dimension of enjoyment

But the package you receive from the Virtuoso Concert Society goes far beyond this. With each two-record Concert Album you also receive a spectacular 9" x 12" volume, hardbound in beautiful gold-stamped black buckram to match your album. This beautiful book contains about a dozen fascinating articles related to the music, lavishly illustrated with photographs, drawings, period etchings and engravings, and brilliant full-color reproductions of great paintings. Its pages bring to life the exciting world of music, past and present.

You delve into the stories behind the creation and the performance of the music. You learn of the ideals, disappointments, struggles and achievements in the lives of the composers and virtuosos. You come to share the keen insights of renowned musicologists. You immerse yourself in the whole culture from which the music springs—the literature, the graphic arts, the intellectual ferment of the age.

Then when you listen to the music itself, you will experience emotional nuances you might otherwise have missed. You'll experience a richer flow of communication from composer and performer alike. You'll discover how rewarding it is to be an informed listener...able to listen appreciatively to and talk intelligently about the music you enjoy.

Find out free what it can mean to you

The best way to appreciate what this can mean to you and your family is to sample the first package free of charge.

The featured virtuoso is Yehudi Menuhin, playing with the Philharmonia Orchestra. You receive superb Angel recordings of two of his greatest performances. One is Hector Berlioz's Romantic Symphony for Viola, Harold in Italy, winner of Europe's coveted Grand Prix du Disque. The other is Ernest Bloch's supremely lyrical Violin Concerto in what one leading critic described as "a uniquely eloquent performance."

In the companion volume you will learn how Menuhin, the prodigy, began playing the violin at the age of 3, conquered Carnegie Hall at 11, withdrew from the concert world at 20, and was inspired by a Stradivarius violin to return and scale new heights of greatness.

You will learn that his historic recording of the Berlioz symphony is considered one of his greatest achievements. (For a lifelong violinist to switch to a viola has been compared in difficulty to a lifelong pianist switching to a piano with wider keys!)

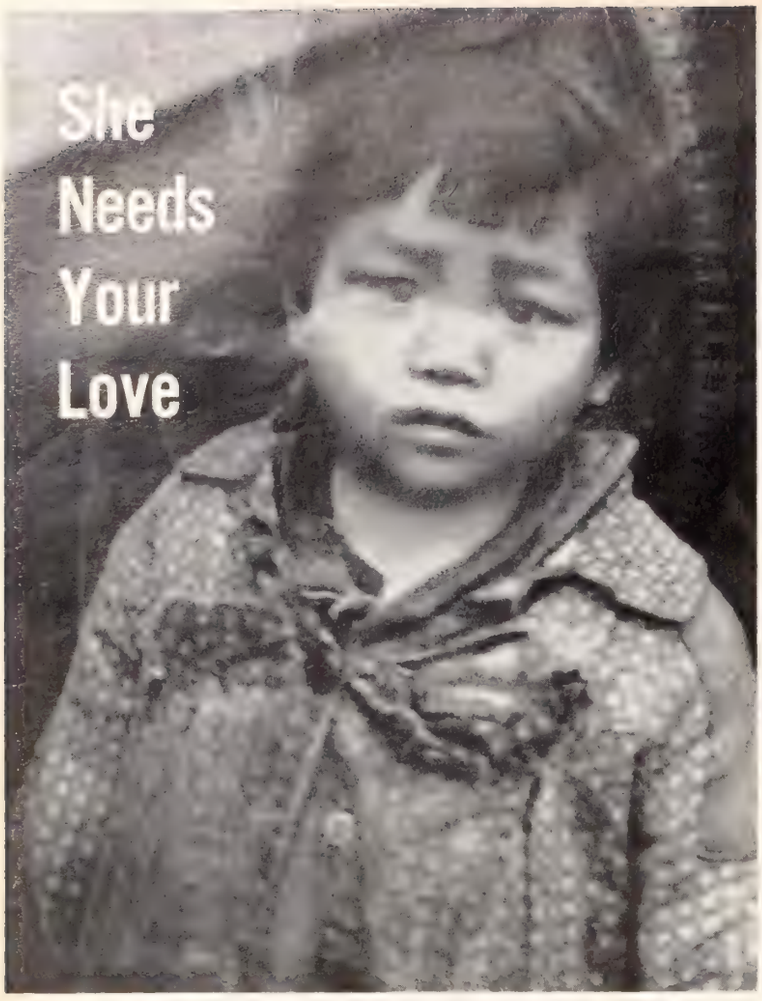
You will learn, too, how Berlioz wrote the symphony at the insistence of the great Paganini—who then declined to perform it because his part wasn't big enough!

You'll read passages from the Byron poem that gave Berlioz his theme and see color photos of the kind of beautiful Italian landscapes which inspired him to create this masterwork. You'll enjoy the warmly human articles by such renowned authorities as Jacques Barzun, Olin Downes, and Ernest Bloch's daughter, Suzanne, a distinguished musician in her own right.

Finally, you will find yourself listening to the Yehudi Menuhin recordings with far greater awe and delight than you might otherwise have experienced.

Unequalled value if you keep it

After 'auditioning' this complete package for 10 days you may, if you wish, return it and forget the matter. Or you may keep everything for less than you might expect to pay for the two-record album of 12" long-playing records alone—only $8.80, plus a small delivery charge.



Extra bonus—a free Encore record

With your payment you list your selection of an Encore record which is then sent to you free as an additional bonus. Thus, you acquire a total of three 12" long-playing records of the highest quality and a handsome hardbound book comparable to volumes selling for three dollars or more: a total value for which you might expect to pay at least $18, yours for just $8.80. Small wonder subscribers have found that this is an opportunity unequalled in the world of music.

No minimum purchase obligation

And there are no strings attached. There are no minimum purchases you must agree to make in order to become 'eligible' to receive the membership benefits of the Society.

After your first purchase you will be given the opportunity to audition other Virtuoso Concert Society packages which will be issued, on approval, exclusively to members, at approximately six week intervals. You may elect to purchase as few or as many as you like, and each will cost no more than this same special member's price! After each package accepted and paid for, you will also receive a free Encore selection of your choice. You may cancel your membership whenever you wish. To receive your first free-audition package, just detach and mail the postpaid reply card bound in here. Or—if the card has already been removed—send your name and address to VIRTUOSO CONCERT SOCIETY, Waverly, Pennsylvania.

CCF worker Glen Graber found five-year-old Su Lin waiting for her mother in an alley.

Little Su Lin in Formosa is hungry but her mother won't be home to feed her until after dark. And then supper will be only a handful of rice, a cup of tea, and maybe a bit of fish.

Since Su Lin's father is dead her mother works fourteen hours a day in Taipei's crowded industrial center—trying to earn enough to keep Su Lin and her five brothers and sisters alive.

Su Lin has never had a dress that wasn't torn, or a bright ribbon in her hair, or a birthday party, or a doll. She can't go to school because there is no money for proper clothes, shoes, books or lunches.

And her future? Well, she may learn to beg and search garbage heaps for edible scraps of food. When she gets hungry enough she will learn to steal.

Yet, for only $10 a month, Su Lin—and children like her—can be helped. Your love can give her nourishing food, school books—and maybe even that bright ribbon for her hair.

In return you will receive a deep satisfaction, plus the child's picture, personal history, and the opportunity to exchange letters...and love. The child will know who you are and will answer your letters.

(If you want to send a special gift, a pair of shoes, a warm jacket, a fuzzy bear—you can send your check to our office, and the entire amount will be forwarded, along with your instructions.)

You can join thousands of other Americans who find this to be the beginning of a warm personal friendship with a deserving child.

And your help is desperately needed. Requests continue to come from Seoul, Korea, 15 babies abandoned every day . . . Vietnam, more war orphans . . . Calcutta, children living in the streets . . . Jordan . . . Brazil . . . Formosa.

Won't you help? Today?

Sponsors urgently needed for children in: Korea, Formosa, India, Japan, Hong Kong and Brazil.

Basically, all Don demands of an ice bucket is that it be spacious and functional, but it seems to me good looks are not amiss either. A Danish bucket I saw recently at Georg Jensen in New York not only holds 2½ quarts of ice for a most reasonable length of time, but is a minor work of art in itself. Made of palisander wood, laid on vertically in thin stripes, it is topped with a beautifully designed, easy-to-handle lid. The wood itself, a rich chocolate brown, has been softly buffed to give it a matte finish. As my niece would say, this is certainly another "florious" example of distinguished Danish design.

To grow pot herbs indoors in winter is sensible pretty, too -and it's fun to give pots of herbs as Christmas presents. Some attractive flowerpot "slipcovers" to be had at the Nosegay on Madison Avenue in New York would make such a project even more pleasant. The covers come in many different fabrics, treated against moisture, and laminated to plastic liners. I found the polka dot, the bandanna, and the Paisley print particularly appealing. On the other hand, the solid green or red ones, banded with tartan around the top, would look spritely on the window sill of an all-white kitchen. The bolder prints would not be out of line for house plants in living room or library or even for people with brown thumbs as containers for crackers, or any kind of nibbles.

At Betsy Banham's informal supper after the football game last week, I noticed a gleaming ribbon of low two-candle holders—of silver or polished pewter. I supposed—set along the back of the buffet. While I was still admiring them, our hostess carried in from the kitchen a large and handsome casserole—"Careful, it's hot, right out of the oven." But the casserole's gleam and curve clearly matched that of the candlesticks. Surely, I thought, she wouldn't cook in that silver bowl. All was made clear when Betsy explained that both the casserole and the candlesticks were Nambé ware, a gift from her sister in Santa Fe, where they were designed, sand-casted, ground, and polished from an alloy of eight metals. They say Nambé Mills' alloy never chips, never tarnishes, keeps hot things hot and cold things cold. My lesson for the day: all that glitters isn't silver and doesn't always have to be.

A restaurant in Kalamazoo, Mich., that we visited recently has a marvelous variation on garlic bread which I can't wait to try: sliced rye party rounds soaked in garlic butter and turned to melba toast in the oven.

Granted our mothers had a point in teaching us it was improper to ask a guest if he or she would have "more" of something. It has always seemed to me a little absurd, however, to ask a guest if he'll have "some" when you offer him a second helping. Yet even if your hostess doesn't pull the gaffe of saying "will you have some more," there is nothing more stultifying than having too much food forced upon you. She ought to be able to size up the situation by a quick glance, then offer the dish wordlessly so that seconds can either be enjoyed without guilt or turned down without appearing to insult the cook.

Although I'm put off by an antique wheelbarrow in the living room, or by a frankly phony cobbler's bench, there are some adaptations of Americana that I think come off rather well. I took as a house present to some friends with a farm a set of Hitchcock Grape place mats I found at Altman's in New York. Cork-backed, the glossy mats are decorated with authentic gold stencils copied from Hitchcock chairs, and they come in black (my choice), barn red, Newport blue, old olive, and antique white. They have a very definite affinity for maple or pine tables, wipe off easily, and are certainly a change from the more prevalent contemporary designs.

Fireside excitement

BRIGHT-FLAMING FIRES are promised by the maker of the four new "Stuff to Burn" products, above, that come prettily packaged in a pasteboard Victorian coal scuttle. Fire Whiz (waxed shredded wood) is designed to start an instant blaze in fireplace or outdoor barbecue. Fire Cones (pine cones dipped in wax), Fire Color Cakes, and Flakes all produce color effects. Complete package of four products, $10. By Paragon Candle Company, Oshkosh, Wis., 54901.

MONUMENTAL SCULPTURE by nine internationally prominent artists will permanently grace the campus of California State College in Long Beach as the result of a symposium held there last summer under the auspices of the International Sculpture Federation, a branch of UNESCO. The first such symposium held in the United States, this was the eighteenth sponsored by the Federation in various parts of the world since 1959. California State College served as hosts to the sculptors for a two-month period, and along with members of the community and industry financed the cost. The nine invited sculptors—Kengiro Azuma of Japan, J. J. Beljon of Holland, André Bloc of France, Kosso Eloul of Israel, Claire Falkenstein of California, Gabriel Kohn of Florida, Piotr Kowalski of France, Robert Murray of Canada, and Gio Pomodoro of Italy—worked in various materials including aluminum, concrete, laminated woods, sheet bronze. The artists were given a free hand both as to the forms of their monumental works (defined as sculpture from 20 to 60 feet high or more) and as to the techniques they used. Mr. Kowalski, for instance, used electro-forming facilities at a local aviation plant for "exploding" and shaping under water the metal for his sculpture. A local ship-building yard served as a foundry for Robert Murray (creator of the steel plate sculpture, top of page), who has developed a technique he calls "stand-offs"—welding pieces together in a way that enables the total to be freestanding. College art students were apprentices to the artists.

full scale... even in miniature

It couldn't matter more—this matter of proportion. Sterling silver that's well and truly designed isn't merely graduated in size like a string of beads. It's evolved. Rebalanced, restated, reaffirmed, right down the scale to the smallest spoon. Like this. So that each piece is in harmony with the others on your table. If it hadn't turned out that way, Lunt's "Eloquence" pattern would simply never have been put in production. Because a design that looks majestic in a salad spoon may be gawky in a slender iced tea spoon. Or it may dwindle to the preposterous in a demi-tasse spoon. That's why it is a wise bride who asks to see the small pieces before deciding on the silver of a lifetime. Go ahead and ask. It's a pleasure. With Lunt, even picayune little pickle forks have substance. And charm. You can see our patient sense of proportion never meets the vanishing point.

A SMALL ELECTRONIC DEVICE promises to cause a significant change before long in home appliances. The SCR or "silicon controlled rectifier" is a small, solid-state component (like that used for transistor music equipment) which will be built into familiar appliances such as lamps, electric mixers, sewing machines, or other products normally limited to two or three operating speeds or degrees of brightness. With the addition of SCR, you can dim the light or control the speed of the motor for mixing simply by turning a dial in much the same way that you control the level of sound on a radio or record player. The device was introduced by the General Electric Company a few years ago, but only recently have they worked out a production method that makes it possible to sell the component to appliance manufacturers at a nominal 35 to 50 cents each, instead of the original $300.

U.S. TRAVELERS ABROAD may think twice about buying a 25-pound, $50 French or Japanese bargain in view of the revised customs regulations that went into effect October 1. The most important change affecting the $100 exemption on articles purchased while traveling (the $100 to be based on the retail value of each item in the country where acquired) is that the articles must accompany you. In other words, any article you have shipped home—except authenticated antiques, of course—is subject to duty. The alcoholic beverage allowance, too, has been reduced from one gallon to one quart, and that only to travelers twenty-one years of age or older. The leaflet on revised custom exemptions and a new one outlining import restrictions on popular trademark items such as perfumes and watches are both available free from your nearest U.S. custom house, consular offices abroad, and the Bureau of Customs, Washington, D. C., 20226.

NOSTALGIA FOR THINGS VICTORIAN is indicated by a sudden across-the-board interest in the colors, the bibelots, even the architecture of the late nineteenth century. Garnet reds, eggplant, and shades of mauve, for instance, have put in an appearance in the current color palette. Young homemakers are flocking to shops that specialize in old oak tables and chests. Their elders have discovered the luxury of low slung, tufted sofas covered in black leather or one of the new horsehair fabrics. San Franciscans have converted a block of Victorian houses on Union Street—gingerbread and all—into a thriving cluster of coffee houses, galleries, and shops. And urban planners in Victoria, B. C., have revitalized their old Victorian City Hall, surrounding it, for counterpoint, with crisp modern structures.

HOUSEHOLD HELP, ANYBODY? "You rang, sir?" is the more familiar line associated with actor Arthur Treacher, classic portrayer of the perfect butler since the Shirley Temple movies of the 1930's. Mr. Treacher is now prepared to answer the first question via his new national organization: "Call Arthur Treacher Service System." His service is predicated on a two-way need to provide more employment under improved standards for part-time workers and to make available more reliable. trained household service workers on a temporary basis. At the outset, maids, butlers, housekeepers, handymen, window washers—all of them bonded—will be available for one to eight hours of work. Later, services for catering, ground maintenance, etc., will be offered. Franchises already have been established in Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, and Washington, D. C. The system anticipates opening offices as far west as the Mississippi by early 1966. Write to Call Arthur Treacher Service System, 1155 W. Chestnut Street, Union, N. J., 07083.

We've a new edition in our family.

And we're proud as can be. Because our newest decorating book, How To Make Your Windows Beautiful, looks like a runaway best seller.

But then, why not? It has more of everything you've liked about our other window books. More than 80 pictures of imaginative room settings in full color. Detailed sketches and pictures showing alternate ways of treating particular windows. Fresh ideas on color. How-to information on planning, measuring and making draperies. Plus a few tips on choosing drapery hardware (we couldn't resist).

There's just one problem. Our new 76-page book is so complete that you'll know almost as much about window beauty as we do. But that's the price of authorship. And the price of our book? Just 50¢ together with the coupon below. Or buy one at your nearby Kirsch dealer's soon.

MUSIC FOR PARTIES

BY FAUBION BOWERS

Whether in the background or the foreground, recorded or live, music at a party will affect the thoughts, feelings, and attitudes of your guests, subliminally, and at most kinds of parties enhance their enjoyment. The invaluable extra of music can turn a simple occasion, like a dinner party, into a grand one, and a grand occasion like a dancing party into a superb one. Or you can build a whole party around music, offering it as the main entertainment of the evening.

If you are designing a party at which conversation is to be the chief ornament, however, dispense with music. Talk is rude to music (despite the old lady's confession that she loved Wagner because he was so loud she could chat without disturbing her neighbor in the next seat), and music cancels precision in serious discourse. Thinking, formulating, relaying, and receiving ideas are clogged by distraction of the music. Nor does it have a place if you are planning to introduce to your guests a star from afar or some local lion who has just returned from somewhere interesting or to whom something important has happened. In that case, the guest of honor is surely worth an evening's undiverted, unmitigated attention.

The smallest situation calling for music is the dinner for two. Here you need music for romance, seduction, invitation, provocation. "The music, ho!" Shakespeare calls out in Antony and Cleopatra, "moody food of us that trade in love . . ." The range of "moody food" on records today is infinite. Dozens of albums are geared solely for low lights and smooth sound. Columbia Records has André Previn, Percy Faith, André Kostelanetz; London Records has Mantovani; and Kapp Records has Roger Williams; Capitol Records has Shearing, Gleason, Stu Phillips, Cy Coleman, and the Hollyridge Strings; Angel Records has some stunning versions of the music of the problematical and complex Kurt Weill. Any of these conductors, pianists, or composers provide the perfect backdrop for love, or, if you serve their music to a larger group, for affection and a tranquil evening. If you want to go foreign in your heady tête-à-têtes, there are, among hundreds of others, "Musik für die Hausbar" (Music for the Bar at Home Ariola 71492), Gilberto/Jobin (Capitol ST 2160) and Laurindo Almeida in "Guitar from Ipanema" (Capitol ST 2197).

Most of your parties this season will be group get-togethers for gaiety and companionship. Such parties plead for music. Records or tapes can and should be played continuously and unobtrusively during the entire evening.

To greet your guests

When guests are arriving is ice-breaking time, and the background music should be neither too loud to drown the introductions nor too soft to register its deliberate effect. Start-off music must always be bright and unusual enough to offer an instant conversational gambit. Shy guests who are apt to flounder on entering a room will be grateful if you provide them with the opportunity of saying, "What's that music?"

Columbia Records has some fine examples of music which is neither popular enough to be commonplace nor serious enough to burden rather than cheer. There are Jerry Murad and his Harmonicats (CL 2341) who play earnest music in a most invigorating way. There is, in reverse, Friedrich Gulda, the classical concert pianist who periodically plays jazz—his "Ineffable" (CL 2346) has just been released. Another sure-fire springboard for discussion is any of the controversial records by "The Creative Swingle Singers," under the Philips label. These French singers wordlessly sing and hum complete and exact compositions by Bach (they've now started to do the same with Mozart), but swing them with a clipped beat of jazz stringbass and drums. The effect is electrifying, and can please or alarm both the longhaired and the crewcut. Capitol's series of "Music from Great French Motion Pictures" and "Music from Great Italian Motion Pictures" arrest the attention on two scores, memories of the films as well as sound.

Dinner, of course, calls for a different kind of music. The mood is different; the venue has changed. Now people are specifically paired and grouped. Don't be afraid to move for variety from

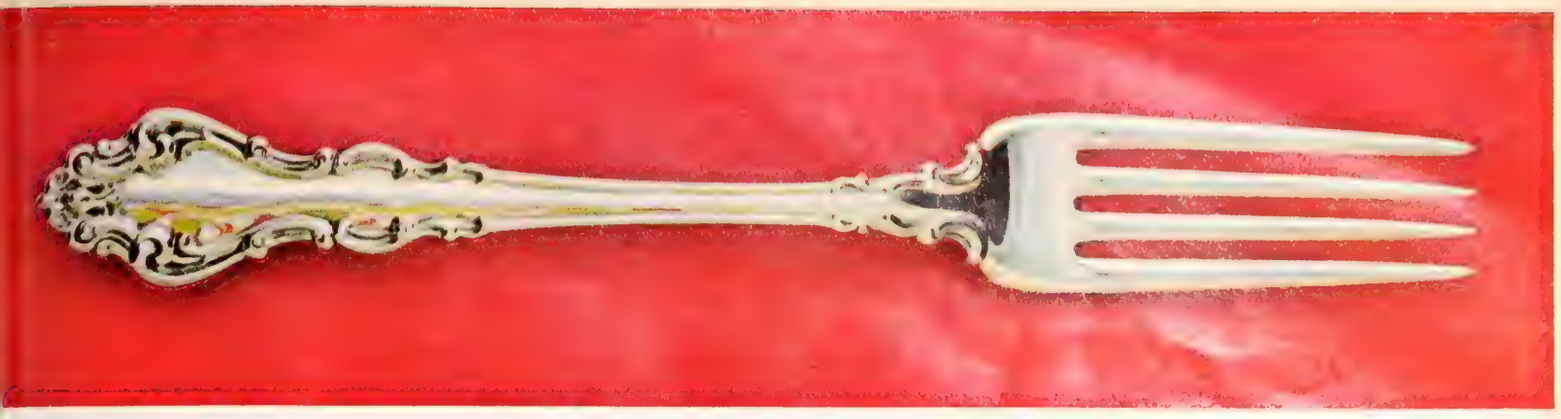
Whether in the background or the foreground, recorded or live, music at a party will affect the thoughts, feelings, and attitudes of your guests, subliminally, and at most kinds of parties enhance their enjoyment. The invaluable extra of music can turn a simple occasion, like a dinner party, into a grand one, and a grand occasion like a dancing party into a superb one. Or you can build a whole [illegible] around music, offer

Dinnertime music should always be instrumental (although vocalizations of Rachmaninoff, Glazunov, and the "Bachianas Brasileiras" of Villa-Lobos might also be included). It should have a steady beat, clean orchestration, and straightforward mood that lacks complexity of emotion. Early composers such as Vivaldi, Handel, Rameau, Lully, Purcell all fit pleasantly into any social circumstance, as do Bach's Brandenburg Concerti, Scarlatti's harpsichord sonatas, and Haydn and Mozart symphonies. Their rhythmic and melodic innocence, their comforting repetitions as well as their centuries-long familiarity make them pleasant to hear without requiring active listening. They bring cheer into a room, without responsibility. The even-numbered symphonies of Beethoven make excellent dinnertime music, too (but Brahms and Tchaikovsky, with their overripe romanticism, are apt to affect the digestion).

On the other hand, choruses, operatic performances, and the heavier art songs of Schubert and Wolf simply demand too much of an auditor—a knowledge of a foreign language for one thing. Any music with words subtracts from the table's flavor. "Party music" indicates that the party comes first and the music second; otherwise you would have a "music party."

It is both clever and colorful to match music and food geographically. Beer garden band music and polkas are good with sauerkraut and frankfurters, if nowhere else. Spaghetti and all the pastas acquire more elegance if you add mandolins, live or recorded. Two excellent examples are "Mandolini di Venezia" (ABC Paramount 434) and "Mandolino Italiano" (Audio Fidelity AFLP (Music for the Bar at Home Ariola 71492), Gilberto/Jobin (Capitol ST 2160) and Laurindo Almeida in "Guitar from Ipanema" (Capitol ST 2197).



Most of your parties this season will be group get-togethers for gaiety and companionship. Such parties plead for music. Records or tapes can and should be played continuously and [illegible] Charlie Kaya and his Hawaiians in Mexico" (Jubilee JGS 5030)—chili and pineapple, perhaps. For Japanese sukiyaki and tempura, there are some exquisite recordings of harp and flute music (koto and shakuhachi). "Japanese Koto Music" (Lyrichord LL 131), for example, contains a performance of "Spring Sea," one of the most beautiful and internationally pleasing compositions in Japanese music. Other records such as "I Remember Japan" (Fiesta 1278) and Kyu Sakamoto's "Sukiyaki" (Capitol T 10349) are light but delightful. If you are planning any kind of an Asian meal—curries, chop sueys, nasi gorengs—you might write to the Japan Society (Mrs. Beata Gordon, 112 East 64th Street, New York, N. Y., 10021) and inquire if any Indian, Chinese, Indonesian, or Japanese musicians are going to be in your vicinity. A number of these artists tour regularly, and are available for short home performances at wonderfully low fees.

The beat for dancing

After dinner, if your guests like to dance, you can stack your record player with standard discothèque fare. But since the discothèque has become the run-of-the-mill form of public entertainment, a party at home will have more éclat if the music is provided by a small band. This need not be grand or expensive. Three pieces will do. If you ask around, you may well be surprised at the number of serviceable amateur bands in your area. In Norwalk, Conn., for instance, a group of businessmen play excellent and brilliant jazz just for the fun of it. The trombonist is an industrial realty man; the trumpet player works for the Prudential Insurance Company; the tenor sax is an engineer at American Cyanamid; the clarinetist is an optometrist. Only the drummer is professional.

On an even livelier scale you will find youngsters who spend their spare time and earn their extra money as Beatle-esque facsimiles. And there are teen-age rock 'n roll groups of quality. Your own children can give you a line on such performers who sometime make passable music on nothing more than washboards, tin tubs, and stringed broomsticks. At holiday time, groups from schools and colleges are also available for little. (A letter to the Dean will be forwarded to the entrepreneur.) Perhaps the group you rout out will not play quite as well as what you can hear at Broadway's Metropole, but the fact that these are your neighbors, or at least locals, will add genial, brightening pleasure to the occasion. You will also be helping the youngsters, and encouraging homemade music with a fillip it can well use. Remember, good or bad, it is still music.

Music for music's sake

Now happily returning to fashion is the charming, almost forgotten delight of the musicale or musical soirée. For such a party, you may invite a serious artist of standing to whom you will pay a fee, or you can call upon your neighboring musicians from the local conservatory, who will play for pin money and the experience. Don't expect a free concert, however. One hostess I know once asked a pianist after dinner, "Please play something for us." The something ran into several numbers, and next day she received a bill from his agent for the "concert."

Your music-makers may be of any number, according to taste. The first White House concert of the Roosevelt administration was a simple program for two pianos. Having a second piano hauled into your home for overnight costs around $25, and can be well worth it. For although a piano solo may prompt some of your guests to yawn, a duo will make their eyes sparkle and their dispositions shine.

Another possibility would be a serious singer hoping for a career in opera. You can glamorize her (or his) performance by playing a recorded accompaniment. Music writer Edward Downes has created a series of Audio Spectrum Records, "Arias Without Voice," in which he conducts the London Philharmonic in accompaniments to all the vocal favorites for coloratura, lyric, and dramatic sopranos and for tenors and basses as well. These records add a professional touch and offer a lighter, brighter alternative to the dry, hand-played piano reduction of an orchestral score.

If you want concerted music for your party, you can choose the smallest unit, a duet—violin and piano, perhaps. The world of chamber music is always elegant and graceful; trios and quartets have been written since music's beginning and they run the gamut from heavy to frivolous. Never be shy about asking for a favorite piece of yours or your guests'. The answer at best will be "yes," at worst, "no." Either way the intimacy between performer and audience, which a musicale provides to a degree impossible in the concert hall, will be increased.

If you offer music as the entertainment of the evening, however, limit the time severely. Never let the performance last more than an hour (this will also be easier on your pocketbook), and let your guests know what the evening's schedule will be so they can set their listening alarm clocks for paying attention to the music when it starts. Please don't pass drinks or snacks during the performance. While the musicians are laboring, let there be music; the stomach can come later, or before. And don't expect to capture your guests' concentrated attention with a program of recordings. If music is to be the star of the party, the music must be live. Save your records for creating atmosphere at another and different kind of party.

The notes of a happy housekeeper

BY MARY ELIZABETH FALTER

Our winter wood has just been delivered and Tom and the boys have stacked it neatly on the side porch. This year we ordered a good supply of properly cut back logs. Aged, dry firewood is essential for a lasting fire, but the real secret, we think, is good construction. People who have trouble with fires that smoke or go out usually blame the chimney, green wood, or the way the fireplace is built, and overlook the way the fire is built.

To make a proper fire, we start with the back log. This is a log that is a comfortable length to fit the fireplace, is wider than the average log, and is cut either in pie-shaped sections or in half. We place it split-side out, against the back of the fireplace and behind the andirons. Between the andirons there should be two thick tightly rolled newspapers and some lighter rumpled paper with good dry kindling laid crisscross on top of that. Then across the andirons go two medium logs with a third log diagonally crossing the two. We set the whole stack as far back in the fireplace as possible and take care to keep air space between all the wood. Carefully built, this kind of a fire catches quickly and burns for a long time.

In the middle of the summer we made a wonderful investment which will pay dividends this autumn as well. We bought $10 worth of beach sand and simply had it dumped in a nice shady spot between two big evergreen trees next to the driveway. The lawn doesn't grow very well there anyway, and the children and all their neighborhood friends had a wonderful time playing in the sand. We divided it into two big piles, one for girls and one for boys—their projects often differ so—and youngsters from six to fourteen enjoyed it. They made villages and battlefields, tunnels and lakes, and when the sand got flattened out and messy, we just raked and shoveled it back into piles. Now that autumn is with us we'll put it into two big plastic garbage cans for use on winter ice, and keep one near the back door and the other near the front steps. Next spring what's left over will go into the flower beds and we'll start all over again.

A friend introduced me to an extra special furniture wax that is an old favorite of hers and now a favorite in our house. This fine beeswax polishing agent buffs to a lustrous hard finish, and what's more it's available in lavender, rose, or verbena fragrances. It can be used on all wood surfaces, marble, lacquer, rubber, linoleum, and tile flooring, and even on leather. Called Saint's Satin Wax, it comes in single cans or nicely boxed in two-can sizes with a polishing cloth tucked in.

If one is fond of lamb kidney sauté or steak and kidney pie, the fondness must be downright dedicated to put up with the tedious job of removing those tough white membranes inside the kidney before it can be cooked. We're dedicated, but were glad to find an easy way to do the job. We bought a sturdy pair of nail scissors, the kind with thick curved blades, and we keep them in the kitchen especially reserved for the job. Once the kidney has been split, it's a simple matter to snip away the membranes.

Having always thought Dip-it an excellent product, I have gone a little farther afield with it and find it very good for household jobs other than cleaning the coffeepot, which I do at least once a week. Because it does such a great job on the glass coffee-maker, I now use it to clean out our great big Swedish glass vase. I love to fill this vase with freshly cut greens and of course it's important to

If you enjoy cooking—and compliments—
THE COOK BOOK GUILD invites you to accept

ANY THREE

of these exciting cook books for only $1.89

If you join now and agree to accept only four selections or alternates over the next two years.

DO YOU ENJOY thrilling your family and guests with your cooking? Have you found that one cook book has the best recipe for lamb curry while another has the best veal scaloppine? Do you like browsing through cook books to find interesting new dishes . . . new ways of serving . . . the secrets of famous chefs?

If so, a wealth of delightful experiences awaits you in these marvelous books. They have been specially selected for this offer from the world's most popular, most useful cook books.

And if you really love compliments, wait until you try some of the recipes!

For example: next time you serve chicken, try such exotic variations as Tandoori chicken, roasted with a yoghurt marinade . . . chicken Dijon prepared with a mustard and sour cream sauce (all from An Herb and Spice Cook Book). Or imagine greeting your guests with the fresh-baked aroma of orange angel cake, made with Cointreau (from Ladies' Home Journal Dessert Cookbook) . . . or surprising your family with poppy seed bars (from The Art of Fine Baking).

This is just a sample of the pleasures The Cook Book Guild offers you. For here is a club devoted exclusively to seeking out the world's outstanding cook books and making them available to you at guaranteed savings of at least 30%.

As a member, you'll learn what great chefs look for when selecting ingredients . . . how impressive menus are planned by famous hostesses. You'll learn budget-stretching tips, family and regional cooking secrets. Delicious ways to diet. Ways to save time, trouble.

Forthcoming selections are described in the free monthly bulletin, The Cook Book News, which also contains an "Editor's Choice" recipe. You may take as few as four selections or alternates within two years, or as many as you wish. With every fourth book you accept, you may choose a FREE bonus book from a list of books on cooking, gardening, decorating, etc.

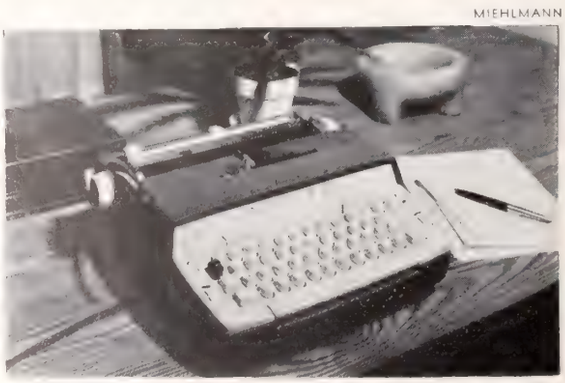
THE NEW PORTABLE TYPEWRITERS

Streamlined to a T, they perform as nimbly for writing letters and copying recipes as for recording your autobiography



Once the rather rakish symbol of the roving reporter, the portable typewriter has become almost as much a household staple as television. The typewritten letter is no longer frowned on, especially when it is composed on one of the new personal typewriter letter papers (see page 48). The increasing prevalence of the office-at-home, in fact, has made a typewriter the answer to everything from recipes to instructions for charladies. In some instances, electricity has contributed technical dazzle, but whatever steam employed (yours, Ben Franklin's), you can count on the same expertise hitherto found only in nontotable colossi.

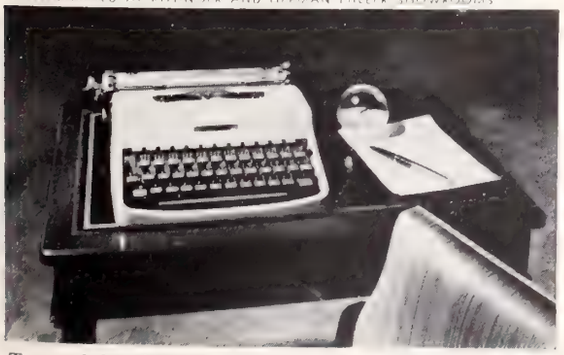
ALL PRICES APPROXIMATE

Great for a home office or as a traveling companion, the electric Poweriter by Smith-Corona not only operates with a cord but, with its rechargeable energy cell (a transistor called a "Power Pack"), without one. A current selector makes power available for recharging or typing almost anyplace in the electric world. $199.50.

MIEHLMANN

Good machine for a household given to heavy-duty typing, the Singer electric portable is specially adapted to turn out copies effortlessly. According to the quantity desired—and with no change at all in touch—ten calibrated adjustments increase the force with which the type-bars strike the paper. All you do is set a dial. $159.95.

For letter writers to whom the perfectly typed sheet is sacred, the SM-9 by Olympia is equipped with a vertical half-spacer, a correcting space bar, an aligning scale, and, to boot, "Finger Form" keys shaped to fit the finger tips. Wide selection of unusual type styles. $119.50.



Wonderful gift for a kitchen (or a football-playing student), the Ten Forty by Remington is accident-proof: it is built of whatever crash helmets are made of. For cook or halfback, there is a Dial-A-Touch Control for the right "feel" in typing. Pica, elite, or script type. $85.95.

Just the trick for a coed's dormitory desk, the Royal Sahara offers such lures as pica, elite, or Spencerian type, a touch-control selector, a line finder, an office-size keyboard with four extra characters (!, 1, + and =) and a gay red, gray, or blue "hatbox" carrying case. $137.50.

PHOTOGRAPHED AT KITTINGER AND HERMAN MILLER SHOWROOMS

To perch handily on a small chairside table—or for lap-typing on the wing—the Lettera 32 by Olivetti-Underwood weighs a mere 9¼ pounds, yet is as rugged as a little bulldog. Its equipment includes practically all the important features of a king-size office machine. $78.46.

FOR YOUR TYPED LETTERS

With the typewritten letter on the social upgrade, letter papers are appearing that, while perfectly fine for Spencerian epistles, are particularly suited to the typewriter. The writing machine, as typists know, makes three demands: the paper cannot be too slippery, too thick, or too heavily textured. Fulfilling all of these requirements, the new papers are also most attractive, varied in size, and, in some cases, erasable with no sign that the typist has goofed.

Khaki-colored with a white border and, if you like, a white monogram, the big sheet, top, is definitely oversized, definitely for a man. An oversized card, center, comes in a variety of colors, slips into the typewriter like an eel. Both these at Henri Bendel. Envelope, left, for club-size paper is lined in a heraldic print, olive green on white. By Whiting. For notes, right, a small unfolded sheet, white with mauve border and floral-lined envelope. Hallmark.

Reproduction of a Williamsburg paper, the foot-long sheet, top left, is elegant, roomy, cream-colored. Envelopes match. By Eaton. A small white sheet, almost square, fits an envelope, top right, lined with a wonderfully phony bank note. At Bergdorf Goodman. Two fine sheer papers, center, left and right, are respectively king-size, shell-pink, red-bordered; and club-size, pale gray, white-edged. Both by Crane, exclusively for Cartier. Air-mail envelope, bottom, for club sheet is lined with a map of the world. By Montag.

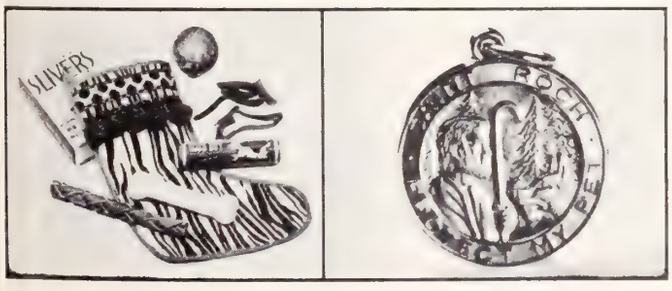
Dog Boutique

It's fun to pamper a pet—but these gifts are practical, too

To keep a small dog warm on winter walks, the snug coat, above, is of double-layered Wyner wool jersey, with two sets of buttons to adjust the belt to girth and a pocket handkerchief just for fun. Comes in sizes 10 through 16 in tweedy camel, green, blue, coral, $17. Hound's-tooth check raincoat, right, of Cohn Hall Marx stretch vinyl will keep a low-slung dachshund dry and hound's-tooth clean. In sizes 10 to 18, $8.



This champion schnauzer sits on a sofa of fashionable (but washable) zebra-striped duck, smart for putting on a car seat for a trip to the country or near a chair for family conviviality. Flop the doggy divan over, turn up the rim, and (presto) a red plastic surface for drying on after a bath. The foam rubber padding is nice for snoozing, too. Large, medium, and small, $14.

A handsome mahogany bed keeps pets off drafty floors. Mattress cover of blue and white ticking is easy to zip off for washing and easy to slipcover to match another color scheme. $30.

No clatter, no spatter—or, if there's a spill, no matter—this off-the-floor feeder, right, has a zebra-striped counter of plasticized wood on strong wood legs that match the bed above. Complete with bowls for food and water. Small size, $12; medium, $14 and large, $16.

Traditional gifts with a difference. Fake fur stocking, left, to hang up this Yule and for years to come, has red ball fringe and plastic back, is filled with chewy vet-approved, pet-approved toys and treats, $10. Above, a gold-finished St. Roch medal, traditional in Europe, to hang on a dog's collar or an owner's charm bracelet. St. Roch ("rock") is patron saint of dogs, and a tiny booklet tells the story. Use reverse side for owner's name and phone number, $5.

The care and safekeeping of Copper, brass, and pewter

How to preserve and prolong their shining hours

In this first half of a two-part guide we will concentrate on the maintenance of copper, brass, and pewter. How to care for aluminum, chrome, and stainless steel will be covered in a subsequent issue.

With more and more metal being used for more and more products in the home, knowing how to care for a variety of metals properly without becoming a slave to them is a neat trick. As durable and enduring as metals are, they do require attention and on a regular basis. Improved finishes and greatly improved polishes make this task neither the chore nor the bore that the old housewives' tale would have you believe.

Basically, copper and brass are treated identically. The care of pewter is quite different. However, all metals have one point in common, i.e., they should be kept as dust-free as possible because accumulated dust builds up into a greasy film which can be very hard to clean or polish off. Eventually this coating will eat into the metal surface and cause pitting which cannot be removed. Even lacquered pieces are affected by dust, so the number-one step is to flick that duster around to prevent grit from settling too long on your treasured metal possessions. Metal details, such as wall panel stripping, will benefit from a regular wiping off with a clean, soft cloth, possibly a treated metal polish cloth. Metal inserts in tile floors are cleaned as the floor is cleaned, and stay bright accordingly.

Many copper and brass pieces are lacquered. While the lacquer does not permit a patina to develop, it certainly cuts down polishing time as lacquered pieces never need to be polished. A good lacquer job will last indefinitely if the article is handled with some care. But once the lacquer finish is cracked, the surface will craze and air will seep under it causing the finish to peel and discolor. The only solution is to remove the rest of the lacquer. You can do it yourself by placing the piece for ten minutes in two gallons of boiling hot water in which a cup of washing soda has been dissolved. The lacquer will peel off and the piece may then be re-lacquered. For the best results, however, have a professional do the entire job, particularly if the piece is ornate or bulky. Metal refinishers are listed in the yellow pages of telephone directories.

Decorative hardware made of copper or brass is usually lacquered; pewter hardware does not need it. Do not use polish on hardware as you may remove the finish. If it is a satin finish, polishing will produce a high and unwanted gloss; if parts of the hardware are oxidized for effect, polishing will remove the shading.

A special fire lacquer which will withstand exposure to heat for a long time is available for fireplace equipment. Eventually the fire lacquer will wear off and need replacing. Another spot where a lacquer finish will not last forever is the bathroom. Brass bathroom accessories look fresh and gleaming for a while, but in time the extra moist atmosphere will affect the finish.

Most manufacturers pack full instructions with new products. Save these directions; they're the result of testing and are the best source of information on maintenance as well as use. Read the instructions before using an item and follow the recommendations for the most satisfactory cleaning methods.

Pick your polish

The bewildering array of metal cleaners on supermarket shelves is confusing indeed. But beware of too broad claims made by any polish, as no one cleaner is equally effective for all metals. Some polishes must be washed off because they are acidic and will stain metal if left on too long. Other polishes may be wiped off and are a good choice for articles that should not be rinsed or submerged in water too long. Wash-off polishes require much less elbow grease than wipe-off ones, but the latter produce a much higher gloss. For very heavy tarnish it may be necessary to use

both types—i.e., clean thoroughly with a wash-off polish and then shine up with a wipe-off brand. Polishing solid metal cannot wear it out, but every time you polish plated copper or brass, you remove some coating. It is easy to determine whether an article is solid or plated by holding a magnet against the surface (a magnetized pencil will do it). Solid brass and copper will not attract the magnet; ferrous-based brass and copper will.

There is a comparatively new type of copper and brass cleaner which is also tarnish-resistant. A collection of copper and brass cookware cleaned with one of these products, then hung above a gas range has been known to stay bright and shiny for over two months with nothing more than soap and water washings after use. Here is a time-saving trick for keeping brass bright: once a brass piece (unlacquered) is thoroughly cleaned, give it a weekly rubdown with a liquid ammonia cleaner poured on a piece of terry towel. Note that this method will not work on copper.

Cooking with copper, brass

Solid copper pots and pans are usually tin-lined to prevent corrosion—and not, as the old superstition states, to prevent poisoning the food! Copper is also used for heat-distributing inner cores and bottoms of cooking utensils made from other metals. Either all- or part-copper is a joy to cook in because it is an excellent heat-conducting metal. Some brass and copper cookware is lacquered to prevent tarnish, but this protective finish must be removed before the piece is used the first time or the exterior will turn black, requiring an expensive refinishing job. Take off the lacquer with the boiling-water-and-soda treatment mentioned above. Some antique dealers lacquer old brass and copper, so be sure to inquire about the finish when you buy a treasure. Generally speaking, there is more copper than brass used for cookware, although many brass containers, buffet servers, chafing dishes, and traditional tea kettles are available. Some antique copper utensils are elaborately trimmed with brass. Brass and copper look marvelous together so don't hesitate to mix them—and don't worry about having "all brass" or "all copper" in your collection.

The most laborious part of cleaning copper and brass cooking utensils is polishing off the discoloration caused by exposure to heat.

THOUSANDS OF NIGHTS FROM NOW you'll bless THE DAY you bought AN Aireloom MATTRESS

Why are families paying $169.50 for a Rip Van Winkle made by Aireloom—when so many other mattresses cost less? Because they have slept on one of these other mattresses and know that an unsatisfactory mattress is no bargain, at any price. They have decided they want what only a Rip Van Winkle can offer. Here are just a few of the benefits it will bring you:

1. The Rip Van Winkle is made entirely by hand. Even the sidewalls are handstitched so they can't sag or break down. You get 12% more usable sleeping area because you can sleep right out to the very edge in complete comfort.
2. Because the Rip Van Winkle is upholstered in resilient Dacron by duPont it is guaranteed for twenty years on a non-prorated basis.
3. The box springs are hand-tied, eight ways, with 100% pure linen flax twine to give you unmatched stability and comfort.

Visit your nearest Aireloom dealer. He will be the leading furniture or department store in your community. The Rip Van Winkle is available in soft, medium or firm—quilted or tufted—and in Regular and Super sizes.

Aireloom Bedding Company / 1119 Westminster Avenue, Alhambra, California

After we make the finest bone china possible, then we really get to work.

It's hard enough being perfectionists about our fine English bone china. But on top of that we've got 150 patterns to be finicky about

So: to get the look of a hand-painted pattern, we paint it by hand.

Whenever we put gold on Wedgwood, it's pure gold. Burnished by hand. (It's even purer gold than your wedding ring.)

All gold rims are brushed on by hand.

For that matter, each and every pattern is applied by hand. Not just the intricate ones like these Florentines. We get just as involved with simple things.

The only man at Wedgwood who has an easy time of it is Mr. Meredith. His job is smashing. He throws Wedgwood rejects into a barrel to break them. So they can't ever end up in your home.

Now, that's easy. Especially since the rest of us work so hard, we don't have many rejects

Wedgwood

T Dark Blue Florentine, 35.95*, Black Florentine ,29.95*, Turquoise Florentine, 35.95*. Below: Gold Florentine, 39.95* and Arras Green Florentine, 59.00*.

FOR "WHERE YOU CAN BUY" SEE NEXT TO LAST PAGE.

Bands of deep yellow, red, purple, and blue will appear on the bottoms and sides and remain even after the pans cool, but washing and polishing will restore their original burnished beauty. This extra polishing step is worth the effort because handsome copper and brass pieces can go directly from range to table with great aplomb—eliminating other serving pieces and additional dishwashing.

Copper and brass cooking and serving pieces should last a lifetime if you follow a few simple rules:

1. Never put them on the heat "dry"; there must be fat or liquid in the vessel.
2. When melting butter or fat, be sure to swish it around the bottom and sides of the pan.
3. Soak a used pan immediately in hot, soapy water to loosen cooked food.
4. Never use an abrasive (pumice, sand, steel wool) or a sharp instrument inside or outside. Sufficient soaking will remove dried-on food without rough scouring, and will not scratch the lining.
5. When tin linings begin to discolor or get deep scratches, have them renewed. (See telephone directory yellow pages for metal refinishers.)
6. Always use a wooden spoon for stirring.
7. Do not put a saucepan over a high flame and walk away; wait until liquid comes to a boil, then lower heat.

Modern pewter

Pewter was first used by the Orientals and Romans more than 2,000 years ago, and it's still going strong. However, modern pewter bears little relation to its antique ancestor. Today's version is a tarnish-resistant alloy (about 90 per cent pure tin) which requires a minimum of cleaning; polishing and lacquering are unnecessary. It is highly prized by thousands of housewives who welcome its carefree characteristics and delight in the variety of well-designed, well-constructed items that are available. They range from excellent reproductions of American Colonial masterpieces to sleek modern accessories. Many of the latter are designed by first-rate artists in several countries.

Today's pewter comes in a range of finishes from "antiqued" (popular for hardware) to a bright sheen. To keep modern pewter in perfect condition is literally child's play. It requires nothing more strenuous than dusting, plus an occasional washing to remove any slight darkening and fingerprints. Wash in warm water with a mild soap or detergent; use a soft cloth, and possibly a soft bristle brush to reach crevices. Rinse and dry immediately to avoid watermarks. Pewter, like silver, tarnishes more quickly near salt water, and may require polishing with either pewter polish or your favorite silver polish.

In addition to our domestic product, contemporary pewter is imported from many countries, and experienced "pewter men" recognize the nationality by the color of the finish. Dutch and Scandinavian pewter is usually light and bright with a satin finish, while pewter from Italy and England has a much darker finish with an older, more mellow appearance. Modern English pewter contains no lead, so it is the most desirable for table service. Lead reacts to acetic and tannic acids found in some salad dressings, tea, and so on, therefore lead-free pewter is preferable where food is concerned.

Pewter antiques

Knowledgeable dealers consider pewter pieces dating up to the early nineteenth century as antique. Old pewter is a variable metal, and the color varies according to the proportions of the metals in the alloy. Tin is the main ingredient in the alloy, with copper, antimony, lead, and zinc used in varying amounts, although the two latter are often omitted. The more lead in the alloy, the darker and heavier the pewter—and the less desirable. Experienced dealers and collectors know good antique pewter the minute they see it despite the fact that there are no hard and fast rules for identifying it. Dealers will tell you that the proportions in the alloy must be right—which seems to mean an instinctive know-how rather than an accepted formula for mixing the ingredients.

According to the experts consulted, many fine pieces of old pewter are hidden under coats of dust which eventually form a "surface" that masks the true beauty of the patina. Properly cleaned antique pewter is beautiful in its natural state. On the other hand, many collectors and connoisseurs think that highly polished old pewter rivals the finest silver. You will see both dull finishes and shining in some of the fine museum collections. Occasionally you will find old, old pieces with a rainbow effect to the finish, the result of oxidation working on the surface of old pewter which has not been handled a great deal.

HOME IS FOR INDIVIDUALITY

HOME IS FOR HERITAGE®

There's no place like home for self-expression. But alas those endless opportunities can be endlessly frustrating. Just where does one begin? A helpful hint: many professional decorators get their plans under way by selecting one or more "character" pieces of fine furniture. The Heritage Furniture Collections abound in very special pieces; magnificent consoles, chinas, buffets, cocktail tables, chairs and sofas. Such Heritage pieces are designed to lend authority and distinction to every room. Each possesses that subtle but recognizable something extra in styling, detail, or finish that sets apart "the best" from the merely "good". Remember, too, that the very rightness of the Heritage furniture you buy today is your assurance that it will be compatible with the decorating plans you may have many years from now.

The "Grand Tour" Collection. This exciting collection adds to the pleasures of connoisseurship the certainty of Heritage quality and value. In The "Grand Tour" Collection, great individuality is achieved by interpreting a wide range of classic continental designs in an equally wide variety of woods and finishes. For your "Grand Tour" catalogue send 50¢ to Box 15, Heritage Furniture Company, High Point, North Carolina.

HERITAGE • A LIVING TRADITION IN FURNITURE

The last thing Lady Lydia saw as she swooned to the floor was her precious Prelude sterling being pinched. Did the butler do it?

Of course he did and who could blame him? For 25 years Blethers handled the Prelude sterling silver service (so precious it was kept with the family jewels) but its charm was too tempting.

The charm of Prelude is the charm of country gardens, gossamer lace, old-fashioned bouquets—all the enchantment of Edwardian England in delicate traceries of fine solid silver.

WILD ROSE. BRIDE'S SET $288

PINE SPRAY. BRIDE'S SET $288

So the lovely Lady Lydia forgave him all and pensioned him off to Cheapside where he spent his declining years boasting of the Great Prelude Pinch. And the charm of Prelude became legendary.

The International Silver Company makes it. You can own it. The Bride's Set, a 44-piece service for eight with a walnut chest, is only $288. It would cost $353 in open stock. You save $65.

(Similar tales are told of Wild Rose and Pine Spray, elegant Edwardians both. The International Silver Company makes them. You can own them.)

Antique pewter should be thoroughly washed before polish is applied. Pewter dealers recommend the following solution: five ounces of lye (¼ to ½ can) to four gallons of water in a porcelain enamel container. The solution must cover the piece, with at least 2 inches to spare at the top for evaporation. (Always wear rubber gloves.) Soak the pewter overnight. The next day, rinse, then scrub it with .0000 steel wool and water. The more you do this, the higher the sheen will become, so if you want a dull finish, don't rub too long or too hard. Pewter is relatively soft, and the tiny scratches you make with steel wool on antique pewter will add to its soft patina (rather similar to a "butler's finish" on silver). To blend these minute scratches, don't scrub in one direction only, but change from time to time. Be sure to note that this treatment is for old pewter only. Steel wool or other abrasives must not be used on modern pewter because the scratches will show up as ugly marks.

When the desired sheen is achieved, wash the piece in clean water, dry thoroughly with terry toweling, and allow to stand without being touched, for at least twelve hours. Finger marks are a real hazard to old pewter. During the cleaning process there is little danger of leaving lasting fingerprints, as the surface does not take marks when wet. However, they will remain permanently on old pewter if it is touched before it is completely dry—hence the twelve hours' waiting time. After that, the piece may be polished to a very high gloss with .0000 steel wool and pewter polish. Buffing pewter should not be necessary unless it is very dirty and in terrible shape, nor is it recommended. There are few if any skilled hand buffers to be found today, and machine buffing, particularly for an old piece, is hazardous.

Come close...touch the luxury of Cannon

This magnificent bedspread is Simpatico—from the Cannon Royal Family Collection. This unique Collection has been designed to re-create the glories of the past—the Renaissance, the Court of Louis XIV, the richness of Moorish Spain. Each is more than a bedspread; each is a whole decorating motif. Weaves, colors, textures have an old-world splendor, and a wholly contemporary way of staying beautiful always. Looking like at least three times the price, the entire Collection is priced from $25 to $50, twin size. Now at fine department stores. have the glass sparkling clean. Dip-it does the job beautifully. I like it, too, for scorched or burned pans and stained china. It's strong, though, so you have to read the label carefully and proceed with some caution.

Over the years we've become rubber glove enthusiasts—I in an effort to preserve my manicure and Tom to control a skin allergy. I must say that rubber gloves today are a far cry from the stiff clumsy things of yesteryear. Our favorites are latex Hostess gloves. Somehow they seem just right. In the first place, there is a wide variety of models, all inexpensive, and they are long enough to protect sleeves and wrists. They come lined and unlined, and most styles have non-slip palms and fingers, too. My favorite style has what is called a "soft lining" particularly good for big jobs like housecleaning because the lining keeps your hands cool even if the gloves are on a long time.

My latest craze is covering boxes. It all began with some handsome gift-wrapping paper I found in a book shop. It looks like fine bookend paper or the paper that lines beautiful Italian boxes. The patterns are all small geometrics in rich dark colors on ivory, and the sheets are big enough to cover a small-size dress box. For some time, I've collected nice stiff pasteboard boxes, the kind stores like Brooks Brothers use, and these are what I'm covering. I use rubber cement, and afterwards give every box a coat of Zar varnish which I buy at our hardware store. The boxes are pleasing to look at and wonderful for storing all sorts of things from loose snapshots to the family mending.

Winter thoughts: this year when we were getting the cars ready for winter with all the proper oil changes, snow-tire installation, etc., we found that it is possible to have a snow-tire re-cap put on any sound ordinary tire. We decided to have a moderately worn rear tire re-capped and now have a spare one for snow at very modest expense. If we don't need to use it, we'll have it for other winters, and it was due for replacement pretty soon anyway. Speaking of winter driving, we always travel with a stack of newspapers in snowy weather. We've learned that one of the best ways to get out of an ice patch is to lay two or three sheets of newspaper lengthwise in front of the wheels. The newspaper clings to the ice, and when we start again gently, the paper gives just enough traction to let the car move.

BAB-O has come up with a real marvel for doing the laundry called "BAB-O 4 in 1." Described as a spray finish (in an aerosol can) that "sprays the clothes new again," it does this to an amazing degree. It's designed to replace the fabric finish that is often washed away in the first few launderings, but a whoosh of it makes even limp wools and synthetics snap to attention. For the weekly wash, it replaces starch without leaving any roughness or stickiness, acts as a whitener and brightener, and certainly cuts ironing time. It's not even necessary to dampen the clothes first. We never use much starch although I often deplore the droopy look of linens and cottons that are laundered without any, so BAB-O 4 in 1 is for us.

I'm beginning to think one of the most useful things to have around the house is a big thick packet of sandpaper—all the various grades. The other day the meat grinder kept slipping, where it hitches to the kitchen counter, no matter how hard I tightened the butterfly screw. When I put a piece of sandpaper under the grinder, sand-side down, the slipping stopped. I also use sandpaper to take the stubborn stains or scorches out of our unfinished chopping-block kitchen counters, and to smooth the edges of our collection of old and new wooden cooking utensils. To remove a bad mar from a table or chest, I find that sometimes a gentle rubbing with the very finest 00 grade of sandpaper, followed by a cautious application of the proper stain, will do wonders. After having done that, I carefully rebuild the finish with layers of furniture wax.

Is it really true that a small piano has a "small" tone? Not if it's an Everett! Look at the back and you'll see why. Patented iron levers,* instead of wood posts, hold Everett strings under "high tension" as in a grand. We call it dyna-tension. And dyna-tension is the reason why Everett, of all small pianos, has the tone beauty of a grand.

*Patent No. 2,474,

When you're ready to buy a carpet, the salesman will hold your hand. It will help a little.

As you part with all that money, the salesman's big strong hand will reassure you.

He himself will reassure you, too.

He'll tell you why the carpet's a good one.

He'll tell you if it's worth the money.

He'll tell you how it ought to hold up.

He'll tell you how soon you can have it.

He'll answer anything you ask about it, straight and honest.

Still and all, you are now buying about the most expensive necessity you'll ever buy for your house.

So, for your own peace of mind, double-check the salesman.

Turn over the corner of the carpet and see who made it.

If Lees made it, feel secure.

Lees makes first-quality carpets, from budget carpets on up.

Strong yarn, lots of it, tough backs, good dyes. Maybe the most careful weaving in the business.

No streaks, no ravels, no loose ends, no skinny places, no bad spots, no flaws.

No nothing to disappoint you when the carpet's down on your floor.

Lees gives people carpets, not trouble. Which is why you should look for Lees while you're holding hands with the salesman.

That way, your left hand will know what your right hand is doing before you spend your money.

STRAP HEADINGS FOR CURTAINS

Some of the simple Early American rooms in the Winterthur Museum at Winterthur, Deleware have the small windows that were prevalent in Colonial America until after 1800. Set back in deep wood or plaster reveals, over wide sills, these little windows were hung with simple sill-length curtains that helped control the light and keep out drafts. They were usually made of heavy cotton, homespun linen, or "linsey-woolsey," and each curtain was flat, with loops of matching material or braid across the top for hanging. Rods were narrow wooden poles set in the window embrasures next to the glass. Today, similar loops, known as strap headings, are equally effective on curtains for larger windows, which may be hung in single or double tiers on a variety of fixtures ranging from slender metal rods to stout wood poles with ornamental finials. Strap headings are easy to make with a new kind of trimming by Conso — woven washable cotton braid that comes in fifteen colors and in a pebble pattern. Or you can use cotton braid with spaced built-in loops which also come in a galaxy of colors.

At Winterthur: looped curtains

The Franktur Room in the Henry Francis du Pont Winterthur Museum has an eight-over-twelve-sash window with sill-length curtains. They hang on loops from a wood pole set within the embrasure. The material is a blue-and-white woven linen known as "furniture check" and the loops are natural-colored cotton tape. All the woodwork in this rural Pennsylvania room is painted a mottled blue; an unusual desk combines Philadelphia Chippendale design with painted folk-art decoration in red and blue—and blue appears again in handwoven rug.

COMMAND PERFORMANCE

The newest one-act cameras

BY HELEN FINN BRUCE

Editor's Note: An amateur photographer and professional writer, Mrs. Bruce is the author of a practical handbook, Your Guide to Photography, published by Barnes & Noble. Recently so many new developments in cameras for casual photography have come on the market that H&G asked her to report on them and offer some suggestions for using them effectively.

If you would like to take pictures of your vacation travels, party high spots, or holiday activities, but want to do it with a minimum of fuss and concentration on the mechanics of picture-taking, you should find an irresistible invitation to start in one or another of the new cameras, both still and movie, that have recently come on the market. Popularly known as instant or automatic cameras, because so much of the calculation and manipulation is done automatically by the camera instead of the cameraman or woman, they have been developed specifically to make photography as easy as it can possibly be.

Automatic cameras are not new, but some of their numerous refinements are. We have become accustomed to an "electric eye," the sensitive photocell that adjusts the lens opening according to the amount of light reaching the cell and to a preselected shutter speed. We assume that the device which meters the light will signal if there isn't enough. We take for granted that a flash attachment will adjust the exposure. We can even zoom from far to near without changing lenses or camera position. We can, with a Polaroid Land camera, not only load it quickly, but see a black-and-white print ten seconds after clicking and a color print in sixty seconds. But if you dream of even speedier handling, or still shy away from possible goofs, here is a camera's-eye view of what's in store—and in stores—for you now.

Of the recent marvels to delight the hurried and the hesitant, probably the most welcome is the foolproof drop-in loading for some of the newer cameras, both still and movie. The bugaboo of that all-thumbs fumble with a flighty film leader—while the best picture got away—has been routed by a revolutionary cartridge design called Kodapak, which fits all the Kodak Instamatics and some other cameras as well.

The preloaded cartridge for still cameras can go into place only one way: the right way. The accuracy of the count-down is controlled by more built-in magic: pressing the shutter release to take a picture also advances the film automatically and evenly to the next frame and locks there, thus guarding against double exposures, overlapping pictures, and blank frames. What's more, you can drop the cartridge in, close the camera, and start clicking in less time than it takes to tell about it: you can hardly take more than five to ten seconds—unless you just stand there gloating over how easy it is.

Quick movie cameras

Home-movie fans get an even more exciting break in the new cameras designed to accept Super-8 Kodachrome film cartridges which, like the drop-ins for still cameras, contain both film and take-up mechanism and permit loading—or reloading—in seconds. The Super 8 requires no threading, no handling of film at all, and runs for a full 50 feet with no turnover at midreel. Gone, along with the midreel interruption, is the old guessing game of whether or not the second half was exposed—often resulting in double exposures or blank film, especially when shooting several reels. punched into the end loop now lets you know for sure that the film wants to go to the processor and not back into your camera.

But Super 8 means more than easy loading: the film itself, as well as its ingenious container, has been engineered to provide bigger, brighter, and sharper pictures. Bigger because the standard 8mm Kodachrome strip has been redesigned with much narrower sprocket holes closer than ever to the film edge, allowing 50 per cent more image area. This large image and a built-in pressure plate contribute to the over-all brightness and sharpness of the projected movie.

Your part of the job

In no time these various instant-picture cameras are ready to shoot. But, wait a minute. Is the picture ready? This is where you come in. Automatically and effortlessly as the camera operates, it cannot aim itself at an interesting subject nor decide how close to get to that subject. You must judge what is suitable for snapshots, what for movies. Don't take "still" subjects, like people posing or waving, for example, with a movie camera. Select natural and animated activities. Here are some very fundamental tips for getting the pictures that you and your friends will enjoy.

First of all, get acquainted with your camera. It's a new friend and, like a person, has individual capabilities and limitations. Your best introduction is the instruction booklet that comes with even the simplest equipment. Read it (or have someone read it to you) while you familiarize yourself with the camera. And please, even if you don't expect to refer to the booklet again, do keep it handy: it's important. Then, before you put in any film, aim the camera at different subjects. Look through the view finder and observe what you and the lens see at various distances. Some still cameras—for example, the Argus 260 Automatic for drop-in loading—give you clearly marked click stops for quick zone focusing on Closeups, Medium Groups, or Scenic Distances. For snapshots or movies, keep your eye close enough to the finder to see the entire frame, otherwise sizes and distances can fool you. Practice pressing any release gently, since a jar causes blurring. Handle the camera as if you were taking pictures, holding it steady and level; let your push-button finger learn its place without looking for it. And teach all your fingers and the case flap not to get in front of lens or electric eye!

Tips on lighting

While you put your camera through this dry run, notice the lighting on your pretend pictures. Although the camera can tell if there is enough light, it cannot advise you how to make the best use of that light, which generally should come from over your shoulder and fall on the picture subject in front of you. Always avoid letting the sun or a lamp strike your lens instead of your picture as this would result in a bad glare and an unlighted subject.

Let's suppose Santa complies with your request for a white Christmas and a specific camera, one you have already previewed so you can drop in the film and dash out to record the youngsters piling onto the sled. Try to see that the sun is partway behind you, slanting past one shoulder—and watch out for glare from that chrome trim or a shiny snow shovel. In early morning or late afternoon, or if it's cloudy, don't check on the light by directing your camera at the white snow (or a sandy beach if you are on vacation); hold it fairly close to the youngsters, or to something of similar light-value like your own hand or another person. Snow and white houses, as long as they do not cause glare in your lens, make excellent natural reflectors for supplementary light to fill in the shadowed side of your picture opposite the sunlighted side.

You can also use flash outdoors to fill in shadows, especially on faces, provided the daylight is less bright than the flash. A very easy way to increase snapshot exposure in doubtful light without flash is simply to raise a camera's built-in flashholder; this instantly slows the shutter speed to about 1/30 or 1/40 second, letting light into the lens for more than twice as long. Hold the camera extra steady, however, and don't have too much action during the longer exposures. With or without flash, keep within the distances recommended (on the flashholder and in the booklet) for your quick-and-easy camera, which is not meant for extreme closeups or great distances. Don't get nearer than 5 or 6 feet, particularly for faces; and don't expect that tiny flashbulb to do its best from much over 10 feet away.

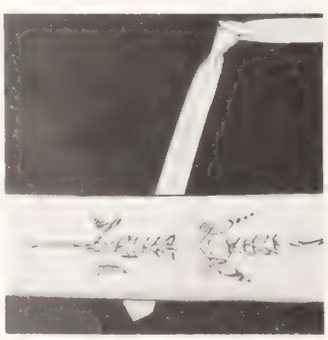
The absolute end

As luck would have it, knack with jacks add up to a stylish pair of bookends—a novel way to show off the novel. Concentrated weight in black and white metal contributes considerable flair to any area, be it the library at home or a study-room at school. 6" tall, $14 the pair exp. coll. Dorté Maesene, HG11, 14 Belle Place, Matawan, N. J. 07747.

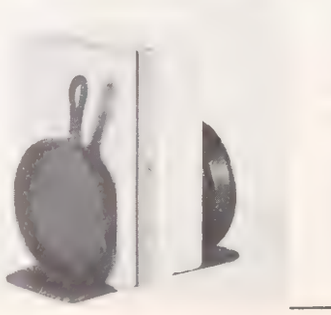
Wrought in Spain

Elegant black wrought iron as only the Spanish metal craftsmen can do it makes a handsome holder for a fresh bouquet or for a graceful pot of ivy. The planter is 19" high, 15" wide and would be lovely on a brick or rough plaster wall. $13.95 plus 30c post. Ziff & Co., HG11, Box 3072 Merchandise Mart Plaza, Chicago, Ill. 60654.



Suit yourself

Here is a fine tic tack toe set for anyone who wants to be different. Four-piece set includes genuine jade, tiger eye, neutral and sodolite-prince blue. Gold tone button hole chain keeps tie in place. Now he changes his tie anchor to complement his color scheme. $1.98 ppd. Spencer Gifts, 623 Spencer Bldg., Atlantic City, N. J. 08404.



True-you mirror

Go for a new way make-up mirror that literally bathes Eve in a balanced light; never casts a shadow on one side or the other. For Adam also, reversible glass (magnifying or regular) can be placed on a table or hung on the wall. 12¾" by 10" by 6⅞". $10.95 plus 50c post. RMS Designs, HG11, 311 N. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill. 60606.

Personal tie

Vertically an intricate pattern; horizontally your name appears. Tie of satin soft fabric fully lined. Hand-painted in oils resistant to dry-cleaning. Deep gold color blends with any wardrobe. Specify name. Four week delivery. Free catalogue. $3.98 ppd. Walter Drake & Sons, HG90, Drake Bldg., Colorado Springs, Colo. 80901.

SKILLED SKILLETS are satin-black heavy iron, and they hold the gourmet secrets of a "book-cook" in handsome order. 8" high skillet book ends are 5" across, on a 4 x 4" base that is felted and extends half way under the books. Sturdy indeed, and just $6.95 the pair. Tennessee Chromium Plating Co., 208 Louise Ave., Nashville, Tenn. 37203.

142 Hyacinth Vase from Denmark. Danish inspiration blossoms in the creation of a Hyacinth vase, made especially for growing bulbs indoors. Bulb is held aloft in the upper portion, as the roots dangle in the water below. Cracked glass vase, shaped in graceful roundness, in a bevy of bright spring shades. 4½" high. 1.50 each

1401B Fairy Whistle Set from Yugoslavia. Whistle a happy tune on these merry whistles, whittled out of wood. Equipped with finger holes, they can actually be played like small flutes. Bright red and green on yellow background. 5" long. Set of 3. 1.00

2164 Hummel Praying Cherub Pair. These serenely beautiful white ceramic pieces are among Berta Hummel's most exquisite little cherubs. Each piece is fashioned by skilled artisans in the Hummel factory. A striking contrast against Christmas greens. Each 3" high. 1.95 pair

1328 Kokeshi Doll Set from Japan. Exquisitely hand painted in many colors, with moveable heads, each set consists of 3 boy and 3 girl dolls. Open the biggest dolls, 3½" high, and inside are dolls 1½" and ½" high. Fun for collectors. 1.25

9062 Onyx Choker. Imagine, onyx white as snow! Carefully hand carved and polished by Mexican Indians in the state of Oaxaca, the choker makes a dramatic accent against everything from a simple black sheath to casual sweaters and skirts. Measures 17" in length. 3.50

2099D Namako Blue Vase. Namako porcelains are glazed with the richest blue imaginable. This little gem of the Japanese potter's art is a classically simple design for high or low arrangements. A perfect foil for any flower from a cluster of yellow daffodils to a riot of your favorite blossoms. 4½" high. 2.95

1382D Turtle Bottle Opener from Denmark. He may be slow when it comes to winning a race — but when it comes to popping the caps on your bottles — he's a winner! Stainless steel jaws in beautiful contrast to the mellow teak. He stands on rubber feet. 4" long, 2½" wide. 2.50

2024A Bearded Tompte from Sweden. Tomptes are friendly but fiercely independent little gnomes. Legend says they guard farm and family and on Christmas Eve Swedish children leave rice porridge for them. Ours is hand made of wood, with a red felt hat and a huge beard. 4" high. They like company, so buy a pair. 1.50 each

2141A Hemstitched Abaca Place Mats from the Philippines. Dine in elegance with these superbly woven place mats — handcrafted by the natives of Luzon out of rich natural abaca — a sturdy fiber with the look and feel of raw silk. Vibrant shades of Mandarin Orange, Temple Gold, or Ming Turquoise for a lively table setting. 18" x 12". Set of 4. 2.50

1334B Alabaster Owl from Italy. This wise old owl is a sophisticated fellow who'll stir you to intellectual pursuits. Crafted out of pure white alabaster with glistening eyes of golden glass, he can be used as a paperweight or sit distinctively on your knick-knack shelf. 2⅝" high. 2.50 each

2200 Animal Spread from India. Charming multi-colored, hand-blocked animal designs include rows of elephants trunk-to-trunk, marching horsemen and friendly tigers with curly-que tails. Perfect for drapes or bedspreads in a child's room or den. Colorfast, washable, hand-loomed cotton with cream-colored background. Measures 72" x 108". 4.50

2083A Lotus Bowl Pair from Japan. Serve your favorite soup or dessert in these delicate white porcelain bowls — or arrange fresh flowers in a bright, new way. Translucent china to enhance a table with supreme grace — as lovely as the floating lotus blossom itself. 4½" diam. 1.00 pair

9061A Jade Band from Hong Kong. This chaste, simple band of pure cool green jade is a piece of jewelry you will surely want for your collection. Jade, the most admired stone in the East, has a long history of romance and intrigue. Handcarved in lovely, translucent Frazer River jade by artisans renowned for their skill. Sizes 4 to 8 . . . be sure to specify. 4.95

1403A Hummel Good Night Boy from Germany. It's almost impossible to select a favorite from Bertha Hummel's children, but this charming cherub, we think, is particularly appealing. The lantern lighting his way to bed, the beautifully sculptured china and delicate hand painting by German artists, is all a delightful decoration. 3½" high. 3.95

1314 Horse Head Gusle with Bow from Yugoslavia. A fascinating one-string musical instrument you can play today as it was played 500 years ago. Intricately carved in dark fruit wood, it boasts a beautiful horse's head at one end, a taut calf hide stretched over its base. A triumph of Serbian folk art. 16½" long. 7.50

9003B Rosebud Brooch from Austria. A rose is a rose . . . is a treasured brooch — hand picked, hand dipped in a bed of pure gold — its beauty preserved forever. Each delicate nuance of the leaves is kept alive, while the rosebud curves gently. A wistful memento of romantic Vienna. 2⅜" long, 1½" wide. 3.95

9054A Glass Fruit Necklace. Bellissima! Delicioza! This fantasy in fruit looks good enough to eat — but better not bite, for it's made of hand blown glass! Luscious strawberries, apples and pears in glowing natural colors are offset by delicate green glass leaves. Another unique creation by our Italian glassblowers. 19½" long. 3.25

2012A Carmel Caravan from Bethlehem. Because it is hand carved in Bethlehem, this camel caravan is a Christmas gift of special significance. Richly grained olive wood is used by carvers to make the three camels led by a man on a humble donkey. 4" high, 16" long. 3.95

For contemporary elegance, nothing beats wool. Except Acrilan®.

The carpet below looks just like wool, doesn't it?

Well, it isn't.

That deep luxurious pile is pure Acrilan® acrylic fiber. It's warm as wool. As rich-looking as wool. In fact, it has all the advantages of wool, plus something extra.

Acrilan is easier to clean than wool. It's non-allergenic, mothproof, mildewproof. And Acrilan's bounciness is built right into the fiber.

These are the practical reasons for buying Acrilan. (The things your husband will care about.) But the best reason, of course, is this: carpets of Acrilan are beautiful.

The finest carpet mills make carpets of Acrilan . . . all labeled with the big red Acrilan "A". In rich colors and patterns, and in hundreds of styles—from the supermodern to Early American.

Look for carpets with the red "A". It means you are getting genuine Acrilan.

These are among the mills now licensed by Chemstrand: For Acrilan: Barwick, Cabin Crafts, Callaway, Coronet, Crestline, Downs, Forrest, Gulistan, Hardwick and Magee, Hightstown, James Lees, Loomweve, Magee, Masland, Monarch, Philadelphia Carpet, Roxbury, Wunda Weve. In Canada: Barrymore Carpets, Crossley/Karastan, Harding Carpets.

Hollywood plastic surgeon's amazing new book shows how any woman over 30 can in 10 short days!

Starting today this unique book by an internationally-known plastic surgeon will show you 77 ways toward making your face and body look younger, slimmer, far more beautiful than you have ever dreamed!

And you will do it often using nothing more than ordinary tap water, your own ten fingers, and the contents of your garden and your refrigerator.

Plus entire sections on how to sit, stand and walk as youthfully and gracefully as a top fashion model . . . tricks of Hollywood voice coaches, for putting electricity into every word you say . . . over 250 fascinating pages—jam-packed with thrilling new ideas on beauty, vitality and youth—yours to read from cover to cover in your own home without risking a penny!

Read it at Our Risk! Prove It at Our Risk!

Over twenty years went into the development of these techniques. The great majority of them are probably completely unfamiliar to you today. Once you put them to work, the results may be so startling—that you may find it hard to believe the difference in your appearance alone!

The name of Dr. Franklyn's book is, of course, THE ART OF STAYING YOUNG. Its cost is only $4.98 complete. It is sent to you without the slightest risk on your part. You read it for ten full days. If you are not delighted at the end of that time, simply return it for every cent of your purchase price back.

You have nothing to lose. A whole new world of beauty to gain. Send in the No-Risk Coupon below TODAY.

FROM Hollywood, California, comes what is perhaps the most thrilling beauty news of our generation.

From this moment on, forget everything you have ever heard or read about what "age must do" to your appearance. Forget anything you have believed about how "old" you "must look" at thirty . . . forty . . . fifty . . . or even sixty.

Because—starting with this moment—you are about to enter into a new world of beauty! A world where ordinary fruits are transformed into anti-wrinkle cosmetics. Where a simple daily motion with your chin could take years off the appearance of your throat and jawline. Where a six-second trick with your breathing may erase up to one inch from your hip measurement and your waist measurement in those first six seconds alone.

You have probably never even dreamed that these wonder-working techniques—and over seventy more—ever existed at all. But now they are given to you to prove without risking a penny. Given to you by the very man who has spent over twenty years of time devoted exclusively to helping some of America's most glamorous women forestall nature . . . control aging . . . stay young far beyond the commonly accepted years of youth!

When an Aging Movie Star Makes You Plead: "How Does She Look So Young?" Why Not Ask Her Doctor?

The name of this man is Dr. Robert Alan Franklyn, internationally known cosmetic surgeon.

Although you may never have heard of him by name before, you may see his results often when you go to the movies or switch on your television sets.

That magnificently beautiful singing star from World War II days, who now is seen often on TV—you know she must be getting old. How can her body be so young, so slim, so graceful. How can her face be so unlined and glowing? How does she seem to laugh at the very years that destroy other women?

Read the thrilling answer below

That world-famous actor and athlete, who didn't seem to have aged a day over many years—that seems only to have grown more handsome, more virile, more attractive with each passing year—how did he defy the wear and tear of time?

Read the thrilling answer below

Or that ravishingly lovely national beauty contest winner you've watched in the pages of your newspaper for almost as long as you can remember. How does she maintain her figure? What does she do that prevents weight from forming on her body? And what prevents age from etching her skin?

Read the thrilling answer below

Yes—dozens upon dozens of other celebrities whom you would recognize at a glance—seek out these secrets of long-lived beauty and youth!

And now this book gives you knowledge that these men and women traveled the world to learn. Over seventy-seven ways that you can use toward softening the effects of time . . . free your appearance from the prison of your calendar age . . . help bring back the exuberant glow of youth to every inch of your face and body!

For Example: To Start With—

In the very first hour alone, you are brought into an entirely new world of natural cosmetics—cosmetics whose incredible ingredients have been actually used to help heal wounds!

Here, for perhaps the first time, are cosmetics that use the true, beauty-restoring powers of nature itself to combat wrinkle-causing dryness . . . help smooth out that skin and crease lines by providing vital moisture that the skin would otherwise inevitably lose when you pass 30 or 35.

These cosmetics are made from nature's own flowers and fruits. They cost practically nothing. You can make them to perfection in minutes with any household blender. And this is what they can do for you!

They can clean your skin without detergents—increase the benefit you get out of your cleansing cream at night in seconds.

They can invisibly guard your skin against sun and wind and other elements in the air—help give your entire skin, all day, that lovely, healthy glow it would formerly take on only after a brisk walk or a full day in the open.

They can give you glorious shine to your hair without one extra motion in your regular shampoo—can make bleached or colored hair look radiant.

They can give you a nature-pure beauty mask that will completely relax you in just fifteen minutes—that will help draw out impurities from your skin, and help refreshen it in just fifteen minutes.

They can give you an entirely new way to take a sun bath next summer—spending less time to get more tan—a tan that lasts longer—and that's yours, without ugly peeling, or flaking, without freckles, without wrinkles, without pigment spots.

And this is just the beginning of what these cosmetics can do for your face alone—in the privacy of your own home—without risking a penny.

Just Wait Till You Try This— 5 Simple Face-Saving Exercises That Affect the Same Areas That Go Into a Face Lift

Now this unique book gives you information concerning amazingly simple facial movements that take as little as thirty seconds each, that help to bring that tired chinline back into shape . . . help give you a firm jawline . . . a well-defined and smoother throatline . . . even, if necessary, may help to improve that drooping contour that plagues so many women as they grow older!

Plus professional Hollywood makeup secrets that may have your husband gasping with delight the first time you use them. How to blot out shadows, especially under the eyes. Narrow a thick nose or wide jawline. Create fascinating high cheekbones. Look sunkissed and natural.

Plus a brand-new way to take a bath that soothes your nerves . . . makes your skin feel silken and smooth all over . . . even smoothes those unpleasant rough spots on the soles and heels of your feet.

Plus—and perhaps the most important of all—a complete section on trying to bring back the slim, young, graceful body you had as a bride—right down to getting rid of those tragic little ridges of loose flesh that may be developing on your hips, waist and thighs today!

How to Take Years Off the Appearance of Your Figure in as Little as 10 Days

The brand-new NATURAL Crash diet—the simple secret of how many a Hollywood figure stays that way. That virtually eliminates hunger pangs . . . starts you in a few thrilling days beautifully on your way to figure reducing.

Plus incredibly delicious, health-packed "Hollywood diet meals" you may never have dreamed existed. The new meat loaf, vegetable brown rice, stuffed grape leaves . . . a completely new kind of beef Stroganoff, steakettes Hong Kong, Potpourri Hors d'Oeuvres . . . cheese and walnut loaf desserts and others—more mouthwatering full-sized dinners that are specially designed to aid your body and figure.

Plus the ten-second tummy-tightener—that builds your own natural girdle—that may stun your husband the very first week you use it.

Plus "sweater girl" exercises. Exercises that you use to slim down hips . . . to help contour the limbs, especially those soft inside thighs that could ruin your figure in a bathing suit.

Mrs. Jones has found a better way to shop.

No traffic problems, no parking meters, no checkout lines.

Her independent Amway distributor brings the store to her door, whenever Mrs. Jones wants to shop. And yours will too. Amway distributors offer you a complete line of nearly 100 home, personal and car care products competitively priced — yet of such high quality that you must be completely satisfied, or your purchase price will be cheerfully refunded in full.

What's more, Amway distributors — men and women from your own neighborhood who are building a business of their own, often as a husband-wife team — bring you something more you can't buy from the store.

They bring an expert knowledge of how best to solve your household cleaning problems. And they demonstrate the superiority of Amway products to you, before you buy. Welcome your Amway distributor into your home . . . and find out how easy it can be to keep up with the Joneses.

Interested in Amway products or distributorship opportunity? Write: Amway Corporation, 7579 E. Fulton, Ada, Michigan. Or look under "Amway" in your telephone directory.

On This Day

Mend a quarrel. Search out a forgotten friend. Dissolve suspicion and replace it with trust. Write a love letter. Share some treasure. Give a soft answer. Encourage youth. Manufacture your logic to fit your deed. Keep a promise. Find the time. Forgive a grudge. Forgive yourself. Listen. Apologize if you were wrong. Consider others. Think of your family. Express your love. Examine your conscience. Think first of the other man. Be kind. Laugh a little more. Deserve confidence. Walk apart from malice. Discipline yourself to spend time on creative things. Think seldom of enemies, often of friends, and daily of those you love. Give thanks for your blessings. Pray.

"ON THIS DAY, Mend a quarrel. Search out a forgotten friend . . ."—modern golden rules which lend daily strength and inspiration, despite today's hectic world. Lovely natural linen hanger with stained pine top and bottom—chain hanger. 14"x18". Only $2.98 ppd. 2 for $5.75 ppd.

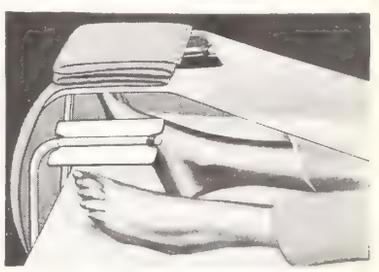
COMFORT - A Priceless Gift

NU-SLANT

Plywood Head or Leg Elevator raises your mattress 5 to 14" for greater rest and comfort. Like hospital bed but at far less cost, no sick room appearance. 7-adjustable heights—better than extra pillows. Head Elevation gives extra comfort in bronchial, diaphragm, breathing, heart ailments. Ideal for reading, TV. Leg Elevation eases varicose and other leg discomforts. Folds flat in place. Great convalescent gift. Deluxe Mahogany Plywood Model: Twin Bed Size $11.50; Double Bed Size $12.50. Aircel Board Model, 4 adjustments to raise 5 to 10": Twin Bed Size $8.75; Double Bed Size $9.95.

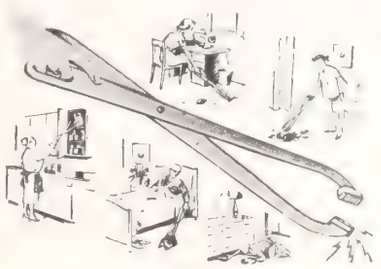
TRANQUILIZING PILLOW

When tense or all worn out from the cares of the day, relax in a warm sudsy bath with your head cradled in this patented Bath Pillow. Fatigue disappears, cares wash away—you feel new again! Wet-proof, keeps hair dry. Held in place with two suction cups, adjustable for height and softness. Gaily decorated with colorful flowers—choose Gold, Pink, Blue or Aqua. A gift of lasting comfort—$2.25.



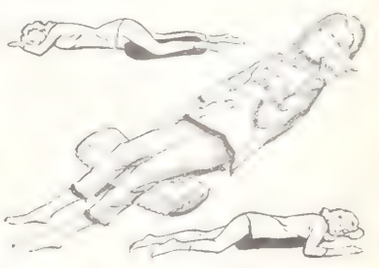
FOLDING BACK RESTS

Ingeniously improved Folding Back Rests give you the joy of firm sitting-up support when you read, eat, doze or watch TV. 5-adjustable positions for maximum comfort. Anchored by non-skid base. Elastic strap holds your pillow in place. Conveniently light—folds flat. DeLuxe Model of beautiful mahogany plywood with gold trim—$5.98. Or choose Standard Model in smart linen finish, 3 adjustments—$3.98.



BED BOARDS For Back Ache

This Folding Bed Board easily firms old or over soft mattresses and flattens sagging beds to fight back ache. Full 5 foot length (½ inch thick) folds conveniently into four 15" sections. At home or when traveling, you'll always be sure of a good night's sleep because you have firm back support. Cot Size or one side of a double bed—$4.95; Twin Bed Size—$5.95; Double Bed Size (in 2 sections)—$8.95.



BLANKET SUPPORT

End tight, confining, tangled covers! Enjoy new comfort and sounder sleep. Blanket Support lifts regular, contoured or electric blankets for cozy foot freedom. Tensions vanish—you relax—get to sleep sooner—awake refreshed. Holds bed spread and extra blankets neatly within easy reach. Avoids "hot spots" in electric blankets. Fits all beds. Arms fold flat. Ideal gift for restless sleepers—$4.98.

MAGNETIC E-Z REACH

Extends your arm 27 inches to bring everything within "easy-reach" without stretching or stooping. Scissors-like action with non-slip ends takes cans off shelves, far objects from tables, holds sponge to mop-up spills from the floor. Strong magnetic tip picks up pins, curlers, etc. Made of sturdy 5-ply imported Birch to be an attractive, useful gift. Ideal for arthritics and convalescents—$2.95.

KNEE & BODY CUSHION

New comfort any way you turn! Stomach sleepers tuck it under on hip and shoulder to lessen neck twist and to allow relaxing flexing of one leg. Side sleepers support top leg and knee. Back sleepers avoid straight leg discomfort when used under knees—like having a lounge chair in your own bed. Ideal for readers, convalescents, expectant mothers. Complete with 2 white washable zipper covers—$4.59.

In America's finest homes... true-to-life color with RCA Victor Solid Copper Circuit dependability

Add a spot of beauty to your home—and your home life. The superbly detailed cabinetry of RCA Victor Color TV adds a handsome grace note to any room, —whether your style choice is French Provincial, Early American, Contemporary, Scandinavian, Mediterranean or Oriental.

But think of what's in that beautiful cabinet. Enchanted hours of the most true-to-life Color TV you can buy. Natural. Sharp. Bright. And with RCA Victor Color TV, you have the assurance of long-term dependability through RCA Solid Copper Circuits—the circuits of the Space Age. They won't come loose. Won't short circuit. Won't go haywire. Remember this, too: RCA pioneered and perfected Color TV—has had more experience making Color TV than many manufacturers have in making black and white sets.

These are a few of the irresistible reasons why more people own RCA Victor than any other kind. Now it's your turn. Don't let another colorless day go by at your house.

Live Happily Ever After in "The Most Beautiful Kitchen of Them All"

You truly can! Scheirich Bronzeglow® Birch Cabinets are made with such integrity of workmanship and excellence of finish that they will last for years to come. Food preparation and clean-up are a joy in a kitchen as well planned as this. And think of the delightful decorating schemes that can be worked out with these handsome wood cabinets – your kitchen can be the most elegant room in the house! Ask your builder or kitchen dealer about our Bronzeglow Birch and Royal Birch cabinets. (Royal® Birch is one of the leaders in the trend toward rich, dark wood tones.)

Locust Grove was built near Louisville circa 1790 by William and Lucy Clark Croghan. A fine example of Georgian architecture, it was the home of General George Rogers Clark, Mrs. Croghan's brother, from 1809 until 1818. Restoration is being carried out by the Historic Homes Foundation. The H. J. Scheirich Company is co-sponsoring the work on the kitchen.

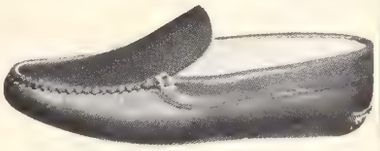
Jordan's Virginia Ham



Aged Like Vintage Wine

Albert E. Jordan's Virginia hams have been a must at Christmas for over a century. They have a flavor that has excited the gourmet for even longer. They are prepared in the same painstaking manner our forefathers used over 300 years ago. Selected from only the finest porkers, cured in gentle seasonings and sugar, and smoked over mellow hickory fires. Then comes the aging, about one year, and off to our kitchens. There our chefs glaze them with sugar, molasses and wine, and bake them to a golden brown giving them the savory nut-like flavor enjoyed by gourmets everywhere. Why not order now for you and your friends? 9 to 15 lbs. average weight, $1.98 per lb., postpaid in U.S. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Gas gives you the right heat for drying every fabric with this new RCA WHIRLPOOL Gas dryer!

Saves you money, too!

Blend the right heat (choice of five), the right speed (choice of two) and the right cycle (Automatic or Timed) for carefree drying of every fabric. Built-in Ultra-Violet lamp adds outdoor fragrance.

New sprinkler sphere. Just fill the sphere with water and toss into the drying drum (on Air setting) with clothes you want to sprinkle. New sprinkler sphere dampens clothes for ironing in a jiffy.

One big difference with Gas is its flexibility: just choose the heat, cycle and the speed that's best for the fabric you're drying—from the filmiest lingerie to the most rugged denims. Clothes are tumbled gently in air that is heated by Gas before it enters the drying drum. Your clothes are never exposed to damaging direct heat. Yet this new RCA WHIRLPOOL Gas dryer is super-economical, because it uses economical Gas. It will save you money load after load. Every woman deserves a new RCA WHIRLPOOL Gas dryer. Why not you? See your Gas company or local dealer. AMERICAN GAS ASSOCIATION, INC.

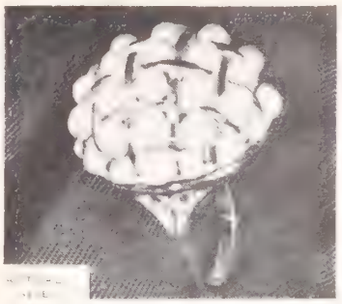
Christmas is many things.

A sudden swirl of laughing colors. A field, moon-paled and quiet under a heavy snow. A dusty box laden with silver tinsel and well-used lights. A note to the North Pole written with a dull pointed crayon.

It is a time of giving; a time of expressing gratitude and love. It is a time to talk and a time to think. A time to anticipate and a time to remember.

Christmas is many things.

But most of all Christmas is the home.



What better way to express your good wishes than by giving the magazine written for the home? The magazine embodying all of the hope and ideals and beauty of the home; of your home . . . HOUSE & GARDEN.

Splendidly photographed, with practical, stimulating articles, HOUSE & GARDEN is a remarkable gift for your discerning friends who take extra pride and interest in their home.

Easily ordered, modestly priced, this exceptional gift is further complemented by a handsome announcement card signed with your name.

This Christmas consider HOUSE & GARDEN . . . a gift to inspire the pleasant thoughts of you and of Christmas throughout the year.

NOW YOU CAN DECORATE YOUR OWN GLASS WARE WITH COLORFUL STAINED CASTOGLAS

For just a few cents and hours of creative fun you can transform inexpensive jars or bottles into objects of fine art. A plain glass cylinder or brandy sniffer becomes a colorful lantern or glowing candlelight—one of a kind. You can apply Stained Castoglas Polymer with a brush or spatula to any glass, ceramic, metal or wood surface. Or you can sculpture it or cast unusual ornaments in special molds. There's no end to the possibilities and the many ways this fascinating medium can be used to make dozens of distinctive decorative accessories for yourself, for gifts or to earn extra money. Start with a kit (Cat. No. 65-50) which costs only $4.95 postpaid. Or, if you prefer, send 25¢ for colorful How To Do It booklet. Write to Dept. 65-85M.

Fascinating Museum Series CHESS SETS

SOLID, HAND-CAST Authentic Museum Reproductions In Stone & Rosin . . . Richly Hand Glazed!

For those specially appreciative of the beauty there is in chess sets, we compare with these superb sets. Each solid piece has the heft and appearance of the original figurines. Only the finest specimens from the nation's greatest collections in Harvard's Peabody Museum, New York [illegible] Museum of the American Indian and Brooklyn [illegible] Museum were selected for reproduction. Each piece is a perfect replica of the original and guaranteed to be that the original could be handled in the museum. Each chess piece is easy to recognize because the King is a king, the Queen a female, the Bishop a priest or religious figure, the Knight an animal, the Castle a structure and the Pawn a dwarf god. Data is also supplied concerning each piece in chess play. Each set in Antique Series comes in a 18¾ x 9½ x 2" gift box with built-in playing board with museum motif. If you were fortunate enough to own the original pieces from which these chessmen were handcast, it would cost you tens of thousands of dollars

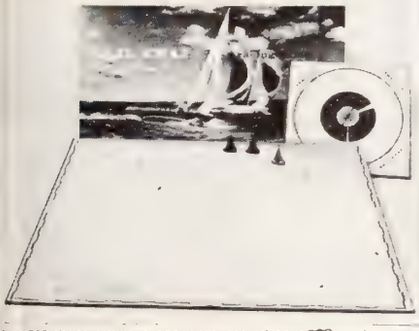
Love letters

Unlike love letters in the sand, decorative identification for over the door is forever. Plainly practical, they eliminate "wrong number" callers. Of weather-worthy aluminum, capital's 3" high, lower case 1½". Black or white. Initial $1.75 ea.; house number $1.25 ea. Add 35c postage. R. H. Smith. HG11, Box 947, Taunton, Mass. 02781.

What's his pleasure?



Or his practice? Intriguing pen stands are useful clues to his craft. Stock market— bull and bear with one red and one blue pen; caduceus—for doctors; scales of justice for lawyers, Portias, too! The cost is $5 each. Or you may choose the Forbidden Fruit, snake and apple for $3, plus 25c post. Alexander Sales, HG11, 125 Marbledale Rd., Tuckahoe, N.Y. 10707.

Golden halo

Long locks, short coifs, curly-tops, straight tresses—all held neatly and comfortably by a golden metal band. THE "JEWEL OF INDIA"
ROYAL CAVALRY SABRES

HAND-FORGED BY PUNJAB STATE ARMORERS MAGNIFICENT DECORATION
3 FEET LONG
INLAID BRASS HANDLE
PLUSH VELVET-COVERED SCABARD

These fine cavalry sabres from India, the home of the warrior Rajput kings, were proudly wielded by swift moving horse troops and are now collector's prizes, as well below the real value. The type of sabre was presented to Raja Man Singh on his victory against the Mughul ruler of India in the mid 19th century. Hand tooled, hand-engraved, overall length is a majestic 46". Brass handle has multi-colored center piece. Velvet scabbard is really striking. A fine engraved blade. A pair make a distinctive wall decoration. A solid, solid buy for $17.

Pair, $32.

HOW TO STRETCH CHRISTMAS

Getting ready can be more than half the fun

BY DORCAS BRENNAN CARLOS

Pity the poor sophisticate who cringes when he hears the first early strains of "I'm dreaming of a white . . ." you know what. Half the fun of the holidays in our house is in the expectation, the sixty days before December 25 when there are admittedly a million things to be done, but hundreds of sixty-minute hours to do them in. We like to stretch out the shopping, the cooking, the planning for parties and decorations over a good six to eight weeks. It makes the holidays themselves more meaningful, and every Christmas memorable in its own special way. And we know people who manage to stretch Christmas even further.

Last year, for instance, when neighbors of ours drove out to the country in search of Halloween pumpkins, they brought home on the tailgate of their station wagon a beautiful fat Scotch pine which they set in a tub of wet sand on their patio. "It gives me the most wonderful getting-ready feeling when I see it there," the lady of the house told us, "even when I'm only setting out the empty milk bottles."

One man we know picked out his Christmas tree at a local nursery early in the spring. Every time he drove past the place during the next several months, he took a look at the tree. In December he had it balled, tubbed, and delivered. When the holidays were over, the nurseryman planted it in a specially prepared corner of the garden. This year it is growing well, and the happy owner plans to trim it with bulbs and spotlight it to celebrate a part of his Christmas outdoors.

The feasibility of stretching the holiday spirit over several months got a real test from some friends on Long Island this year. They had the best Christmas of their lives—last July. A retired brother and his wife, living in California for the past ten years, had never in all that time been back East for Christmas. They were planning to visit New York during the summer to see the World's Fair so they decided that while they were there, they would stage an old-fashioned Christmas for the whole family. Their gift-buying was spread over the spring months—every time they saw something suitable for a young niece or nephew, they bought it and dressed it up in bright Christmas wrapping.

Come June and the whole collection—some 134 presents in all—were boxed and parcel-posted ahead to Long Island, along with a 6-foot artificial tree, lights, and decorations. When the couple flew in from California, they announced they were giving a party—a Christmas open house for the entire family. They trimmed their hosts' basement playroom with tinsel and glitter, set up the tree, cooked turkey and traditional holiday goodies (which were served outdoors on red-covered tables lit with fat hurricane candles) and entertained thirty-one members of a reunited family.

The Long Islanders liked the looks of their holiday decorated playroom so much they left it intact. The tree is up today, ready and waiting for December 25. The Californians have long since returned home, but they have a holiday memory to last them for another decade.

July might be a little early for most people to turn their thoughts to Christmas, but the first falling leaves are quite apt to be the cue for very young children to start their joyful anticipation. One mother we know claims that her nine pre-teens begin to dream of sugar plums and full stockings the minute she gets the last bit of beach sand swept out of the older ones' camp foot lockers. And she wouldn't think of discouraging them.

She happens to be a do-it-your-selfer par excellence, who doesn't even flinch at the prospect of having to produce nine costumes for nine different Christmas plays at school. Part of the secret of taking the holidays in stride, she claims, is always being ready for the unexpected (which with nine children comes rather often). Pretty sea shells, bits of driftwood, fascinating hunks of glass and stone are saved all year, along with bright-colored yarns, unusual pieces of paper, ribbons, scraps of cloth. At Christmas, the youngsters and their imaginative mother dip into the pile and turn out highly individual wrappings for all their gifts.

Because she enjoys gift-wrapping so much herself, she rushed the traditional Christmas party season last year and invited eight couples for a getting-ready get-together in early November. Every guest was told to bring along at least one present he intended to give for Christmas. The hostess provided ribbon, paper, and glitter plus some small prizes for "the most beautiful," "the most mysterious" et al., and everyone was free to vent his whims and fancies in his own fashion. The results were extraordinary. Even men who ordinarily left gift-wrapping to their wives were spurred on by the spirit of competition to some truly spectacular creations.

Our thoughtful hostess had also provided the wherewithal for wrapping packages to be mailed overseas. And the men made short work of turning them out in post-office-approved fashion.* (No woman guest would presume to compete with them.)

Mailing presents may sometimes seem a chore, but mail buying can be a tremendous comfort as I discovered a few years ago when a broken ankle left me pretty much housebound from October on. Combing through the stores' gift catalogues and the magazine shopping sections, I found all kinds of things I might never have thought to look for, let alone find, in a crowded store. If you allow yourself plenty of time and send for things early, I learned, you can accomplish almost all your shopping without ever having to leave the house. Naturally I missed all the excitement and fairyland atmosphere of the stores, but there was the compensation—for me, anyway—in being able to give more relaxed, therefore more considered, attention to each gift and the person to whom it was going. Gradually I began to feel less sorry for myself and my enforced confinement. Ever since then, going through the gift catalogues has become a ritual for at least part of our Christmas shopping, especially for "stocking stuffers."

Getting ready for Christmas is too much fun, we think, to be squeezed into a few hectic weeks starting the week after Thanksgiving. We like to anticipate the merriment, to enjoy every minute of the preparations, and stretch the joy over as long a time as possible.

* "Packages for mailing should be tightly packed in either double-faced corrugated cardboard, wood, metal, or fiberboard boxes, and securely wrapped in heavy paper and well tied." This year, gift packages going to distant points in the U.S., should be mailed by December 4 to ensure delivery before Christmas. The deadline for regular mail for Armed Forces overseas is November 10, for air mail, December 10.

Repressed Desires

Fourteen well-known personalities tell H&G what they want for Christmas

Last summer, months before anyone had thought of resorting to the usual self-conscious pre-Christmas evasions, we quizzed a number of prominent [illegible] what they would like to receive in the way of gifts—"preferably," we said, "something you wouldn't be likely to buy for yourself." Some of our respondents, their imaginations aroused, soared immediately into money-no-object land. Some, more shy, named things they could easily buy for themselves any day of the year, while others specified things no one could buy for them at any price.

Mrs. Lyndon Johnson, we learned, is among those with modest Christmas wishes. Her list starts: "velvet coat hangers, fancy bathing caps, a good book..." Fond of trees, she is grateful for a tree planted anytime, anywhere. It pleases her, for instance, when on an official visit to a city or a foreign country, to be given a tree in her honor instead of a plaque. Senator Margaret Chase Smith told us there could be no greater Christmas gift for her than to have her mother return for a few happy moments —"such as the first Christmas dinner in my own home in Skowhegan, at which all members of the family then living were present."

Some well-known figures dream of real estate: director Mike Nichols wants for Christmas, quite simply, Ellis Island, and singer Andy Williams has his eye on the Nymphenburg Castle. Writer Nan Fairbrother stands more of a sporting chance of seeing her wishes come true: "A small and exquisite walled garden. And a lake. Not a pond or a pool, but a lake large enough for a willow-island and for the far shore to be out of sight on misty mornings." Adele Astaire (Mrs. Kingman Douglas) asks for "an island all to myself in the South Seas and a small yacht with a crew of eight." (Mr. Douglas would prefer a racing stable with twenty good horses.)

No one expects dreamers to be practical, so impracticality didn't surprise us. One example: novelist John Updike wants for Christmas a harpsichord, although he cannot play a note and would have to leave the practicing to his wife. "It would be enough for me," he said, "to have the hovering squareness, the static pluckability of a harpsichord in the house, a kind of combination of a stuffed leopard and Mozart's bust." Fashion designer Mainbocher covets a Rolls Royce (along with how many others?). Washington hostess Perle Mesta would like French prints. Gourmet cook Julia Child understandably longs to see a steady parade of toothsome edibles arrive at her door—"two dozen large oysters from Bouzique or Belon once a week during the season; two fresh Dover soles and two pounds of fresh, tiny, peeled-and-cooked Denmark shrimps every two weeks; two pounds of asparagus picked within the hour..." Tennis champion Bill Talbert heads his Christmas list with plane tickets to Australia "to see the Davis Cup matches." Next he specifies "a basset hound with the biggest feet."

Some dream of acquiring a green thumb, or aids thereto. [illegible] Edward Wormley wants for one year the services of a Scotch gardener. Somewhat overwhelmed by the labor involved in building a traditional English flower garden, which he has been attempting to do weekends, he figures he could keep it going once it had a good start. And, along with Dr. Johnson, he believes the best English gardeners are Scotsmen.

Some people dream of time. Publisher Alfred Knopf, Jr., wrote us: "For Christmas I would like to find in my stocking an additional day to add to each week of the year. If I could be assured of fifty-two more days added to each of the remaining years of my life, I think I would never again ask for another blessed thing." For H&G's own repressed desires for Christmas gifts, please turn to page 270.

HOW TO ADD ZEST TO YOUR DINING ROOM

The disappearance and reappearance of the dining room are now mere incidents in history. Today almost every family wants a separate dining room—perhaps closed off, perhaps wide open to other rooms—but clearly set apart and dedicated to the delights of good food and good company. What has failed to rouse contemporary enthusiasm is the formal dining room, in so far as formal means stately, rigid, conventional. Elegance is back in style, but we like our elegance seasoned with a few chuckles.

By its very nature, of course, a dining room tends to be somewhat more formal than other rooms: the center table surrounded by chairs immediately establishes a certain formal symmetry. Since that arrangement happens to be the most convenient for serving more than six people, the custom endures. But, as you will see in the rooms on the next seven pages, the formality of the furniture arrangement is tempered today by a polite irreverence for almost every other decorating convention. The chairs, for instance, rarely match the table on any count: design, period, wood, finish. Summery furniture once earmarked for terrace or garden room is beginning to show up in the dining room. So are painted finishes, and they are by no means restricted to the single painted accent piece. Great splashes of white are brightening the room—especially in the form of white furniture. (A white lacquered table makes a marvelous background for a varied play of color in linens and china.) And simplified color schemes, such as a single clear hue plus white plus wood tones, keep the atmosphere lively—livelier, perhaps, than you would care for in a room where you spend more hours. The net result is a mood of gaiety, verve, even playfulness that banishes formality, but encourages the enjoyment of fine fare and bright conversation.

WHITE IN PROFUSION

Painted finishes and dark wood, blithely combined, impart up-to-date sparkle to a dining room furnished for the most part with traditional designs. The drop-leaf table, corner cupboard, and white-painted sideboard are antiques. The chairs, the deep-textured rug and paper-backed natural-cork wallcovering are contemporary. Interior design by McMillen, Inc. Painting by René Genis.

SUMMERY FURNITURE

Rattan chairs, left, crisp daisy-pied curtains, and a Regency armoire with bamboo turnings stretch the look of summer around the calendar in Mr. and Mrs. C. Gerald Goldsmith's dining room in Purchase, N. Y. But since the Goldsmiths have a brood of young children, the table is sturdy, easy to clean—a laminated plastic top on a polished chrome base—and the chair cushions are covered with wipable plastic upholstery. At end of room, a pair of sliding doors leading to children's playroom have panels of semi-translucent plastic with a molded rondel pattern. Interior and chairs both designed by Edward M. Benesch.

SUMMERY PATTERNS

Bright cane-patterned wallpaper, above right, on upper walls and ceiling gives a fresh morning-room look to Mr. and Mrs. Lester Dundes' small Long Island dining room—and along with the mirrored back of the serving niche helps visually to expand the space. There is nothing reticent about the red of the paper or the chair cushions, but the white dado, white furniture (rattan chairs again), and off-white rug keep it in its place. Exuberance overhead: a contemporary glass chandelier topped by a mirror so it looks like a sparkling sphere of light. Interior design by Inman Cook.

SIMPLIFIED COLORS

One bold color plus white, right, in Mr. and Mrs. Alan R. Morris' New York dining room compose a simple but unorthodox background for an equally unorthodox partnership of traditional furnishings with a sleek white lacquered modern table. (Chairs are similar to those on page 241, but note reversal of finishes.) Wallcovering is paper-backed burlap. Abstract gouache by Alexander Liberman.

ELIOTT GRIGSBY

THE EXCITEMENT OF ART

Fine paintings and sculpture, left, lend more verve to a dining room than you could hope to attain by any other means. Art dealer Samuel Kootz and his wife have sublimated everything in their New York dining room to the paintings by Parker and Soulages and the sculpture by Arp and Picasso. The latter, who is a friend of the Kootz's, created especially for them the sculptured silver centerpiece plate.

TABLE OF MANY TALENTS

The latticework on ceiling and wall, above, and the pair of lattice columns in interior designer Richard Himmel's Chicago dining room hint at the tongue-in-cheek extravagance of an eighteenth-century solarium. Big square table is actually four small pedestal tables which can also be used individually to seat foursomes or in pairs as buffets. Monkeys are part of Mr. and Mrs. Himmel's collection of ceramic simians.

CHINOISERIE UPDATED

A shaggy white rug of Greek goatskin, left, makes a saucy companion for dignified eighteenth-century furniture, including chairs touched with chinoiserie fretwork and covered with bright yellow silk damask. Chinoiserie is also the theme of the wallpaper that covers the chimney breast and the screens that flank it, but the colors—white on dark blue—give the room a fresh and lively air. Furnishings from B. Altman & Co. For shopping information, see page 313.

IMAGINATIVE SALVAGE

A slate floor, opposite page, multipaneled doors from an old Spanish convent, and a highly imaginative assemblage of furniture create a kind of racy rusticity in fashion designer Pauline Trigère's country dining room in Lewisboro, N. Y. One pair of doors frame the opening into the garden room, the other pair, hinged to fold back, screen the kitchen when the sight of it is unwelcome. The dining table and serving counter were put together from teak tabletops salvaged from Brooklyn's old Fulton Café, each oblong top inset with a pair of rounds or squares of pink marble that once topped smaller café tables in the same establishment. The teak tops have been divorced from their mother-of-pearl studded aprons which now form the bases of ottomans in the garden room.

How to give dashing parties

A lively band of Philadelphians entertain each other regularly with fine fare and imagination

In the City of Brotherly Love, there is a group of friendly souls who dine together about six times a year. But they don't merely have one another to dinner. They give fêtes, and pretty wonderful ones. Since each host or hostess (there are thirteen all told) performs only once every two years, he is quite willing to pull out all the stops to guarantee a gala. When his turn comes, he or she dreams up a theme, names the date (which may be New Year's Eve, St. Swithin's Day, or just next Monday) and summons the guests by a device sometimes as simple as the telephone, often as elaborate as a handmade valentine that would make a collector drool. Depending on the occasion, guests are told to come dressed as Mexicans or Malays, or in black tie. Whatever the rig, they arrive at a house that may have been transformed into a Montparnasse boîte (if the menu is French), or simply filled with flowers. Table settings range from classic simplicity to wild extravaganzas comprised of anything at all—glitter, lemons, Christmas ornaments, birds. There is always a written menu, enchantingly composed. (Once it was printed on a card glued to the underside of a cookie made in an old sheaf-of-wheat butter mold. Another menu, somehow, was written on an egg.) And always, the food is Lucullan and magnificently presented—an amazing feat since it is turned out by self-taught cooks who learned out of self-defense.

The whole idea started one Sunday night seven years ago when two couples drove to New Jersey for supper. This was a habit they indulged because none of them particularly liked to cook, and because, when it comes to apéritifs, Philadelphia on Sunday night is drier than a bone. That Sunday turned out to be a fizzle of an evening—martinis so cloudy and steak so overdone that on the way home they decided they had had New Jersey and henceforth on Sunday nights they were going to cook if it killed them. Thus was born the Philadelphia Association of Gourmets, a title chosen with collective tongue-in-cheek since the founders could barely boil an egg.

Professionally, the Gourmets are a mixed bag: four painters (two of them teachers as well), an advertising artist, an interior designer. The group also includes a photographer Gourmet, a lawyer, a retired engineer, the owner of a trucking firm, a merchandising expert, and two non-working wives. Although six members are married, men and women entertain singly—a custom established by lawyer Jerome Kurtz who, when still a bachelor, gave the first bang-up dinner. Home from a year in France, taste buds still ecstatic, he bid his friends to a collation described on a menu of his own making—a little photomural of the impish gargoyles that romp over the cathedral at Chartres.

As spectacular to look at as it was to eat, the dinner, 1, started with trout glazed with aspic (under the poster). The formidable menu, 2, was written in French over a delightful hand-painted sprig of herbs. The Gourmets helped themselves to the first course, then sat at a table, 3, very simply set with crosswise runners. Terminating the buffet like a marvelous sculpture, the croquembouche for dessert, 4, was already in evidence: a tower of tiny puffs, glazed with caramel and filled with rum-flavored butter cream. The golden bird, 5, a Midas-touched recipe from India, was first roasted, then covered with edible gold leaf (the "glue" is butter). A galantine of chicken, 6, made a cool complement to the hot turkey. Husband Jerome Kurtz, 7, the party's Boniface.

BRIMMING WITH AMBROSIAL IDEAS, painter Elaine Kurtz' Golden Turkey dinner, opposite page, was set forth in splendor on her sideboard, an almost room-length bank of cabinets hung on a wall of corrugated perforated board, a wonderful hanging spot for pictures and drawings that change with the Kurtz whims. Like most of the Gourmets' dinners, this one was a buffet. (The food is far too photogenic to wait its turn in the kitchen, unseen; only in the case of something like a hot soufflé is a dish brought in at the last moment. But occasionally there is a maid in the offing to help serve.) And as always, having helped themselves, the entourage sat with elegant éclat at a beautifully laid table. (Except at picnics, the Gourmets wouldn't dream of balancing a plate on their knees.) This particular meal was unique in that it was a Command Performance with a menu made up of some of the hostess-chef's special triumphs, dishes the Gourmets had never forgotten, and couldn't wait to sample again. Pleased as Punch, Mrs. Kurtz fell to and re-created for this red-letter party the request numbers down to the last magic pinch of monosodium glutamate.

BEFORE THEY SCATTER FOR THE SUMMER, the Gourmets bid each other bon voyage with a fête champêtre. Most of them like to travel while school is out, and all of them feel that 90 in the shade is not the proper temperature for a rare old Médoc. But none of their black-tie dinners has delighted them more than Carl Steele's Renoir picnic on the canal at New Hope, Pa. Mr. Steele (right: the gentleman in the straw hat, stage center) instructed his guests to fetch to the scene—a horse-drawn barge—their own china, silver, and wineglasses. (He was setting no tables.) They were also told to look as Impressionistic as possible in costumes evocative of Renoir's paintings—a command that brought forth a flurry of parasols and peg-top pants which set old New Hope on its ear. Embarking at one o'clock, the masquers arranged their feathers and flowers and fell to at the bar as the old white dobbins drew them gently downstream. At sundown, they were back, full of food and wine, ready for a nap and, to keep the pleasant memory green, a page or two of Colette.

The summons to "Le Déjeuner des Canotiers" arrived at each Gourmet's doorstep in a picnic hamper. 1, the carrier-to-be for a plate, a glass, and silver. The printed menu, 2, designed by Mr. Steele in Maxim's restaurant style, now rests in glory in Gourmets' scrapbooks. A truffled pâté de foie, 3, was the first course, followed by Lobster Bellevue, 4, a classic dish that looks like a Flemish still life, is really lobster salad hidden under the shell, which is decked with a garland of lobster-meat medallions and truffle-topped hard-cooked eggs finished with an attelet of artichoke hearts. The picnic table was laid with a double cloth: polka dots over stripes. To finish off the lobster, a huge mound of fruit, 5, a noble assembly of cheeses, and, a distinguished American

Sunday brunch sparked by Vienna, city of dreams and whipped cream

Gayer than springtime was Mr. Steele's brunch table, 1, with bowls of forget-me-nots, a hurricane shade filled with eggs, a blue cloth and whacking big varicolored coffee cups. The napkins, 2,—handsome squares of white linen—were printed with the menu circled with a blue fruit-and-flower wreath. First course, 3, was a mélange of fresh fruits that bore no relation whatsoever to [illegible]

THE DREAMINESS OF VIENNA is known to interior designer Carl Steele only through its cook books, but these gastronomic Baedeckers lead him up wondrous paths. For a recent Sunday brunch, left, he gave his guests among other things Viennese Layer Pancakes, a simple name for an astonishing dish, cut like a pie and built of thin crêpes spread alternately with creamed chicken, creamed ham, and mushrooms. The crêpes are layered in a spring-form pan (with the sides removed, they look like a cake), covered with Mornay sauce, slathered with Parmesan cheese, then set in the oven until glazed—a gleam later reflected in Gourmet eyes.

Classic French dinner as varied as Larousse Gastronomique

Garlanded with mimosa and sprigged with pale yellow napkins, the Kurtz board, 1, awaited the guests. On the sideboard, the first course—a cucumber-gilled cold salmon. Looking forward to the saddle of lamb she did not cook, Elaine Kurtz, 2, made the most of a night out of the kitchen. The menu, 3, was hand-blocked in sepia on heavy beige paper, and the cocktail hour was observed, 4, with a truly Gallic absence of anything more alcoholic than a choice of apéritif wines. The duck, 5, looking not at all like a duck, was a splendid thing coated with aspic and paved, like a mosaic, with sliced olives—a trick that can be worked with any mousse or simple pâté. Off in a corner was the cheese and liqueur course, 6, the cheese ripening to warmth, the liqueurs (white alcohols like Framboise and Mirabelle) chilling.

FAITHFUL TO FRANCE AND HAUTE CUISINE, Jerome Kurtz repeatedly proves he is as adept a chef as a lawyer. At one of his dinners, below left, the Gourmets tucked into a feast that included a whole cold salmon, a saddle of lamb, and a magnificent concoction of duckling and olives in aspic. Disdaining help, Mr. Kurtz sets the table himself, occasionally trailing down the center an elegant little garland of flowers or ferns that hold up without water. A purist, he likes white linen tablecloths, big napkins, and plenty of elbowroom.

DESIGNED TO FOOL THE EYE, but still tickle the palate, a trompe l'oeil dinner, opposite page, top, devised by Elaine Kurtz, made Gourmet history. Everything came to the table incognito: soup, a chinoiserie made of a raw egg cupped in a nest of crisp noodles, then doused with hot consommé; fish in the form of quenelles, then her specialty, the fantastic Dindon d'Or (see page 248). Dessert was a cake baked in a lamb mold, iced, fleeced with coconut, brought alive with currant eyes, and throned in a bright bed of ice cream flowers.

HOLIDAY JUBILEES are staged by the Gourmets, opposite page, below, only when one of them feels both sentimental and like cooking up a storm. Having chosen Valentine's Day because he liked valentines and had a new recipe for Scandinavian fish-pudding, designer Arthur Williams made his plans known (black tie, please) with lace-paper invitations so charming that each Gourmet sat down and made an acceptance valentine for the host. Dinner began with what looked like the Saint's own birthday cake—the fish, eloquently molded—and ended with the aptest of all desserts, coeur à la crème, the cottage-and-cream-cheese delicacy molded in little heart-shaped baskets.

'rompe l'oeil feast: masquerade eight courses

For ce mats, 4, pretend plates of paper e decorated with pasted-on cutouts fruit and sausages. Looking like Ma- ca, 5, the evening's vegetable was a oy cabbage, stuffing hidden between leaves. The main course, 1, served with caper sauce and red Bordeaux, a leg of lamb [illegible] hearty appetites well-whetted by cocktails, 2, since Mr. Williams believes in firewater for St. Valentine. At the dining table, 3—a valentine in itself, ablaze with tulips, ranunculus and freesias surrounded by a lacy-patterned cloth—the Gourmets helped themselves to the mousse-like fish pudding, 4, served with a sour cream dill sauce. (The paprika heart was powdered on with the help of a template.) The menu, 5, announced all this, with love—and hearts.

The most beautiful country in the world to painter Georgia O'Keefe is the rugged land that surrounds her weekend house at the Ghost Ranch northwest of Santa Fe.

DESERT TRADITIONS, DECORATIVE RICHES

BY MARY ROCHE

The two states that lie wholly within the boundaries of the Southwest desert are a land of paradox. It is an old land (where else in the U. S., would you find ruins of medieval houses?), yet it is the laboratory of the atomic bomb. It is a barren land, as desolate in places as the moon, yet wherever there is water, it is very fertile, lush with trees and flowers. It is a land with an architectural style of its own, yet the region is a cultural melting pot, a blend of the aboriginal Indian, the Spanish (flavored with Byzantine, Moorish, Aztec), and the westward-moving American. To cap the irony, this land of cowboys and Indians, to a visitor from almost any other part of the U. S., seems as foreign in flavor as Portugal or Scandinavia. It is hard to remember you are in the U. S., when you walk down the busiest shopping street of Santa Fe and hear everyone you pass speaking Spanish. It is even harder when you find yourself—as I did, in a miniature supermarket one Saturday afternoon—the only Caucasian in the place, surrounded by chatter in the inscrutable language of Navaho.

One fact about this region, however, is uncontradictable: it is big. Arizona and New Mexico together are larger than either France or Spain, more than twice the size of Italy. I visited them for the first time a year ago on a three-week trip that included stays at Santa Fe, N. M., and Tucson, Phoenix, and Flagstaff, Ariz., plus a 700-mile drive across the Navaho Reservation. I returned for another ten days in the spring. Yet I saw only a minor part of what the two states have to offer. To see it all would take a dozen visits or a decade of living there.

My itinerary started in Santa Fe, with a visit to architect Alexander Girard and his family. "We are very primitive here," said Mrs. Girard as we drove away from the airport the night I arrived; "we live in a mud hut, you know." But her house didn't look much like a mud hut as we pulled into the parking space: it was glowing with luminarias (candles set in wet sand in brown paper bags) lined up along the steps and porch. They had been set out to greet the arriving guest, and never in my life had I felt so warmly welcomed. When we entered the house, I noticed a wonderful smell. From the fire in the fireplace, I was told—piñon wood. Eventually I discovered that the smell of burning piñon is the characteristic smell of Santa Fe. (You can buy little cones of piñon shavings to take home and burn like incense, but the result is only a pale reminder.) I was also fascinated that first night by the way the fireplace logs were set on end (no andirons) to form a tepee—the approved fashion of laying a log fire in the state of New Mexico.

Design spans three continents

Southwest rooms, LEFT, with adobe walls, dark beams, and deep-set windows welcome marvelous mixtures of designs from all over the world. Architect David C. Mackie and his wife brought to Tucson, from their former home in Kansas City, antiques and architectural ornaments collected on numerous trips: in their dining room, 1, a wrought-iron gate from Spain, an old English corner cupboard, French dining table and chairs, Spanish rug, Chinese objets d'art. In their bedroom, 2, a pair of armoire doors from Paris that screen Mrs. Mackie's dressing room, 3. The Eliot Porters brought to Santa Fe from Boston their family heirlooms, mostly American: in their dining room, 4, a collection of old Cantonware displayed in an early nineteenth century cabinet. In their living room, 5, a New England sea captain's brass-bound chest below a wood-grilled window hung with typically New Mexican lace curtains. In nearby alcove, 6, a Victorian marble-topped washstand turned bar. In the Goodwin ranch guest room, 7, a four-poster bed and blanket chest, family heirlooms brought from New York.

Architecture spans the centuries

The Southwest regional style has prehistoric roots, yet readily lends itself to contemporary adaptation. 1. The White House cliff dwelling at Canyon de Chelly, Ariz., occupied by the Anasazi from mid-eleventh to mid-thirteenth centuries, was built of local stone, at the mouth of a cave 30 feet above canyon floor. 2. Navaho Tribal Council building at Window Rock, Ariz., is modern octagonal adaptation of traditionally round Navaho kiva or ceremonial chamber. 3. A breezeway of Alamos arches connects main section of Goodwin ranch house with workroom wing. 4. Recently built house in Tucson resembles Territorial style: burned adobe blocks, decorative cornice, bird-cage window. 5. Steel and glass house designed by Walter N. Beadle for his own family derives nothing from tradition, but looks surprisingly at home in sunny, sandy landscape of Phoenix. 6. Imposing adobe house near Santa Fe's cathedral has handsomely paneled doors, rough-hewn round pilasters and capitals, asymmetric window arrangement. 7. In the William Heusers' living room in Scottsdale, Ariz., a molded adobe chimney breast, molded shell niches. 8. The Melvin Ritters' Tucson house, designed by Ambrose, Swanson & Associates, combines traditional dark beams with modern open plan, floor-to-ceiling glass walls. 9. In Scottsdale, Paolo Soleri and his students experiment with adventurous structures of concrete cast on earth mounds. Soleri's pottery and bronze patio bells tinkle in gardens all over U. S.

When we drove around Santa Fe the next day, I began t understand that the phrase, "mud hut," was not entirely an exag geration. For, architecturally, Sante Fe is a remarkably homoge neous city, and most of it is quite literally built of mud, otherwis known as adobe. The Indians had used adobe for centuries befor the Spanish missionaries came and showed them how to mix i with straw, cut it into blocks, and leave it to dry in the sun. Tha form of the materials, known as *un*burnt adobe and still use for sheds, garages, etc., is usually covered with an adobe finishin coat applied like plaster. But it is less durable than the burnt adob developed later—blocks hardened by baking in a kiln.

There are two versions of the regional adobe architecture The earlier is the Pueblo-Spanish style: simple one-story adobe coated buildings with deep-set windows, softly rounded corners and more or less flat roofs supported by round beams or vigas tha project from the walls. The walls are also pierced with wood wate spouts or canales for draining the roof. Often the vigas an canales are matched by dark wood pillars capped by simpl carved capitals, to decorate a façade or support a porch o portale. The interior walls are plastered with a whiter form o adobe that also lends itself to softly molded fireplaces, niches, an window reveals.

The later adobe architecture, dating from the American oc cupation of the region in 1846, is known as the Territorial style It consists of burnt-adobe-block walls topped by ornamenta cornices of brick and marked by other more sophisticate details such as bird-cage windows. In Santa Fe the adobe tradi tion is still so much alive it is often hard for a visitor to tell seventeenth-century restoration from a house built forty year ago or one finished yesterday.

On the whole this architecture is rather severe, which ma account for the regional fondness for decorative embellishment Since Spanish days, richly carved or paneled wood has been use for ceiling beams, grilles, doors, and shutters. Stained-glas windows, while not common, are more prevalent than in othe parts of the country. And although the walls of their room are almost always white, Southwesterners have a free hanc with a paintbrush—applying charming motifs to complemen the architecture, the furniture or even (Continued on page 316)

The flair for embellishment is irrepressible

1. In entrance hall of a Tucson house: a canopy painted on the ceiling; a santo niche adapted from 2, a niche at San Xavier mission. 3. At the Girards', Dutch door composed of mélange of different woods with serrated cutout in upper section. When door is open, cutout frames picture of boy with grapes. 4. At St. John's College in Santa Fe, Navaho rug of unusual coloring. 5. Under portale of Santa Fe Opera's guest house, stationary adobe bench with back painted on wall. 6. Detail of San Xavier façade richly encrusted with adobe relief. Mouse sitting on inner terminal of volute is countered by a cat in volute on opposite side. In the Heusers' house: 7. Front door opens into long hall with glassed-in arches, carved beams, fountain in molded, shell-topped niche at far end. 8. Outdoors, similar arches frame sandy, flower-studded court. OPPOSITE PAGE: In Edward Holler's house in Nogales, Ariz., a carved polychrome wood chandelier, an elaborate Venetian mirror; a fanciful wood structure, once part of a Hollywood set, fitted with shelves for Mr. Holler's collection of Mexican masks.

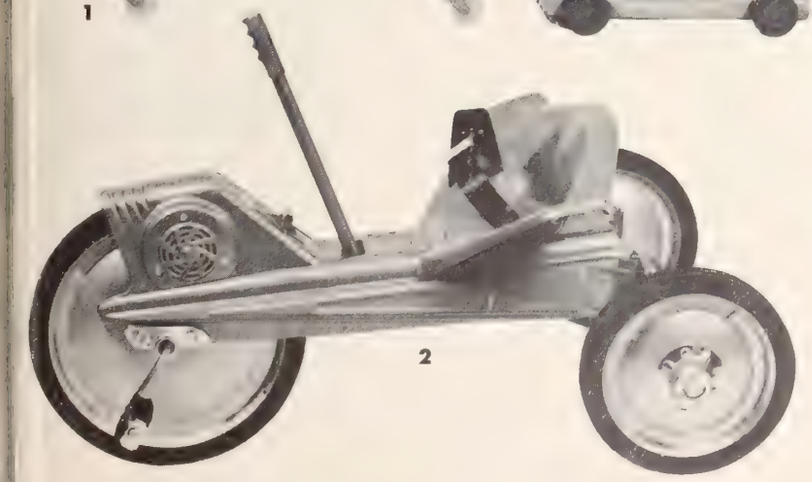
Animal whimsies

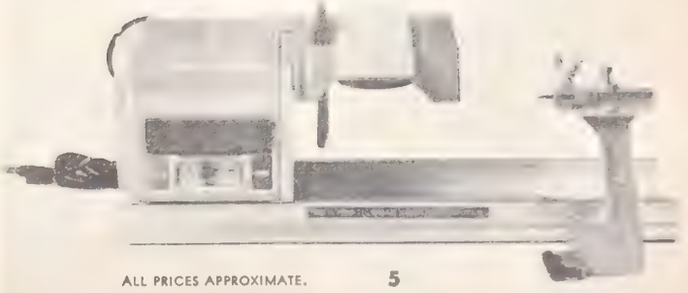
1 Brown and white alpaca fur rabbit with bright blue glass eyes from Peru for any child who likes to hug a soft cuddly little creature at bedtime. 12 inches long. Halle Bros. $10.50 ppd. 2 Hand-molded ceramic armadillo money bank from Colombia, with a tough-as-a-tank brown shell to make him the perfect guardian of a horde of pennies. 10 inches long. Abraham & Straus. $5. 3 Plump little beanbag animals called "Bearish" and "Bullish," made of soft kid trimmed with felt. 5 inches to the tops of their heads. The Pink Balloon. $5.50 ppd., each.



Personal prizes for a child growing up

1 Breakfast set—bowl, plate, and mug—of white ceramic printed with green apples. Plate 7½ inches diameter. Bo-Danica. $7 ppd., the set. 2 Black lacquer box with a removable compartmented divider in bright contrasting lacquers for a young girl's private treasures. 9 inches long. Azuma. $11 ppd. 3 For a pretty face: orange lacquer hand mirror. 10 inches long. Charles E. Shoop. $6.50 ppd. 4 Woven stylized tapestry in muted colors crafted by the Salasaca Indians of Ecuador. 29 inches square. United Nations Gift Shop. $13 ppd. 5 For a boy's library: black enameled book ends stenciled in white with the Jolly Roger. Bullock's. $9 for the pair.

On-the-move marvels for young jet setters



1 Blue enameled wooden horse and pull cart laden with colored blocks, the horse big enough (17 inches long) for a small toddler to sit astride. F.A.O. Schwarz. $11.45 ppd. 2 Blue enameled steel tricycle—the "X-15"—made by Mattel with airplane-type steering rod and safety belt. When pedaled, tricycle makes splendid v-rroom, v-rroom, v-rroom noises. 36 inches long. Gimbels, Philadelphia. $35.45 ppd.

Inspiring plunder for hobbyists

1 Easy-to-operate camera, called Instamatic 154, designed to take a "flashcube"—an attachment for shooting four flash pictures without changing the bulbs. Gray carrying case. Kodak. $29. 2 Classic guitar for budding Segovias, of spruce and maple with rosewood finger board and bridge, nylon strings. G. Schirmer. $92.49 ppd. 3 Set of oil paints packed in a varnished wood carrying case. Set includes palette, canvas board, turpentine, linseed oil, brushes, charcoal, palette knives. Case, 16½ inches long. By Grumbacher. Macy's $28.49. 4 Portable stereo phonograph with detachable speakers, wood case covered with washable dark gray fabric. Case closed, 15¼ inches wide. By Lionel. $25. 5 Children's electric power shop that works four ways—as a lathe, drill press, sander, or jig saw. 15 inches long. By Mattel. $25.

There is even less accounting for patterns of self-denial than there is for taste. People who do not otherwise seem noticeably stoic almost always draw a firm line—somewhere—between what they consider justified expenditures and unjustified self-indulgence. The logic of their thinking is not always easy to follow. They are likely to spend a small fortune, if they have it, on paintings or horses, boats or travel, yet bravely deny themselves some small longed-for object that costs, in comparison, only a pittance. If you are astute or lucky enough to detect one of these repressed desires, you have hit on a perfect Christmas gift.

To complement our queries of famous people (see page 239) we decided to ask our fellow workers what they would like to have, but wouldn't buy for themselves. Most of them replied in generic terms, but since we enjoyed the thought of pampering our own, we tracked down some very fine specimens indeed.

One editor mentioned that she has always wanted a set of very special dessert plates for dinner parties; she would be enchanted with plates of black and white Spode bone china, 1, patterned with a scene of a medieval Italian town and available at Tiffany for $6.60 each. An aluminum hot tray, 2, would be welcomed by a young couple who love to give impromptu parties, but suspect they are beginning to try the patience of a best friend next door whose food warmer they are forever borrowing. This one by Salton is $19.95. An artist said a fabulous gift well worth waiting for, 3, would be the promise of hundreds of daffodil bulbs to be delivered next autumn for planting. She would like 3,000 bulbs (as long as she is dreaming) to plant in glorious unmixed ribbons and drifts of color—500 bulbs each (approximately $18 per hundred) of yellow Dutch Master, white Mount Hood, white with orange Dick Wellband, white with scarlet La Riante, yellow clustered Trevithian and red-margined yellow and white Actaea.

A home-movie buff says that when he is editing film in his windowless basement workshop, what he needs, in lieu of lissome maidens waving palm leaves or ostrich plumes, is a small fan of some sort—perhaps that personal electric desk fan, 4, $13.95 ppd., at Gotham Gifts. Another man dreams of a superb and ancient sculpture for his garden, in his wildest dreams something as glorious as the more than 1,000-year-old 10-inch stone figure from Costa Rica, 5, available from Frank Caro for $1,500 exp. coll. A young father who enjoys day-long jaunts to the country with his wife and two children says he would feel like Croesus if someone were to give him a picnic set, especially one as splendid as the 15-inch-square leather-fastened basket made in England, 6, that holds cutlery, plastic dishes, food boxes, jars, and vacuum bottles (enough for four people), available at Matthews for $109 ppd. A sari to use as a wall hanging for a very special party and then to turn into a slender evening dress is the hope of one of our decorators—for instance, the 5½-foot-long Banarasi red, blue, and green sari with gold embroidery, 7, at Jordan Marsh for $80 ppd. A writer who has hesitated for years to buy herself a pair of grape shears, 8, was delighted with our discovery of a pair by Christofle at Baccarat for $6.50 ppd. A Sunday violinist longs for an antique music stand handsome enough to be given a permanent spot in her living room. She admitted she would be more than pleased with a Victorian stand, 9, with a mahogany rack and a lion's-paw wrought-iron base available at Doris Dessauer through decorators.

A young assistant who had shyly mentioned a bud vase was charmed when she saw this small simple one, 10, from Bonniers for $4.50 ppd. A cake plate and cover would please a mother whose house is filled with children and where "it's always somebody's birthday." The festive faïence set from Italy, 11, is white with green fronds; available at Lord & Taylor for $24.

The secret longing of a woman who hates to put on reading glasses every time she wants to look up a telephone number or scan a menu turned out to be a magnifying glass. This one with a sterling silver bamboo handle, 12, would be a happy choice; $12.50 from Tiffany. An old fireplace-stove was the dream of a young couple who recently bought a weekend cottage in the Connecticut hills. For them we found a [illegible] a pre-1840 Franklin stove, 13, by Quakertown [illegible] Jackson, Inc. Another antique fancier surprised us [illegible] country auctions, but said she dreads the dri[illegible] and has always wanted, but never bought, a battery [illegible] emergencies. She'd like a "Big Beam" hand lamp 14, with [illegible] light attached—$11.95 at Abercrombie & Fitch.

An outdoorsman's response was also unexpected. He like[illegible] minute track of weather conditions, and when he saw an el[illegible] driven barograph, 15, that automatically charts weekly highs and lows to assist in weather forecasting, by Taylor Instrument Companies at Marine Service & Machine Co., for $59.50 ppd., he was as starry-eyed as a five-year-old seeing a Christmas tree. CRITIC'S CHOICE

A newspaperman feathers his aerie

On San Francisco's Telegraph Hill there is a street so tiny that it accommodates exactly four houses which, having come down in the world about as far as they can go, are now coming back up. Under the skylighted roof of the one which, by dint of an additional new story has come up the highest, lives Terrence O'Flaherty, television critic and columnist for the San Francisco Chronicle and twenty-two other papers (his job), epicure, collector, indoor gardener, and raconteur (his life after hours). Mr. O'Flaherty bought his house ten years ago and in three grueling sieges of remodeling devised by architect Roy Starbird, made it what it is, a handsome bank of apartments—the top duplex his, the lower floors rented. It was not until the third bout of expansion that he gained the new top story and the luxury of more formal living quarters in addition to the existing study and bedroom on the floor below. With so much more room in which to spread out, he forsook his downtown office and holed in as a journalist-at-home—a considerate move since his television runs almost around the clock, a pleasure he feels fellow workers don't always appreciate. He writes his column in the morning, interviews local and visiting lions in the afternoon, invites friends to dinner at night, and cooks the dinner himself.

Enormously personal, the decoration of his apartment is entirely his own. He likes perfect order and uninhibited clutter, and somehow manages to achieve both. (His study, page 275, is proof.) Although he dislikes what he calls frills, and has none, he likes greenery, and has a lot. Rugs, to him, are frills, so his floors are bare except for bedroom carpeting, a zebra skin, and what must be the biggest polar bear hide in California. Kitchen-cabinet doors he also considers frills. His collection of ironstone and china, every piece of it a worker, sits beautifully arranged on open shelves.

He likes rough textures—burlap, old planking, old shutters, and curiosity pieces such as his two old Dutch stoves, now a fireplace and a sideboard, respectively. He went to no end of trouble to match for his living room walls the color of an Etruscan figure in the Metropolitan Museum of Art—"a cross between Pompeian red and cream of tomato soup." He is also a scavenger. The minute he hears of an old house being demolished he is hot on the scene, happy to come home with such loot as an ancient finial or the handles on his bedroom doors. And he is a non-sentimental sentimentalist. In a wonderful Victorian bird cage next to his bed he keeps two old wooden eggs admired for their patina. But there is no bird. "I'm sorry," he says, "but I'm like that Beatrice Lillie song: 'More than words, I hate birds!' "

OPPOSITE PAGE: On the living room's Danish cork floor, the grandfather of all polar bears lords it in front of the "fireplace"—an old Danish stove of iron, brass and nickel. The screen next to it was made of heavily weathered doors, mossy with crazed paint. Because Mr. O'Flaherty likes what he calls impure whites, the two sofas are covered in rough natural linen, a chastener for the lively red walls. On the terrazzo-topped table; lacquerware, apples, and two old finials—scavenger trove.

LEFT: Atrium-like, the dining room is crowned with an electrically controlled, peaked skylight that, for all its 2-ton heft, slides open like magic at the touch of a switch. To filter sunlight, an Austrian shade performs the same trick. The dining furniture (bentwood chairs, the old O'Flaherty family table) seats six, no more, amid a swirl of greenery. Guests are served from the Dutch-stove sideboard, and Italian linen towels, hung on chair backs, replace dinky napkins.

The two floors are linked by the graceful helix of an iron staircase.

The study, RIGHT, is a whacking big room with burlap-hung walls ("just bag burlap"), linen curtains, squashy leather furniture. Over the admirable desk (an old farm table) hangs a model of "The Eagle," a famous clipper ship. On the opposite wall, nested around the TV, Mexican apothecary cases store theatrical curiosa, as do the old coffee bin, spool cabinet, and Japanese brush box on top.

REMODELING WITH FABRIC

Quite like the pretty princess who slept for a hundred years, Celanese House, a centenarian brownstone in midtown New York, is an ex-sleeping beauty, now wide awake. The prince in this case was Inman Cook, an interior designer who had been asked to rejuvenate the old house in any way he liked as long as he used only two face-lifters—paint and fabrics woven of Celanese Contemporary Fibers. There were to be no structural changes, no plastering, no shifting of radiators, no ripping out of exposed pipes.

Rising to the challenge, Mr. Cook pulled his two rabbits from his hat and made them perform as they might in any house beset by the problems of middle age or of poor initial planning. Walls smooth enough to be painted were painted. Unpaintable walls were—literally—upholstered. Exposed pipes (all of them, fortunately, in corners), old-fashioned radiators, and new-fashioned air conditioners were masked with a variety of window treatments or other cunningly designed devices. And, as a bonus, fabric and furniture, imaginatively placed, gave new life to the big square halls, freeing the unused space for today's far more flexible patterns of entertaining.

The living room: its shortcomings disguised by curtains

Winglike extensions of the overcurtains in the living room on the parlor floor, opposite page, conceal the corner pipes. Wings were hung on brackets curved at the ends to hug the ceiling's cove. Austrian blinds serve as undercurtains; below them, Coromandel screens make little baffles for the old radiators, new air conditioners. Curtain fabric by Desley, shade fabric by Seneca. Tufted furniture by Century upholstered with Cohama fabric. Devoe & Raynolds paint throughout.

From the library, right, you look through the parlor-floor hall to the living room—a vista compounded of four fabrics used in four ways: on screens in library; as portières in doorways; on walls of hall; as blinds and overcurtains. Tomlinson sofa upholstered with fabric by Quaker.

The upper hall: converted into a sitting room

Wall hangings of tentlike stripes, opposite page, French-pleated at regular intervals, hide the cracked and pitted walls of the parlor-floor hall. Anchored by tabs hooked over little L-shaped brackets of polished chrome, the fabric, a sturdy one, is held taut at its top hem by staples. It hangs straight from ceiling cornice to floor on three whole sides of the room (on the fourth side is the stairwell), but is looped back in the doorways to form portières. Formerly an oversized landing-passageway, the hall has been furnished as a sitting room, eminently usable as auxiliary space for entertaining. Wall fabric by Covington; upholstery by Quaker; Mohawk rug.

On party nights, above, the converted hall can really star as a gathering spot for cocktails, leaving the living room unrumpled for after-dinner coffee, and the library pristine for bridge. Two long sofa-banquettes offer enough seating space for half-a-dozen guests. The marble-topped table becomes a bar, the host, a barman with nothing to do but pour. Mixed drinks (the kind requiring a certain amount of fuss and plenty of elbowroom) could be prepared in the kitchen, "bottled" in decanters and pitchers, and then chilled in a tub of crushed ice.

The library: camouflage with screens and shades

Athey shades, above, ingenious contraptions that part in the middle and fold like pleated fans one section up, one down, are installed in the library windows. In this case, the lower section, because it hides heating and cooling apparatus, is meant to stay fixed. The shade fabric, an Indian block print, also lines the bookcases' brass-grilled doors. To block out two sets of corner pipes, tall screens, left, were designed with mahogany frames and box-pleated fabric panels to match the sapphire window curtains. Screen and curtain fabric by Penco, Schumacher shade fabric.

The dining room: walls upholstered for smoothness

A vivid floral print, strong, yet silky, covers the upper walls in the ground floor dining room as well as curtaining the windows. Designed for endurance, the upholstery job began (as all such should) with thin laths butted to the moldings and corners and nailed to the wall to form a frame rather like a square embroidery hoop. A layer of felt was then stapled to the frame and, over it, the fabric cut and seamed to make wall-size pieces. A finishing gimp anchored with milliner's glue hides the stapling. Net result: a smooth, resilient surface with a slight air pocket between the fabric and the wall to take care of mural bumps. The sleek solid-color fabric that covers the dining table was also used to upholster little screens which curl around a radiator and an air conditioner. Printed fabric by Golding, solid-color fabric by Seneca.

The foyer: a new room for entertaining

An elegant brocade-like print lines the sizable room on the ground floor, once a little reception room. It has been furnished to double as foyer and office-at-home, left, but on party nights, above, desk and chairs can be trundled off to be replaced with rented chairs—the latter dressed up in slipcovers (fitted to a standard type of caterer's chair) to match the wall fabric. Tables could be set up while guests are having cocktails upstairs, before helping themselves from a buffet in the dining room adjoining the foyer. On the tables: a refreshing combination of traditional china with contemporary sterling and glass, old-fashioned Swedish wine decanters, and nubby-textured place mats and napkins—the latter rolled into slim logs to save space. To see by, a battery-operated "oil" lamp—no cord, of course. Lunt silver, Noritake china, Brodegaard glass. Desley print, sheer fabric by Georgia.

The guest room: a series of pretty masks

Screens and wall-to-wall curtains take care of the ubiquitous corner pipes and two sore-thumb radiators in the guest room, right. For an unconventional, breezy switch, a floral sheer was chosen for the undercurtains, a heavy white antique satin for overcurtains. By hanging the latter well away from the windows, the pipes were both cleared and covered. Little screens upholstered in the same satin block out all evidence of under-window heating and cooling machinery, and a third screen scotches a radiator randomly situated off in a corner. Antique satin by Seneca, floral print by Goldenheim. Bedspreads by Nettle Creek, carpet from Stark.

Master bedroom: cluttered corners rounded

Four baffles of shirred satin, stretched top and bottom on curved rods, round the corners of the master bedroom, opposite page, and hide the inevitable pipes. Café curtains, hung to the floor on square brass rods, veil the old window radiators and a new air conditioner. Since the room faces the street, undercurtains of heavy antique satin to match the short cafés were added for privacy. When drawn back during the day, these upper floor-length curtains tuck behind simple, classic curtains made of the figured fabric used on the bed. Unhackneyed touch: instead of a bench or loveseat at the foot of the bed, two slipper chairs in tandem—one for Him, one for Her. Desley gold and white fabric, Schumacher solid gold fabric, Bloomcraft red antique satin, Waverly white satin, Alexander Smith rug.

For shopping information, see page 313.

Second guest-bed stands apart from its twin, diagonally across room.

Storage ploy: guest room armoire is a linen closet—elegantly incognito.

Exotic shells flaunt their whorls in master bedroom's steel étagère.

A curved banquette hugs one of the ster bedroom's newly rounded corners.

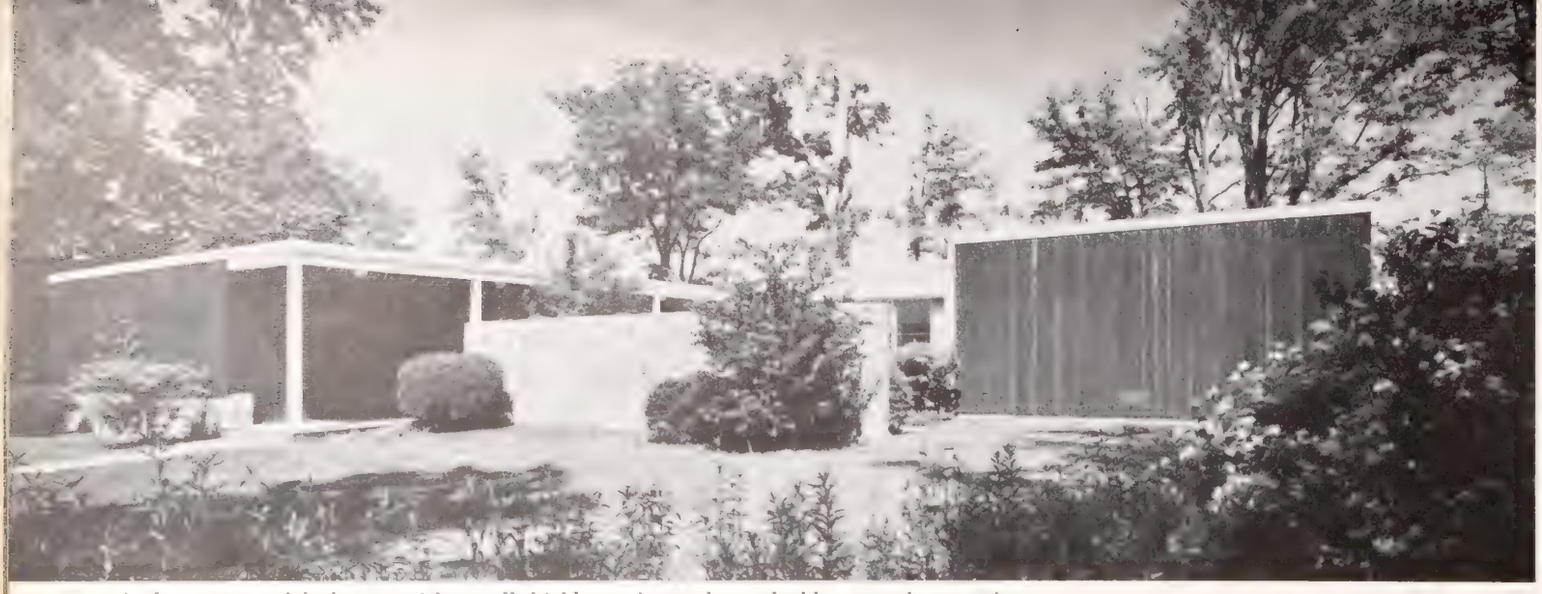
A HOUSE that welcomes PERSONAL TREASURES

Few families would have the aplomb to take a year's trip around the world while their new house was being built. But Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert J. Curren did, and the paradoxical result is an unusually personal house in Lake Bluff, Ill., in which well-tested concepts of modern architecture enhance the pleasures of living without ever becoming pretentious or obtrusive. In fact, the family's personalities, reflected in the finds they brought back from Europe and the Orient, are not obscured even by the drama of the setting—a spectacular site on Lake Michigan's shore.

The Currens have always been keen on travel, and the idea of a round-the-world trip began to take shape when Mr. Curren, whose business is real estate, sold their former house shortly after acquiring the lake front property that had once been the site of a Frank Lloyd Wright prairie house (it had burned down years before). The decision to go was clinched by the thought that the time was opportune for their son, David, just completing junior high school, to spend an educational year away from the classroom. (Continued on next page)

A 40-foot terrace, at the east end of the house, opposite page, overlooks Lake Michigan—a magnificent view that is shared by the dining room, the living room in the center, and the master bedroom beyond, which has its own railed sun deck. Vertical cedar boarding, stained off-black, accents the white-trimmed glass-walled house exterior.



On the dark-stained cedar walls of the entrance hall hang prizes from the round-the-world trip: block prints and a fan from Japan; wood carvings from Madras; a priest figure from Burma; a gilded Garuda bird; framed temple rubbings from Thailand.

The floor-to-ceiling panorama, opposite page, of a lake that behaves as moodily as the ocean dramatizes the sweep of the living and dining rooms, which are separated only by the strategic placement of one sofa. Both are paved with masonry block once used for shelving in pottery kilns. Rugs are sewn-together goatskin squares from Greece.

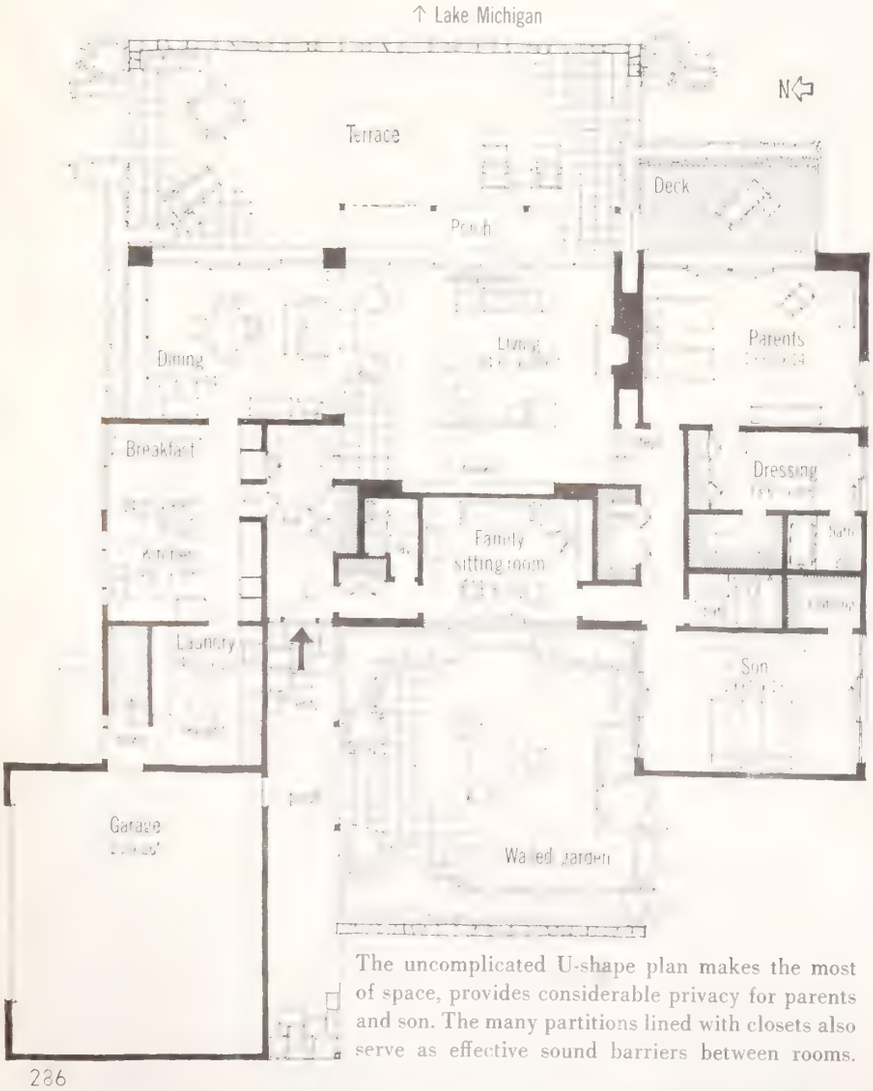


Table mats and napkins of silk ordered in Thailand emblazon the walnut dining table.

At the entrance of the house, a 6-foot wall shields a quiet garden tucked between the two wings

It was a measure of our faith in our architect, Walter Frazier," Mrs. Curren says, "that we could go away and feel perfectly secure. Before leaving, of course, we approved the plan of the house and decided on all the details, right down to the stain on the breakfast room cabinets." While they were traveling, the Currens made a determined search for only one thing—an object to put at the end of their long entrance hall. They found it in Thailand: a 5-foot-tall, 400-year-old Buddha, opposite page, top. Everything else they brought back was a chance find which they acquired without much thought about where they were going to put it. But there were no problems when they got home and moved into the new house. The elegant simplicity of its interior architecture quietly absorbed a heterogeneous horde of treasures that might well have made another house look stiflingly cluttered. (Continued)

The uncomplicated U-shape plan makes the most of space, provides considerable privacy for parents and son. The many partitions lined with closets also serve as effective sound barriers between rooms.

At the end of the entrance hall, right, a skylight illuminates the 400-year-old Thai Buddha. At his right are doors to a bar; at his left, two steps leading down to the living room.

Because of the two-step drop, the living room, below, gains an extra 2 feet in height. Plain white walls and white rugs provide a cool, quiet background for the rich purples, reds, and golds in the fabrics on the sofas and chairs, and for travel finds as diverse as the lamp bases made of abacuses from Hong Kong, the temple bell from Kyoto on the coffee table, the carved Madonna from Vienna on the wall at the right.

PERSONAL HOUSE

continued

From the ceiling of David's room hangs a dragon kite from Japan, his favorite stop on the Currens' world tour. Twin bed coverlets of black and terra-cotta wool were woven in Italy; brown-flecked rug in Puerto Rico.

The family sitting room, which doubles as a guest room, has a quiet, intimate mood in contrast to the expansive living room with its dramatic lake view. But the colors are strong and warm: red or green on the Victorian chairs, gold on the sofa bed, red in the background of the rug. Neatly filed in boxes on bookshelves are Mr. Curren's travel photographs; cabinets below house hi-fi equipment which is linked to additional speakers in the living room bookshelves on the other side of the wall.

OWNERS: Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert J. Curren
ARCHITECTS: Frazier, Raftery, Orr, and Fairbank
LOCATION: Lake Bluff, Ill.
SIZE: Approximately 3,500 square feet above ground

In spring and autumn, when breezes on the lakeside terrace can be too strong for comfort, the Currens, as well as Tracy, their German shepherd, love the sunny protection of the walled garden. Masonry walls flanking sitting room window were built of old Chicago trolley-track blocks.

Only two of the main rooms in the house do not face the lake: the family sitting room and David's room, both of which have sliding glass doors opening to the quiet walled garden at the front of the house. From there, David and his friends can go straight to his room without disturbing the rest of the house, or, crossing the garden to the garage, they can short-cut through the laundry and run downstairs to the playroom in the basement. Although the plan of the house is essentially open, it is astutely contrived to provide abundant privacy for parents and son. Storage space also is lavish (Mrs. Curren's closet, David's, and the linen closet are all of walk-in proportions) and there are many well thought out details such as the hidden bar at the living room end of the entrance hall which is also accessible from the breakfast end of the kitchen.

A five-minute walk down the wooded ravine that surrounds the house on three sides leads to the lake where the Currens swim in summer and David sails. But all year the view of the ever changing water is superb—"like the view from Positano," the Currens say. "Every morning we wake up eagerly to see what the lake is doing today."

From driveway, porch leads past garden to front door.

The perils and pleasures of LIVING WITH ORCHIDS

EDITOR'S NOTE: Growing orchids indoors without a greenhouse can be an exacting but rewarding enterprise. Seventeen years ago Jerome Eaton, treasurer of the New York Horticultural Society and Director of Old Westbury Gardens, moved his bride and his incipient orchid collection into a New York City apartment. That the venture has turned out well is testimony equally to the durability of the Eatons and of orchids.

Despite the very real cultural needs that must be met if orchids are to flourish, many lovely species and varieties are easier to grow in the house than you might think. Orchids are not just another group of plants that have attractive flowers. They are international aristocrats of the plant world with incomparable credentials. And if they require attention and care in ways that many plants do not, the results are often more rewarding.

Fragrance was probably what drew me to orchids in the first place. I was not sophisticated enough to seek them out of snobbishness, and I actually didn't know that it was an orchid whose flower exuded the delicate perfume that attracted me. In fact, it was an Odontoglossum pulchellum, an orchid species with blossoms more like those of lily-of-the-valley than what most people probably think of as an orchid. At any rate, I have since learned to choose orchids for that special dimension of fragrance as well as the more visible specifications.

Any plant family whose members are of such diverse origins as orchids is bound to present difficulties to the beginner. At first, is seemed as though I made progress only from crisis to crisis. By the time I had collected representatives of twenty or more genera, I had become acutely aware of the fact that while I could keep them all alive, I could succeed in getting only a few of them to grow at a normal pace and actually produce flowers. For one thing, the atmosphere in our apartment was less than ideal, although probably no different to begin with than that of other homes. It is a safe generalization to say that most houses and all city apartments are overheated (about 74 degrees daytime and 57 degrees nighttime during winter and 80 degrees day and 70 degrees night during summer). They are basically dry as well (a horrendous 10 per cent relative humidity in winter, around 60 per cent in summer). It is also safe to say that not all orchids will flower under all combinations of generally acceptable conditions and exposures, neither will they necessarily fail to do so. For example, when my first Lycaste aromatica flowered, I thought nature was playing tricks, since this species prefers cool temperatures and ours were anything but that.

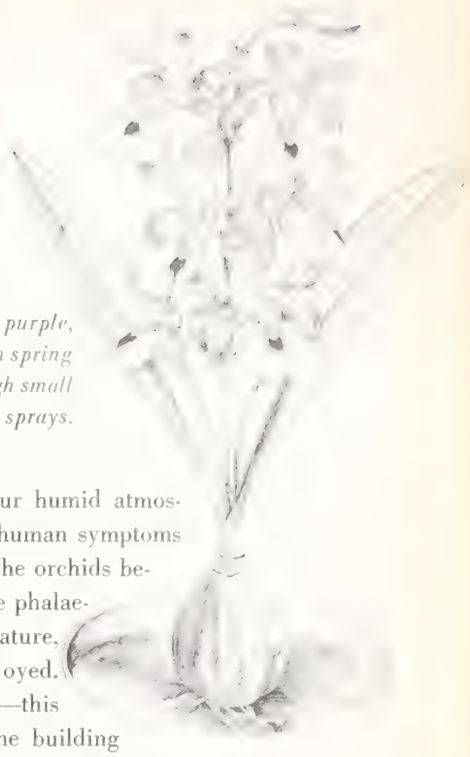
Such matters (there were many) sent me to the library of the New York Horticultural Society. And that in turn set me to poring over orchid literature in other libraries and bookshops. And that in turn soon sent me to every auction in town that listed orchid books. Yes, in books I did find answers as to why many of my plants did not bloom. More important, I found another fascinating realm within the realm of orchids—the realm of discovery itself. I was already aware of the orchid's infinite variety. I was fascinated by their fragrance. I had learned that whatever else they might or might not do, they were really very durable plants indeed. Now I encountered the excitement and adventure connected with their discovery in exotic lands by generations of intrepid plant explorers.



To get back to orchids indoors: My wife and I were married in 1948, and a few months later we marshaled all our forces to move from the suburbs into New York City. The last of our belongings to come up in the elevator to our new apartment on the edge of Greenwich Village were my seventy-five orchid plants. Flowerless orchids have a somewhat undistinguished appearance, but we were proud, possessive, and probably also undistinguished looking to the quizzical elevator operator, who quickly passed the word that the newlyweds in 5C were up to something odd.

It was evident that our large windows would not protect the somewhat tender orchids from the cold winds when winter came. So we brought in a carpenter to build framed glass panels that would create a double wall for insulation. Only then did we realize that our windows could no longer be opened. (And since these were our bedroom windows, this must have been one of those occasions when a new wife could wonder whether she had made the wisest choice.) But the situation failed to improve. The next few weeks saw the bedroom getting smaller and smaller as enclosed, shelved glass cabinets were built around the now double-windowed windows. It also got wetter and wetter, for when the drying effects of steam heat became apparent, we installed long galvanized trays of pebbles and kept them always moist. Although there was a sharp increase in hairdressing bills (no hair set would hold up overnight in our humid atmosphere) and a quickening pace of human symptoms pointed toward a sinus condition, the orchids began to improve. That is, all but the phalaenopsis, which, according to the literature, needed a warmer night than we enjoyed. This led us to more construction—this time in the library. (Naturally, the building employees were making periodic calls under the pretense of checking the plumbing, the ceiling, or anything at all, as long as they could take a look around to see what could possibly be causing the almost incessant hammering.) We had provided our phalaenopsis cases with heating cables under trays of pebbles and had suspended fluorescent lights overhead. (When their construction was almost complete, I found in a book a description of a glass case, designed in the mid 1800's by Dr. Nathaniel Ward, that was not too unlike my own contraption. Thus my ego got a great boost at a time when my phalaenopsis was fighting an uphill battle for survival.) Two months later the first flower spike began to develop and subsequently it blossomed, proving that close approximation of natural conditions really is essential to achieving a complete cycle of growth.

In the beginning, I had ordered a number of orchid plants by mail and they arrived "out of pots" to save me the high cost of air mail. As a result of having to learn how to pot the plants before I knew how they grew, I ruined several by breaking off the delicate new growth. With this experience in mind, my wife and I learned to visit nearby commercial growers and select already potted those plants that interested us. When repotting was later indicated by a plant's "walking" out of the old pot, I found I had a better feeling for the delicacy of brittle roots and of eyes newly started into growth. (For a picture story of the whole repotting procedure, see Gardener's Month, page 328.)

Fortunately, growing orchids in our apartment proved to be a less messy undertaking than you might suppose. Earth is not needed for most species, but merely a bag of osmunda fiber (the fibrous roots of the osmunda fern) or fir bark (which is growing in popularity as the "easier" medium for potting orchids). The latter is the chopped bark of fir or redwood trees and is available in varying degrees of coarseness ranging from ¾-inch chunks for potting large plants to the ½-inch particles best suited to potting plants with a more modest habit of growth or for seedlings.

VINTAGE REVIEW

An unorthodox appraisal, by one of New York's leading wine authorities, of the vintages of the last decade in the great wine-growing regions of France and Germany

BY SAM AARON

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Aaron, President of Sherry Wine and Spirits Co., is often called on to talk about wine to professional and non-professional groups and has led some heated panel discussions on radio. His inside information comes from constant tasting and yearly visits to the European vineyards to sample the new vintages.

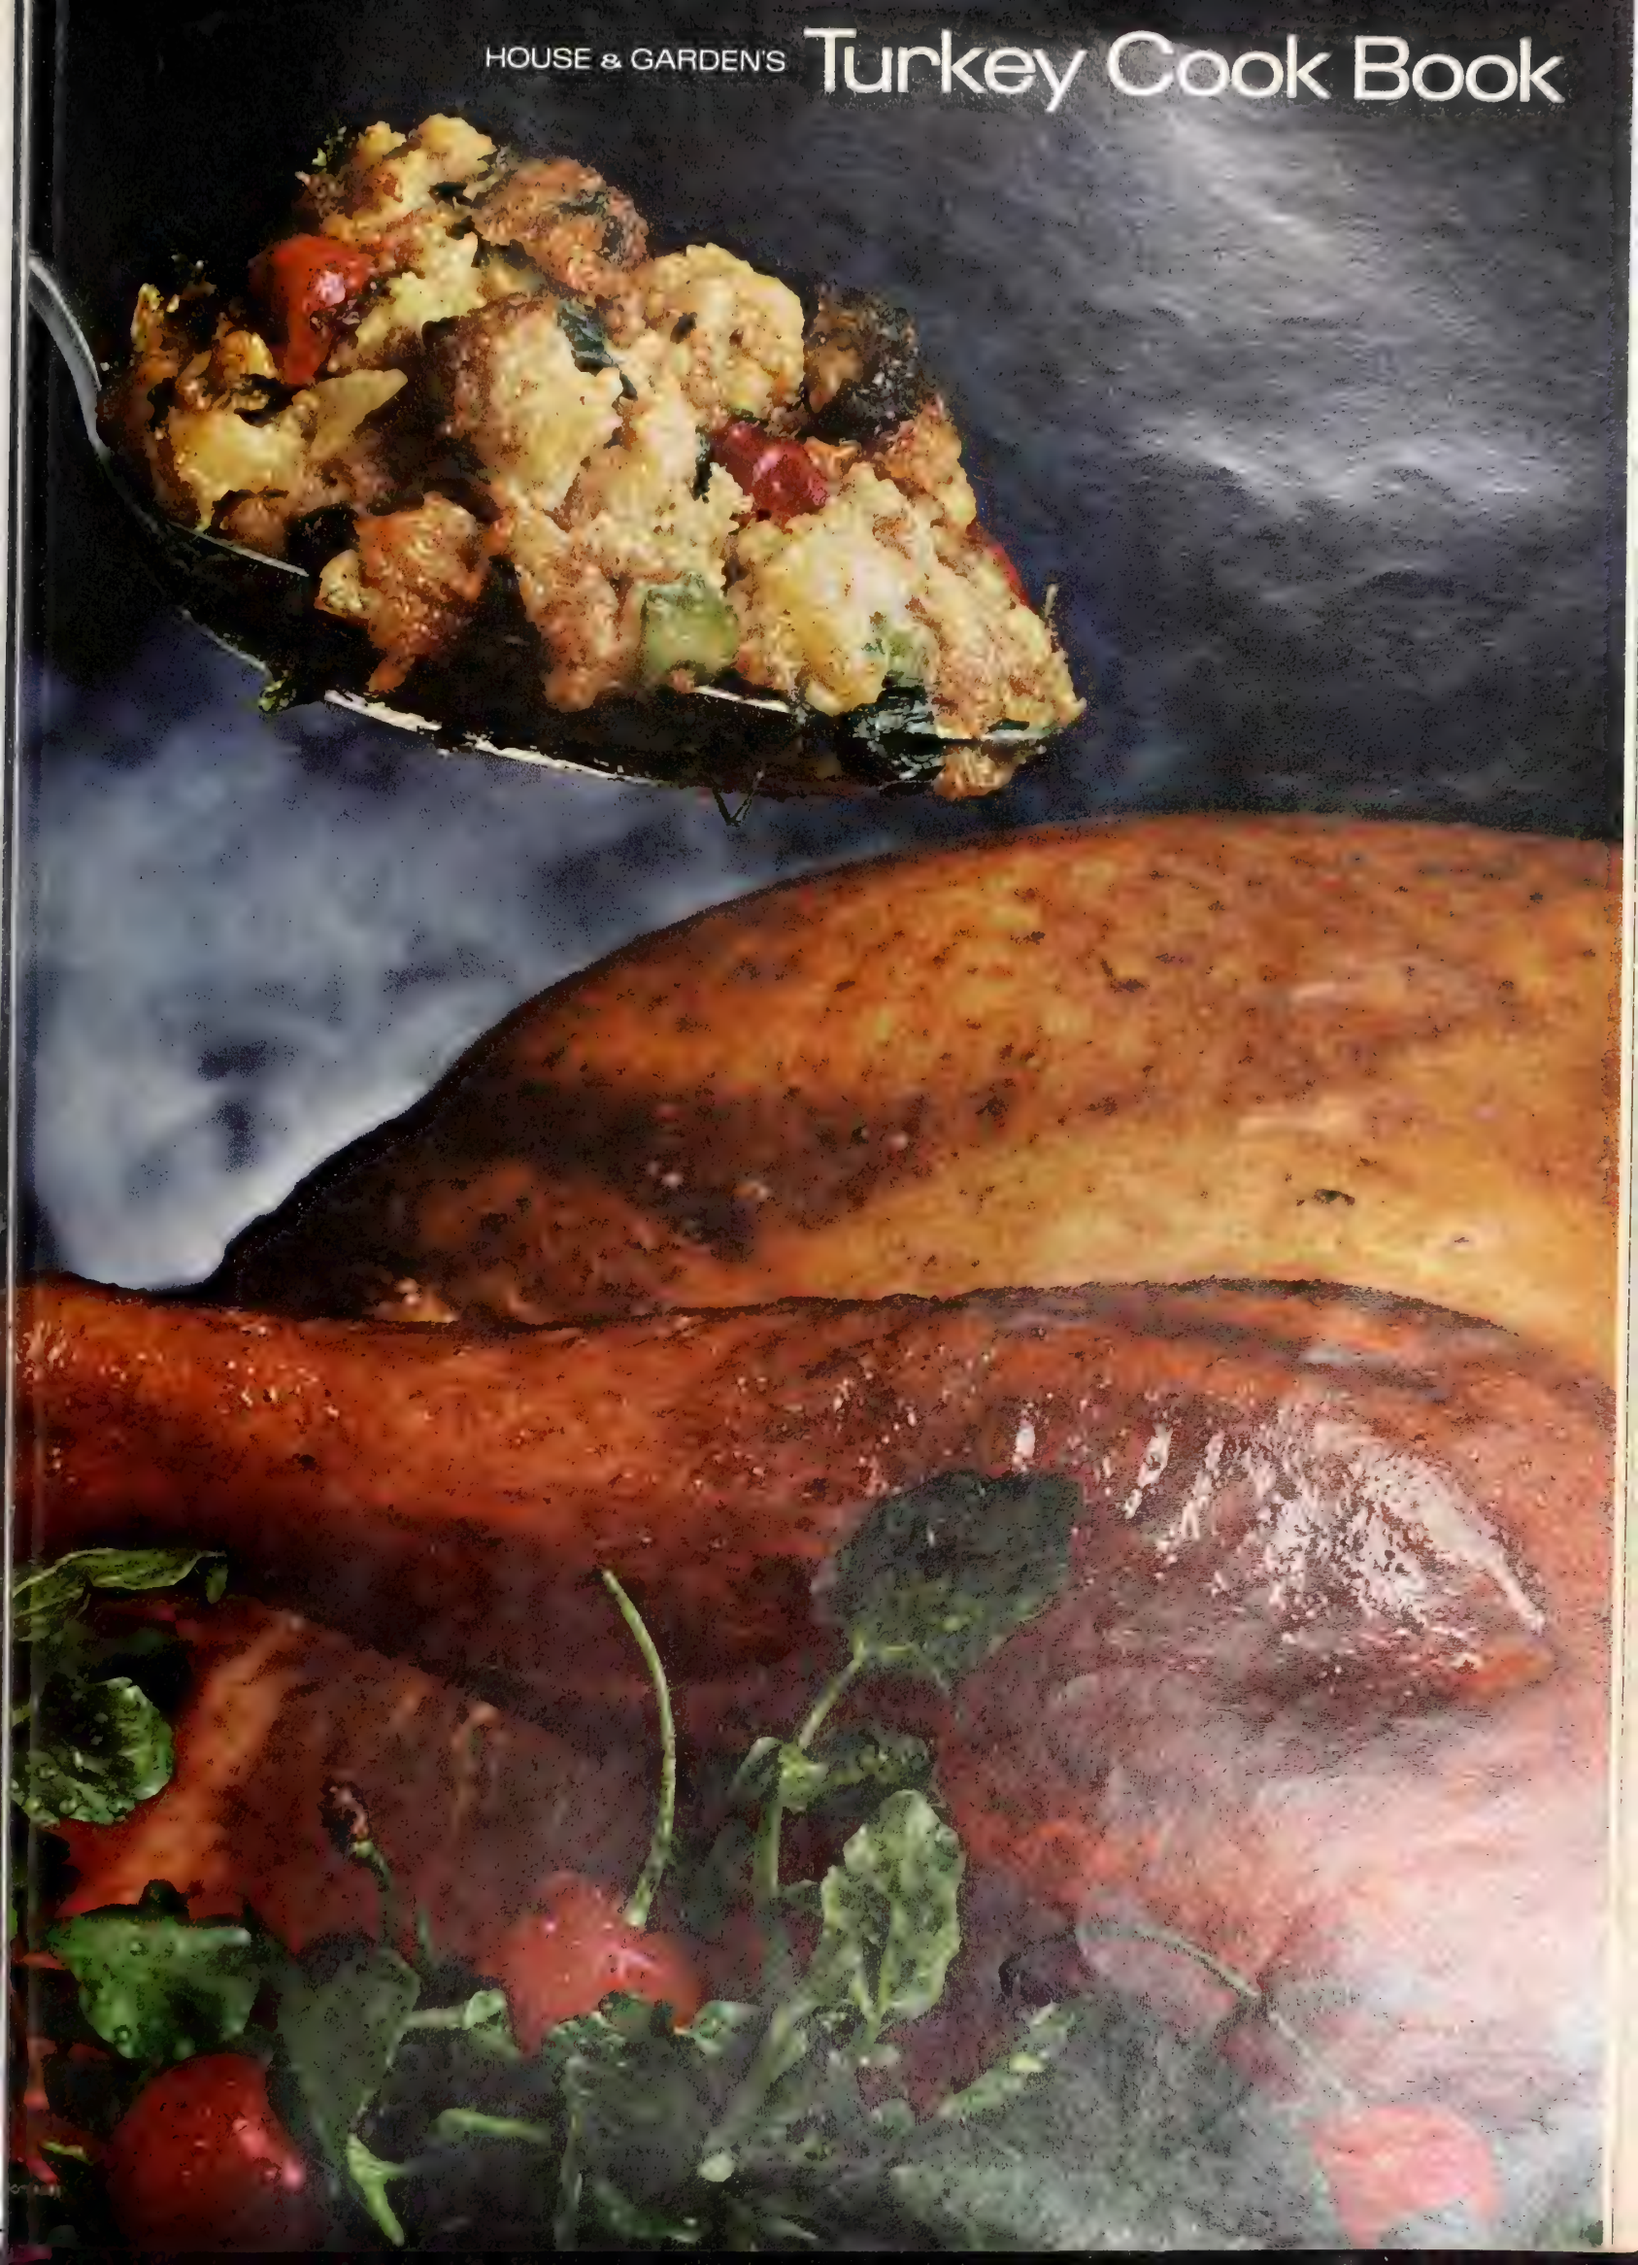
A review of the last ten years might well lead us to believe that we are an unusually blessed generation of wine drinkers. Certainly never before in history has one decade produced three "vintages of the century." After the highly publicized 1959's had been quickly followed by the exalted 1961's, the drums began to beat for the most heralded vintage of all—1964. The more skeptical among us may ask whether this is truly an extraordinary creation of nature's generosity, or merely a pleasant myth created by reports in newspapers, by wine growers, and by the writers of vintage charts. In my opinion, the reports went way beyond reality. True, these were really great years, but the wine was not the nectar of the gods that many people thought.

Personally, I do not approve of the popular practice of carrying a small, laminated wine chart, grading the wines of each year from 0 to 10. Enticing as they are in their simplicity, these numbers tell nothing about whether the wine is too young or too old by the time you drink it. An old vintage date on a label may prove to be only the attractive façade of a wine that is old and tired and should have been consumed much earlier in its life, while it still had its fruit and flavor. Nor do the charts draw any distinction between wines of a common heritage such as the many Burgundies and Bordeaux, yet a wine that comes from poor vineyard soil can never reach the heights, no matter how great the year of its birth. By oversimplification, vintage charts often result in artificially high prices for the much publicized years, and anyone canny and knowledgeable enough can find really good wine of the so-called "off years" at bargain prices. As with human beings, in wine there is always some good in the bad and some bad in the good.

Here is an attempt, based on research, dozens of tastings, and many interviews, to formulate some rules for the wine drinker's guidance. We start with Bordeaux, where vintage plays the most significant role.

Red Bordeaux

The world-famous château-bottled Bordeaux are the most long-lived red wines of the world because of their high tannin content—the most important single ingredient in wine longevity. Here are the only red wines that often take a decade to mature and can still prove to be vigorous after a half-century of aging.



The timetable of maturation varies from year to year. The '54's and '56's are long gone; the '58's and '60's, delightful now, have not too many years ahead. The '57's are at present hard and unattractive and perhaps might not be soft and pleasing for still another decade. The '63's are best skipped or consumed within two years of their bottling.

The excellent '55's are just coming into their own, soon to be followed by the fine, soft, outstanding '62's. Next in the timetable are the great '59's which can be enjoyed today and still have a decade of glory ahead. We also suspect that the fruity, charming '64's will delight all serious wine drinkers for at least ten years, although they will never match the longevity of the truly great, concentrated '61's. It is the first-growth '61's that should be set aside in your cellar, forgotten, and served twenty years hence as possibly the most remarkable clarets of the century.

Turkey Cook Book

By James A. Beard

Turkey ranks as a major American contribution to the world of gastronomy. No less an epicure than Brillat-Savarin, author of La Physiologie du Goût, called it "surely one of the noblest gifts which the Old World has received from the New," while Fra Agipada, confessor and historian of Cortez, considered that turkey "surpasses as food any wild bird we have found up to this time." Benjamin Franklin was of the opinion that the respectable turkey rather than the marauding bald eagle, which he described as "a Bird of poor moral character, like those among men who live by sharpening and robbing" should have been chosen as the symbol of the United States. When turkey has been so honored and praised, it is lamentable to see how today it is so often done grave injustice by bad cooking and stereotyped presentation—either at Thanksgiving with cranberry sauce and all the so-called trimmings or as one-half of the ubiquitous ham and turkey buffet supper. For few birds are as versatile as turkey. It may be roasted, braised, barbecued, broiled, poached, boned and stuffed, or served in casseroles, stews and sauces, salads and sandwiches. I have a particular predilection for perfectly roasted cold turkey. In summer or winter, accompanied by a dish of hot stuffing that has been cooked separately and flavored with the pan drippings, salad, and a bottle of good wine, it makes a delectable Sunday lunch or late supper. The recipes in this cook book are designed to restore this all-American bird to its rightful place in the culinary hall of fame.

HOW TO PREPARE AND ROAST TURKEY

Rub the inside of the rinsed, dried bird with a cut lemon before stuffing. Stuff the body and neck cavity lightly. The stuffing will expand during cooking, so be careful not to stuff the neck cavity too tightly or it may burst. (Any leftover stuffing may be cooked in a covered casserole and basted with pan juices for the last half-hour the turkey roasts.) Fasten the neck skin to the back of the bird with a skewer. Sew up the tail opening or close it with a piece of folded aluminum foil.

Truss the turkey by tying the legs together with string and then tying the string around the tail of the bird. Or, if you prefer, run a poultry needle threaded with twine through the joints of the legs and the body and tie the twine under the bird and to the leg bones. Turn the wing tips under the wings on either side of the bird. Rub well with butter, oil, or bacon fat.

There are various ways to roast a turkey: in the oven—covered, uncovered, in an aluminum foil tent, or completely enveloped in foil—or on an electric spit or a barbecue grill.

Timing a roast turkey

It is almost impossible to give hard-and-fast rules about the length of time a turkey should roast. Differences in the shape and tenderness of individual birds may make it necessary to increase or decrease the cooking time, and your personal preference for a moist or well-done bird should also be taken into account. Broadly speaking, in a 325° oven a 6–8-pound turkey will take 2–2½ hours, an 8–12-pound turkey 2½–3 hours; a 12–16-pound turkey 3–3¾ hours; a 16–20-pound turkey 3¾–4½ hours; a 20–25-pound turkey between 4½ and 5½ hours. However, these timings are approximate and in no way infallible.

A more accurate way to judge whether a turkey is done is to take the internal temperature by inserting a meat thermometer into the thickest part of the thigh. According to how well-done you like your turkey, it should register between 175° and 185°. Although the accepted internal temperature is 185°, this seems too high. Try taking the turkey out of the oven when the thermometer registers 170° and let it stand for 20–25 minutes before carving to allow the internal temperature to mount. If you do not use a meat thermometer, trust your intuition and let your fingers (protected by a paper napkin) determine the state of doneness. The drumstick and breast meat should feel soft when pressed with the fingers, and the drumstick and thigh joint should move easily. Puncture the skin at the joint of the leg and thigh to see if the juices run clear.

Barbecue spit-roasting method

Balance your bird on the electrically driven spit, place it over the barbecue grill with the heat on one side and a dripping pan underneath, and let it revolve. The roasting time will be approximately the same as that for oven roasted turkeys. You may have to replenish the heat from time to time during the roasting process by pushing the coals to the side of the fire and adding a few more at the edges. You may baste with melted butter and white wine, with oil or with soy sauce and oil, or with your own favorite barbecue sauce.

Should the side of the turkey closest to the fire tend to brown too quickly, protect with foil. Add additional briquets if needed, and if you wish, a few damp hickory chips toward the end. The turkey will take about the same length of time as for oven roasting. A 14-pound turkey will probably take between 3½ and 4 hours. Test for doneness in the usual way. The drippings in the foil-lined pan make a most excellent sauce.

GUIDE TO BUYING TURKEY

Today's turkeys are a great improvement over those of twenty years ago. They are plumper, meatier, and more compact, giving 50 per cent more meat than before. They are also more tender, which shortens the cooking time and keeps the meat from drying out.

Turkeys range in size from 4–30 or 38 pounds. Small birds between 4 and 9 pounds may be roasted whole or cut up for broiling, frying, braising, and barbecuing. Medium-size birds between 8 and 19 pounds are suitable for oven or spit roasting. Large birds of 20 pounds and over are the best buys for roasting as they are the most flavorful and economical, with a higher proportion of meat to bone weight. If you buy a bird of 25 pounds or over, you can freeze parts after it is cooked. In addition to whole birds, you can get turkey in parts, quarters, and halves; smoked and cured turkeys; and boneless turkey roll.

Freshly killed turkeys are the most desirable, but these are pretty hard to find in this age of freezing and packaging. To get a turkey that has been freshly killed and hand-plucked—a rarity these days—you need a special poultry dealer. The turkeys sold in markets come packaged frozen and ready-to-cook, which means that the bird has been fully eviscerated and processed—pan-ready, table-dressed, oven-ready, and eviscerated are other packaging terms that mean the same thing. Frozen stuffed turkeys are also available to a limited degree. They are prepared under rigid controls, and the directions given on the wrapper must be carefully followed so the stuffing does not spoil.

When you buy a turkey for roasting, estimate about 1 pound per person ready-to-cook weight. This will allow for plenty of second helpings and leftovers.

Frozen whole turkeys should be thawed before cooking, preferably slowly. They can be thawed in any of the following three ways:

1. Defrost turkey on the refrigerator shelf in the partially opened or punctured plastic bag in which it came, allowing 2–4 days, or 24 hours for each 6 pounds of ready-to-cook weight. When the turkey is pliable, remove the plastic bag, take out the giblets and neck, cover the bird with a damp cloth, and refrigerate until ready to roast. The turkey should be cooked right after thawing, but, if necessary, you can keep it for 2–3 days under refrigeration.

2. Thaw the turkey at room temperature, allowing about 1 hour per pound. When turkey is pliable, proceed as above.

3. Thaw the turkey for 6–8 hours in cool water in the unopened plastic bag (do not run water over or soak an unwrapped bird), changing the water frequently. When pliable, proceed as above.

After thawing, rinse the bird with cool water, drain, and pat dry. It can then be stuffed, roasted, or prepared as desired.

To thaw frozen turkey thighs, wings, or drumsticks, allow about 1 day on the refrigerator shelf, 2 or more hours under cold running water. For a whole turkey breast, allow 36 hours in the refrigerator, 6 hours under cold running water. Rinse, and pat dry with paper towels.

If you buy a hand-plucked rather than a frozen bird, you may have to pick out the pin feathers and singe it before rinsing and drying.

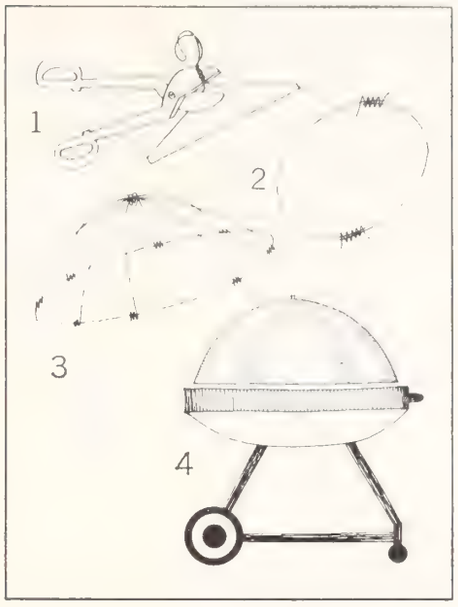
Open-roasting method

Arrange the bird on a rack in a shallow roasting pan. For a medium-size bird, place on one side on the rack and roast in a 325° oven for one-third of the cooking time, then on the other side for a third of the cooking time, and then on its back for the last third. If the bird is large and heavy, line the rack with aluminum foil or bacon slices, put the turkey on the rack breast side down and roast for half the cooking time. Turn and finish roasting with the breast up. To keep the breast and legs moist, you may cover the bird with well-oiled cheesecloth and baste it through the cheesecloth with oil and melted butter, or cover it with strips of salt pork or bacon and baste occasionally with the pan juices, or butter the bird lavishly and baste with a mixture of half melted butter and half white wine throughout the roasting process.

Foil-tent method

Line a shallow roasting pan with foil to eliminate messy cleanup. Place trussed bird breast side up on a rack in the foil-lined pan. Brush all over with butter or bacon fat. Tear off a sheet of heavy-duty foil 5″–10″ longer than the turkey. Crease lengthwise through center. Place over the bird and press the foil gently at drumsticks to anchor it. Roast in a 325° oven. Remove tent during last 30 minutes of cooking, increasing heat slightly if necessary, to brown bird.

High-temperature foil method



This fast method, in which the turkey is completely wrapped in foil and roasted at 450°, gives juicy, tender meat, and a true roasted flavor—although the bird may not look as attractive as it does when roasted by standard methods. Place the turkey on its back on a sheet of heavy-duty foil (lay small turkeys across the width of the foil; large ones lengthwise) and put small folds of foil over the wing tips, tail, and ends of drumsticks to prevent puncturing the top sheet. Bring the ends of the foil up, over the breast of the bird, allowing an overlap of 3 inches. Close ends by folding together the top of the 3-inch overlap; this holds the juices. The bird should be loosely wrapped, not sealed airtight. Place wrapped bird in a shallow pan, breast up, and roast at 450°, allowing 2¼–2½ hours for a 7–9-pound bird, 2¾–3 hours for a 10–13-pound bird, 3–3¼ hours for a bird of 14–17 pounds, 3¼–3½ hours for an 18–21-pound turkey and 3½–3¾ hours for birds between 22 and 24 pounds. Open and turn back the foil 20 minutes before end of cooking time to brown the bird.

Barbecue grill method

For this you need a grill with a dome-type hood to close over the turkey, or you can make a hood that fits over the turkey by making a framework from wire coat hangers covered with heavy-duty aluminum foil (see sketch). If the grill is a round one, it should be at least 24″ in diameter. If it is rectangular, it should be about 14″ by 24″. Either one will accommodate a turkey up to 14 pounds. The turkey may be stuffed or unstuffed. Truss it in the usual way.

Build a fire at one side of the grill using about half a 5-pound bag of charcoal briquets. At the other side of the grill place a shallow foil-lined pan for drippings.

Place the grate in position over the charcoal, and when the fire is burning enough to create considerable heat, place the turkey on the grate over the pan—not over the fire. Cover or place foil hood on the grill, so the fire burns moderately. Don't hurry the roasting. Brush the turkey once or twice with a mixture of half melted butter and half white wine.

To make a domed hood for a barbecue grill, clip hooks from clothes hangers with wire cutters (1). Straighten and bend two or more wires into a circle to fit inside grill area; bind ends with picture wire (2). Curve more wires like ribs of umbrella; attach to circle, twisting ends with pliers. Fasten together at top with picture wire (3). Cover frame with heavy aluminum foil; leave small part loose at top for air to circulate (4).

WHOLE TURKEY

Roast Turkey with Pesto-Rice Stuffing

4 cups cooked rice
1 cup pesto (see page 302)
½ cup pine nuts
8 10-pound turkey
Olive oil
Bacon slices

Toss the rice with the pesto and pine nuts and stuff the bird lightly. Close the vent and truss the bird. Rub well with olive oil. Place the turkey on its side on a rack in a roasting pan. Cover with slices of bacon and roast at 325° for 1 hour. Turn on other side and roast for another hour. Turn the bird on its back and roast with bacon covering the breast and legs until the bird is tender and done. Baste from time to time.

This delicious dish is enhanced by a rich cream sauce made with turkey broth. Accompany it with grilled tomatoes, crisp French bread, and a lusty red wine—a Châteauneuf-du-Pape or Gigondas. Follow with fresh fruit and a good dessert cheese. Serves 8–10.

Turkey en Demi Deuil

3 pounds each turkey backs, necks, and gizzards
Turkey giblets
1 large fowl (optional)
Salt, pepper
6–8-pound turkey
Truffles, as many as possible, fresh if available
1 cup heavy Béchamel sauce
1½ cups heavy cream
4 egg yolks
Freshly ground white pepper

Cover the backs, necks, gizzards, and giblets with 4–5 quarts water and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and allow to simmer very slowly for about 4–5 hours. If you wish a richer broth, add a fowl for the last 2 hours. The meat may be frozen afterward and used for crepes, salad or other chicken dishes. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Strain, cool, and remove excess fat.

Clean the turkey. Slice most of the truffles, slip them under the skin of the turkey breast and thighs and allow to stand for an hour or so.

Bring the broth to the boiling point in a large kettle or braising pan. Add the turkey and bring to the boil once more. Reduce heat and let the turkey simmer, covered, allowing about 20–22 minutes per pound. Cook just to the point of maximum juicy tenderness—do not overcook.

Remove the cooked turkey to a large hot platter. Reduce 4 cups of the broth to 2 cups over a brisk flame. Add the Béchamel sauce and blend thoroughly. Blend the heavy cream with the egg yolks and gradually stir into the sauce. Continue stirring until the mixture is smooth and velvety. Season with salt and ground white pepper and add a few finely chopped truffles.

Serve this elegant dish with the sauce, rice, and spinach timbales. Drink a delicious young Fleurie. Serves 6–8.

Note: You can make this dish with white truffles as well. Canned white truffles are more pungent than the black ones and provide an exciting gastronomic treat when added to the sauce.

Braised Truffled Turkey

8 10-pound turkey
Truffles, as many as possible, fresh if available
2 pounds ground pork
1½ pounds ground veal
8 shallots
Butter
Salt, pepper to taste
¾ cup cognac
2 cups fine bread crumbs
½ cup chopped parsley
3 carrots, cut in fine julienne
3 leeks, cut in fine julienne
3 stalks celery, cut in fine julienne
White wine
Beurre manié (flour and butter kneaded together)
Freshly ground white pepper

The night before you plan to cook the turkey clean the bird, slice some truffles, and slip them under the skin. Slip several truffles into the cavity as well, wrap the bird loosely in foil, and leave in the refrigerator overnight.

Next day, prepare the stuffing. Sauté the pork, veal, and shallots in 8 tablespoons butter and blend well with salt to taste and ½ cup cognac. Do not cook completely—merely mix over heat and add the crumbs and parsley. Add seasonings to taste. Combine with the truffles in the turkey and stuff lightly. Sew up the vent and truss the turkey.

Brown the turkey well in butter or butter and oil mixed and place the bird on a bed of the julienne carrots, leeks, and celery in a large braising pan. Add the butter or butter and oil and 1½ cups white wine and bring to a boil. Cover pan, reduce heat, and cook for 2½–3 hours, basting the bird occasionally with equal parts of melted butter and white wine. When the bird is tender, remove to a hot platter and strain off the pan juices. Reduce the juices to 2 cups and thicken with beurre manié. Season to taste with salt and freshly ground white pepper and add remaining ¼ cup cognac.

Serve with potatoes Anna and braised celery. Drink a fine Château-bottled Medoc—a Château Latour or Palmer. Serves 8–10.

Tart-sweet Mince Meat makes this stuffing news.

And some great news it is! Borden's None Such Mince Meat has diced apples, raisins, currants, citrus fruit peel and spices to make turkey stuffing taste merrier than ever.

For a 12- to 14-lb. turkey, sauté 1 cup chopped onions in ¾ cup butter until onions are golden brown. In large bowl, mix sautéed onions, one 28-oz. jar of Borden's None Such Mince Meat*, two 7-oz. packages of Kellogg's Croutettes. Add ¾ cup water. Toss lightly until mixture is moistened. Stuff loosely into turkey. Place extra stuffing in casserole; place in oven during last 30 minutes of baking.

Tent turkey and line the pan with Heavy Duty Reynolds Wrap. Your bird will brown beautifully with no basting, no oven spattering and no pan scouring.

*To use None Such 9-oz. box, crumble contents of two boxes into 1½ cups water; heat; stir until lumps are broken. Boil briskly for one minute. For a spirited variation, try None Such Brandy and Rum Mince Meat.

HOW TO CARVE A ROAST TURKEY

1. Hold turkey firmly with carving fork to keep it from slipping. Cut down with carving knife between the thigh and the body.

2. Push the leg away from the body to expose joint. With the tip of the carving knife, sever the leg from body at the joint.

3. Remove severed leg to a serving platter and cut it in two at the second joint, separating the thigh from the drumstick.

4. For individual servings of dark meat, slice the drumstick downward into neat pieces. Slice thigh section in the same way.

5. Press the wing tip down with the fork to reveal the joint and then sever the wing from the body with the tip of the carving knife.

6. Make a long cut horizontally through the base of the breast so that the meat will fall away easily when it is sliced down.

7. Carve down breast on an angle in thin slices. When you reach widest part, carve front and back ends alternately in small slices.

Turkey en Chaudfroid

6 tablespoons butter
8 tablespoons flour
3 cups chicken or turkey broth
1½ teaspoons salt
1 cup heavy cream blended with 3 egg yolks
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin dissolved in ½ cup cold water
8–10-pound poached or roasted turkey, chilled
For decorations: tarragon leaves; green tops of leek and scallions; sliced truffles; black or stuffed olives; pimiento; green pepper; hard-cooked eggs
Quick or Beef Aspic (see recipes)

Melt the butter and stir in the flour over medium heat in a heavy skillet or saucepan. Gradually add the broth and stir until thickened. Add salt and simmer the sauce for approximately 4–5 minutes.

Add the cream-and-egg-yolk mixture and dissolved gelatin to the sauce. Stir until the ingredients are well blended and the gelatin is thoroughly melted. Do not let the sauce boil after adding the egg yolks. Taste for seasoning and add salt if necessary. Allow this chaudfroid sauce to cook until it is ready to set. Cool.

Arrange the chilled turkey on a rack over a large pan. You may skin the turkey or leave the skin on. If you wish to carve the bird and put the pieces back in place before adding the decorations, remove the skin and breast fillets whole, slice very carefully and replace on the bone. You may also slice the thigh meat if you wish, but for this dish it is better to leave the thighs whole.

Spoon the chaudfroid sauce, which should be all but congealed, over the entire surface of the chilled bird, being careful to cover all visible parts.

When it is completely covered with the sauce, decorate according to your own fancy. Leaves of tarragon or leaf shapes cut from leek or scallion green, truffle slices, flowers cut from pimiento and green pepper can be combined in effective designs. The white of hard-cooked eggs, truffles, and other decorative ingredients may be cut into fancy shapes with truffle cutters or vegetable cutters. It is best to work out the design ahead of time and lay out the ingredients you will use for decorating.

When the turkey is decorated, chill again and then brush with or carefully spoon over aspic, which should be syrupy and just about to set. Cool until serving time, arrange on a platter and decorate the platter with chopped set aspic and any greens you desire. Tiny tomatoes stuffed with Salad Russe and glazed with aspic, or stuffed eggs filled with a mixture piped through a pastry bag with a rosette tube, make a pretty, edible decoration.

Serve the Turkey en Chaudfroid with cold ham and tongue and a selection of whole vegetables vinaigrette. A chilled Meursault or Montrachet goes well with this.

Quick Aspic

1½ pints double-strength clarified turkey or chicken broth
¼ cup white wine
3 envelopes unflavored gelatin dissolved in ¼ cup cold water

Heat the broth and wine to boiling point. Add the dissolved gelatin. Stir until melted. Cool.

GOLDSMITH

Turkey en Chaudfroid transforms a plain bird with a coat of white chaudfroid sauce, edible flower decoration (chives for stalks; tarragon or slivers of leek or scallion green for leaves; carrot, pimiento, hard-cooked egg white for petals; sieved hard-cooked egg yolk mixed with lard and piped like stamens), aspic glaze, a surrounding garnish of stuffed tomatoes and eggs.*

Makes 3¼ cups, enough to coat and garnish Turkey en Chaudfroid.

Beef Aspic

2¼ pound beef shin with bone (have the butcher crack it)
1 pig's foot, cut in small chunks
1 veal knuckle
1 onion stuck with 2 cloves
2 carrots
1 bay leaf
1 teaspoon thyme
1 stalk celery
1 clove garlic
1 tablespoon salt
1 cup sherry or Madeira
2 egg whites, lightly beaten (if necessary)

Place all ingredients except the egg whites in a pan. Cover and cook over medium heat for about 4 minutes. Add 3 pints water. Bring to the boiling point, cover and simmer for about 3½–4 hours at the lowest possible heat. The liquid should just ripple. Pour the stock into a bowl and cool. Chill overnight. Skim off all fat. If the jelly is not clear, bring it to a boil again and add the egg whites. Boil gently for 10 minutes and strain clarified liquid through a cloth. Makes 7 cups. What is not used for Turkey en Chaudfroid can be stored for use in another delicious cold dish.

Broiled Turkey

Only very young, fresh-killed turkeys weighing from 3½–5 pounds broil successfully. Split the turkey and remove the breastbone and backbone. Rub well with oil, salt, pepper, and paprika. A clove or two of garlic, finely chopped, may be rubbed into the skin and along the bone of the bird. This gives the turkey a delicious flavor.

Adjust the broiling pan about 4″–5″ from the heat and broil the turkey, bone side to the heat, for approximately 25 minutes, basting occasionally with a little melted butter. Turn at the end of 25 minutes, brush with butter or olive oil, and broil until nicely browned and cooked through, about 18–25 minutes more. Be careful not to overcook, or the white meat will be dry and uninteresting.

Serve the broiled turkey with matchstick potatoes and a good salad. Drink a Beaujolais such as Juliénas.

Variation: Marinate the turkey in 1 cup white wine, ½ cup Japanese soy sauce, 3 cloves garlic finely chopped, ¼ cup olive oil, and 1 tablespoon Tabasco. Turn the turkey several times during the marinating period. Broil as directed and baste with marinating liquid. Serve with fried rice and tiny cooked green beans with crisp, crumbled bacon and onion.

BONED TURKEY

Boned and Rolled Turkeys

Turkeys that have been boned, rolled, and tied have become increasingly popular in the last few years. When you buy them they are, for the most part, frozen and foil-wrapped.

Most people prefer roasting these turkeys in the frozen state and enhancing them with [illegible] after they are roasted and ready for table. The finished product seems [illegible]

Follow the directions on the package. Some processors recommend removing the turkey from the oven when it registers an internal temperature of 175°, others at 185°. The bird [illegible] taste better and slices perfectly if [illegible] 175°. Let the turkey stand about 10–15 minutes after removing from the oven before carving to let the internal temperature increase slightly.

When cooking in the frozen state, roast at 450° in foil. A bird of 2½–3 pounds boned weight will take from 2½–3 hours, and one of 3½–4 pounds will take 3 hours. The larger ones, which reach 5½ pounds boned weight, will take about 3½ hours. Thawed birds take approximately 1 hour less. Remove the foil for the last 20 minutes for browning. You may add butter and salt and freshly ground black pepper at that time. When serving these birds, you may or may not remove the string before slicing. Here are some good ways to serve these boned and rolled turkeys, either hot or cold:

Hot

1. Serve with Béarnaise sauce, crisp sauté potatoes, and broccoli with brown butter. Drink a Juliénas.
2. Serve with Sauce Madeira and place each slice of turkey on a slice of baked country ham. Accompany with polenta. Drink a Tavel.
3. Smother each slice of turkey with sliced sautéed mushrooms and accompany it with chopped spinach with butter and nutmeg. Complete the meal with French bread and a red Chassagne-Montrachet.
4. Make rich Béchamel sauce with chicken broth and turn it into a velouté sauce by adding cream and egg yolks. Season heavily with fresh tarragon. This sauce is delicious on sliced turkey. Serve with rice and broiled eggplant slices. Drink a Beaujolais.

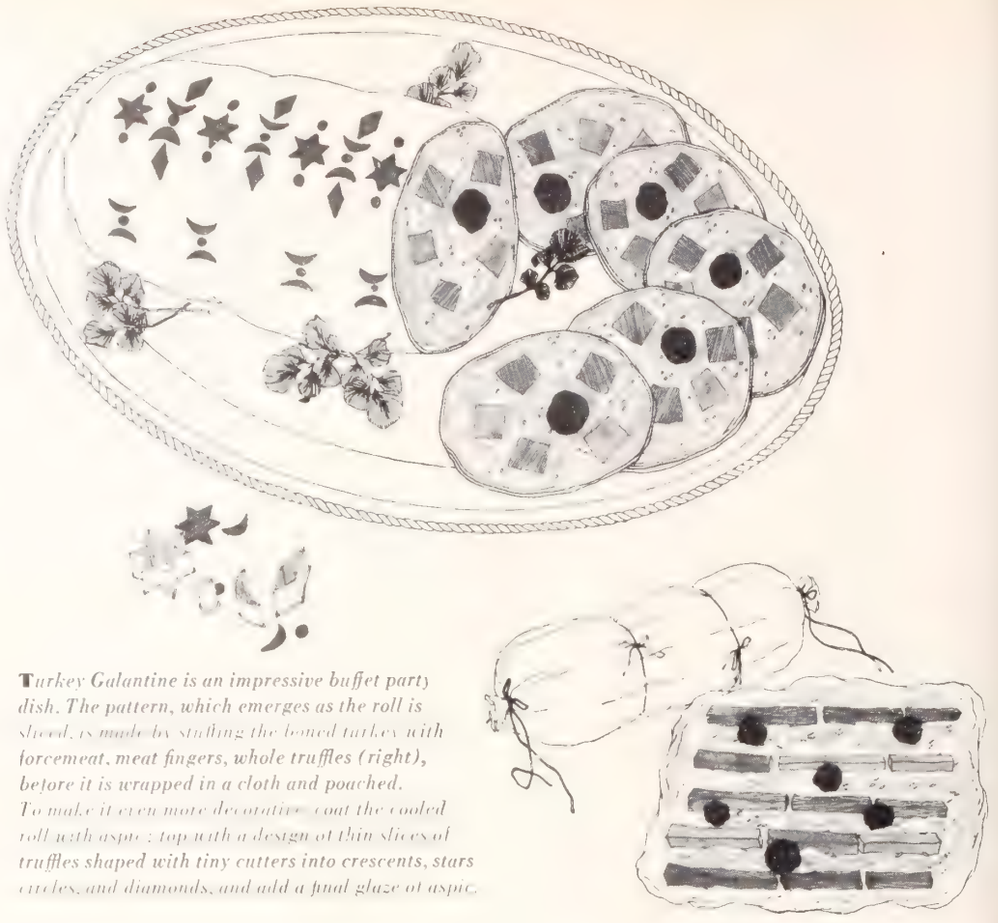
Cold

1. Serve with homemade olive-oil mayonnaise and a potato salad dressed with oil and vinegar and chopped parsley.
2. Serve with a walnut-oil vinaigrette sauce, sliced tomatoes, and marinated whole baby zucchini.
3. Serve with a mixture of half sour cream and half homemade mayonnaise embellished with tarragon, parsley, and chives, a rice salad, and black olives.
4. Make a sharp mayonnaise using lemon juice and a tablespoon of onion juice. To 2 cups mayonnaise add a 7-ounce can flaked white-meat tuna and 2 finely chopped anchovies. Marinate for several hours in the refrigerator. Slice turkey thinly, arrange on a serving platter, and mask with tuna sauce to make Turkey Tonnato. Garnish with cherry tomatoes and black olives and serve with a salad of green beans vinaigrette.

With any of these cold dishes a young Pouilly Fumé or a white Hermitage would be perfection.

Turkey Galantine

2 pounds ground fat pork
2 pounds ground ham
1 pound ground veal
3 cloves garlic, chopped fine
Cognac
3 eggs
Quatre épices or Spice Parisienne
2¼ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1 teaspoon thyme
6 6-pound turkeys
Long fingers of boiled tongue and ham, cut about ½" square
Fresh or canned truffles
Pistachio nuts
Meat stock



Mix the ground meats, garlic, ½ cup cognac, the eggs, ¼ teaspoon quatre épices, 1¼ teaspoons salt, the pepper and thyme in a large bowl. Blend well with the hands. If you wish to test the flavor, cook a small amount of the mixture in butter until cooked through.

Split the turkey down the back and carefully bone the bird, being careful not to slit the skin. With your fingers and a small, sharp-pointed knife, pull and cut the meat away from the bones. When you come to the legs and thighs, use your fingers to help locate and slip out the thigh bones. You may remove the wings and, if you wish, remove the leg and leave only the thigh. When the bird is completely boned, remove the breast fillets. Marinate the fillets for 1 hour in a mixture of cognac, 1 teaspoon salt and a sprinkling of quatre épices or Spice Parisienne.

To assemble the galantine, spread the boned turkey, skin side down, on a table or marble slab. Spread the farce (the ground meat mixture) over the meat of the turkey. Place the well-trimmed marinated fillets in the center of the turkey.

Arrange the fingers of meat and truffles along the sides of the fillets and push them well into the farce. Sprinkle with pistachio nuts and then roll up the stuffed turkey like a giant sausage. Turn in the ends of the skin and bring the sides together so that they overlap. Sew them with light twine and a needle. Roll the turkey in a damp towel and tie securely at the ends and around the middle, leaving pieces of string at the ends.

Half fill a long fish cooker with meat stock and tie the galantine by the strings to the handles at either end so that it is suspended in the stock. Cover well with several thicknesses of aluminum foil. Press the foil around the edge of the cooker and poach the turkey for 2–2½ hours. Remove from the broth after it is partially cooled and weight it so that it holds its shape and becomes very firm as it cools. Chill in the refrigerator for 36 hours before serving. To serve, remove the covering, arrange on a large platter or carving board and surround with chopped aspic. Carve in thinnish slices and serve as an hors d'oeuvre or as a main dish for a buffet meal.

Turkey Galantine is an impressive buffet party dish. The pattern, which emerges as the roll is sliced, is made by stuffing the boned turkey with forcemeat, meat fingers, whole truffles (right), before it is wrapped in a cloth and poached. To make it even more decorative, coat the cooled roll with aspic; top with a design of thin slices of truffles shaped with tiny cutters into crescents, stars circles, and diamonds, and add a final glaze of aspic.

TURKEY PARTS

Turkey Breast Pappagallo

If you cannot get turkey breasts already packed, buy a whole turkey and use the breasts for this dish and the thighs for Turkey Chili.

Breast from an 8–9-pound turkey
Flour
12 tablespoons butter
6 tablespoons oil
Salt, freshly ground pepper
Ham slices
Sliced white truffles, or sliced mushrooms, lightly sautéed in butter
Chicken or turkey broth
Freshly grated Parmesan cheese
Chopped parsley

Remove the breast meat from the bones in 2 whole fillets and cut each fillet into slices about ⅜" thick. Pound lightly between sheets of waxed paper as you would for scaloppine of veal. Flour the slices lightly.

Use 2 skillets for sautéing so the pan will not be overcrowded. Melt half the butter in each skillet and add half the oil to each. Sauté the breast slices gently, turning them often, season with salt and add a few grinds of pepper. They should cook about 10 minutes. Then add a slice of ham to each slice and either 1 or 2 slices of white truffle (the Urbani white truffles are good, although expensive). If you use mushrooms instead, add a tablespoon to each turkey slice. Spoon a little broth over each one and sprinkle with freshly grated Parmesan cheese. Reduce the heat, cover the pan, and simmer for about 5 minutes, or until the cheese melts and blends with the pan juices. Arrange turkey slices on a hot platter and spoon the sauce over them. Sprinkle with chopped parsley. Serve with sauté potatoes, chopped spinach flavored with oil and a touch of garlic and nutmeg. Drink a good white wine—a Verdicchio or a Pouilly Fumé. Serves 6.

Tuscan Turkey Sauce and Pasta

5 6-pound turkey, cut in quarters and prepared as for Turkey Chili
2 large onions, coarsely chopped
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons olive oil
6 large ripe tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and chopped
½ cup fresh basil leaves, finely chopped, or 2–3 teaspoons dried basil
Salt, freshly ground pepper to taste
2–3 pounds hot spaghettini, cooked al dente and drained
Grated Romano cheese
Grated Parmesan cheese

Cook the turkey in water with onion, celery, parsley, and peppers, as for Turkey Chili. Remove and cool. Cut the meat from the bird into small dice. Reduce the broth to 4 cups.

Sauté the onion in the butter and oil, add the tomatoes and simmer until the tomatoes are melted into the onions. Add the basil, salt, and freshly ground pepper. Combine with the 4 cups broth and cook down for 20 minutes. Add the diced turkey and heat through.

Put the pasta on a large platter (toss it with a little oil first). Spoon some of the turkey sauce over the top and serve the remainder in a bowl. Serve grated cheese in bowls, to sprinkle on top. Drink a Valpolicella or Chianti. Serves 8.

Turkey Mole

1 turkey breast and wing
1½ teaspoons salt
2 medium onions, chopped
Bacon fat or oil
2 cloves garlic
2 tablespoons chili powder
1 small dried hot red chile pepper
1 cup ground nuts (almonds, walnuts, peanuts, or cashews)
2 ounces bitter chocolate
1 cup ripe olives (optional)

Cut the turkey wing into 2 pieces, and the breast into 3 or 4 pieces. Place in a large kettle with enough water to cover, and bring to a boil. Add the salt, and simmer for 30 minutes. Meanwhile brown the onion in bacon fat or oil. Add to kettle, along with garlic, chili powder, red pepper, nuts, and chocolate. Cover and simmer until turkey is tender and the sauce is well blended and thickened. Correct seasoning. Add olives about 10 minutes before serving, if you wish.

Serve with polenta and a cucumber salad. Serves 4.

Turkey Chili

This is not a traditional chili and has no connection with any Mexican or Texas recipe. It was devised simply as an experiment and turned out to be delicious.

5 6-pound turkey, cut in quarters
1 onion stuck with cloves
2 stalks celery
2–3 sprigs parsley
2 small dried hot peppers
Salt
2 tablespoons chili powder
1-ounce can peeled green chiles, finely chopped
1 cup almonds, ground or blended
½ cup peanuts, ground or blended
1 large onion, finely chopped
3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
2 green peppers, finely chopped
4 tablespoons olive oil
1 cup small green olives
½ cup blanched almonds

Cover the turkey pieces with water and add the onion stuck with cloves, the celery, parsley, and peppers. Bring to a boil. Reduce the heat, skim off any scum which may rise to the top, and cover the pot. Simmer until the turkey is tender but not falling from the bones. Remove the turkey pieces and cool until they can be handled. Remove the meat from the bones in good-size pieces.

Reduce the broth by half over a brisk flame. You should have about 4 cups broth. Strain and adjust the salt. Add the chili powder, the green chiles, and the ground nuts and simmer until the mixture is thickened, smooth and well-blended in flavor. You may find you wish to add additional chili powder. Sauté the onion, garlic, and green peppers in the olive oil. Add to the sauce and cook for 5 minutes. Add the turkey meat and heat thoroughly. Add the olives and blanched almonds and reheat for 3 minutes.

Serve with rice or polenta and crisp French bread. A radish and cucumber salad with a vinaigrette sauce is good with this. Tortillas are excellent with the chili if you don't serve polenta and French bread. Drink beer. Serves 8–10.

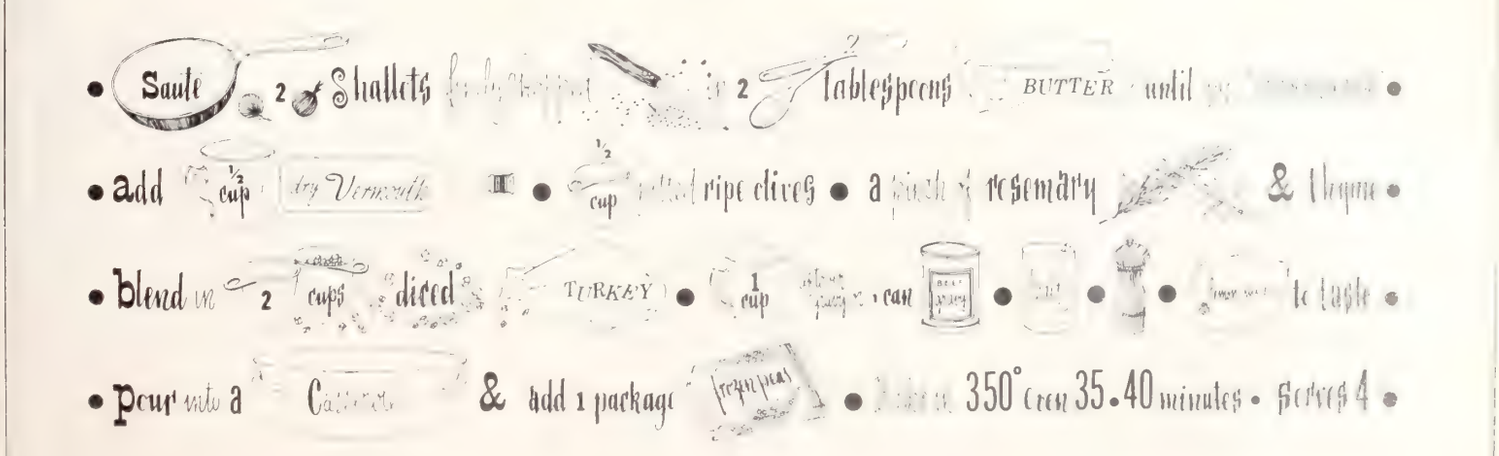
COLD TURKEY

Scalloped Turkey

12 ounces noodles, cooked until tender and drained
1 cup cold turkey stuffing
2 cups diced cold turkey
1 pound mushrooms, sliced
½ cup finely chopped onion
Butter
¼ cup chopped parsley
8 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
Turkey gravy or Béchamel sauce
Buttered crumbs

Make a layer of half the cooked noodles in the bottom of a deep 2½-quart baking dish. Add the stuffing and turkey. Sauté the mushrooms and onion in butter and add to the dish with the parsley and sliced hard-cooked eggs. Add turkey gravy or Béchamel sauce and top with the remaining noodles. Dot with butter and sprinkle with buttered crumbs. Cover and bake in a 350° oven for 25–30 minutes. Remove cover for last 10 minutes of cooking time. Serve with a crisp salad and drink a chilled rosé wine. Serves 6–8.

Casserole of Turkey with Rice



2 medium onions, chopped
Butter
½ pound sliced mushrooms
2 cups diced cold turkey
½ cup diced ham
1 cup crumbled leftover stuffing
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
Pinch of thyme
Salt, freshly ground black pepper to taste
1 tablespoon curry powder
1 cup rice
2 cups hot turkey or chicken broth

Sauté the onions in butter until just tender. Add the mushrooms, and sauté for 2 minutes or so. Combine in a casserole with the turkey, ham, stuffing, parsley, thyme, salt, and pepper.

Add an additional tablespoon of fat and the curry powder to the skillet used for sautéing the onions and lightly sauté the rice. Add to the casserole and pour in the hot broth. Place in a preheated 375° oven and cook until the rice is tender and the liquid is absorbed. Add more heated broth if necessary to finish cooking the rice. Serves 4–6.

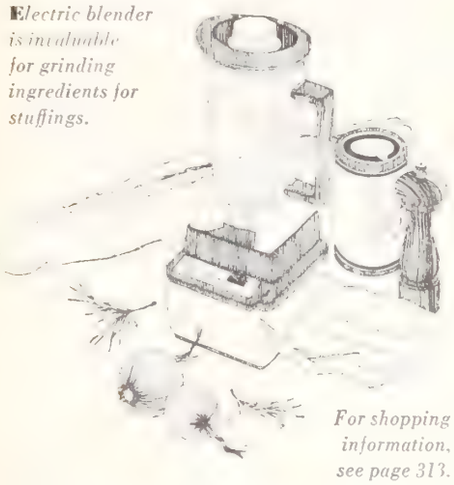
H&G's REBUS RECIPE

Salmi of Cold Turkey

Turkey Salad

½ pound cooked turkey, cubed (a good sized cupful)
6 pitted Greek olives, sliced
Salad greens
1 teaspoon capers
1 tomato, cut in wedges
1 hard-cooked egg, sliced or quartered
Mayonnaise, made with olive oil
Finely chopped parsley

Combine the turkey with the pitted olives. Arrange on a bed of greens and garnish with the capers, tomato sections, and egg.



Spoon mayonnaise over the salad and add a sprinkling of finely chopped parsley. Serves 1.

For an excellent luncheon serve this salad with crisp hot buttered toast and drink a Pouilly Fumé. Follow it with a chocolate mousse or cassis sherbet.

Reuben Sandwich

This old favorite is a delicious way to use up cold turkey.

Allow 2 large slices of a really good pumpernickel or black Russian rye, well buttered, for each sandwich. On one slice place a slice of Switzerland Emmenthal cheese, a generous slice of baked or boiled ham, a layer of really excellent cole slaw, a generous helping of cold white meat of turkey, and Russian dressing. Top with the second slice and serve with additional cole slaw and more Russian dressing if you wish. Drink beer with this.

Electric blender is invaluable for grinding ingredients for stuffings.

For shopping information, see page 313.

A basic bread stuffing is exceedingly accommodating because it lends itself to all kinds of additions and flavorings. Fresh bread crumbs, made in the blender or on a rather coarse grater, are preferable to commercially packaged crumbs. For a dry stuffing, the crumbs may be made from rusk or homemade Melba toast.

The rule for figuring out the proper amount of stuffing is easy to remember—approximately 1 cup per pound of bird. This works very well unless you want stuffing for only one meal, in which case this quantity is excessive. So, starting from the maximum, reduce the amount of stuffing to suit your needs.

Basic Bread Stuffing

½ pound (or more) butter
1 cup finely chopped shallots, onions, or spring onions
8 cups (approximately) fresh bread crumbs, crusts and all
1 tablespoon fresh tarragon (or more to taste) or 2 teaspoons dried tarragon, moistened in a little white wine for 1 hour
1 cup finely chopped parsley
1 tablespoon salt, or to taste
1½ teaspoons freshly ground black pepper

Place the butter, shallots, or onions in a saucepan, and allow the butter to melt over low heat. Do not sauté the shallots. Combine with the crumbs and other ingredients and toss lightly. Add more melted butter if needed, and taste for seasoning. Stuff the bird lightly just before roasting. This makes enough stuffing for a 10-pound bird.

Herb Variations: Instead of tarragon you can use any of the following herbs to taste. (It is better not to mix herbs, except for the addition of parsley, but mix if you must.)

1. About 1½ teaspoons dried thyme, soaked in a little white wine for an hour.
2. Sage. Use with discretion, or it smothers all other flavors.
3. Summer savory. This has a delicious flavor for turkey and is less known than most herbs.
4. Basil. The fresh is delicious, but it is only available in summer, when it is superb in the stuffing of a spitted bird. If fresh is not available, use about 2 teaspoons of dried basil, soaked in white wine beforehand.

Another way to give the flavor of fresh basil to your dressing is by adding pesto, the Italian sauce normally used with pasta. Again, pesto can be made only in summer, when fresh basil is in the market or in your herb garden, but fortunately it freezes rather well, so it is possible to have it with your Thanksgiving or Christmas bird. Add about 3 tablespoons of pesto or more to the basic bread stuffing.

Pesto

2 cups fresh basil leaves
3 cloves garlic
1 cup parsley
⅔ cup pine nuts
Olive oil, approximately 1 cup

Blend all ingredients in a blender, or pound in a mortar until they form a soft paste. The amount of oil used depends on the method. If you use the blender, it is best to make the pesto in two batches, using enough oil each time to cover the blades of the blender—about ½ cup. In the mortar method, add the oil a little at a time, until the paste has reached the proper consistency. It should not be too runny. Makes about 1¼ cups.

To store unused portion of pesto, place in a jar and cover the surface with a film of olive oil. Wrap in foil or plastic wrap. Keep in refrigerator, or freeze.

Additives for Basic Bread Stuffing

You will have to reduce the amount of crumbs, depending upon the quantity of additive.

1. 1½–2 cups coarsely broken cooked chestnuts. (These may be purchased in tins.)
2. 1 cup or more toasted salted filberts.
3. 1 cup or more toasted unblanched almonds.
4. 1 cup or more salted pecan halves.
5. 1½–2 cups toasted walnut halves.
6. 2 cups finely diced celery. This makes a delicious change in the basic stuffing and is also good in goose.
7. 1½ cups of finely diced fennel bulb. Omit any other herb save parsley.
8. A head of finely shredded Boston lettuce. Added to the basic stuffing at the last minute, this is surprisingly good. You may find you need additional salt.
9. Giblets. Chop the gizzard and heart very fine; reserve the liver. Sauté the gizzard and heart with the onions just enough to color them, then mix with the rest of the ingredients. Use the liver in the sauce later. Sauté it lightly in butter and chop exceedingly fine before adding.

Sausage Stuffing

A favorite trick is to stuff the body cavity of the bird with the bread stuffing, using one of the variations given above, and the neck cavity with the following very highly seasoned sausage meat stuffing.

2 pounds rather fat shoulder or loin of pork (about 60 per cent lean and 40 per cent fat), ground coarsely
1½ teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
½ teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon or more of the same herb used in the bread stuffing
Large dash Tabasco
½ teaspoon crushed anise seeds

Blend all ingredients lightly but well. Makes 3 cups stuffing.

Corn Bread Stuffing

¼ pound (or more) butter
1¼ cups finely chopped onion
1 cup finely diced celery
½ cup chopped celery tops
1½ teaspoons thyme
1 pound small link sausages or chipolatas, lightly browned
1 tablespoon salt or more, to taste
1½ teaspoons freshly ground black pepper
6–8 cups coarse corn bread crumbs
¾ cup Madeira

Melt the butter in a saucepan with the chopped onion. Add the celery, celery tops, and thyme. Sauté the sausages gently or broil them. Add the salt and pepper to the crumbs and mix with the onion-celery mixture, the sausages, and the Madeira. Add more melted butter or some of the rendered sausage fat, if needed. Taste for seasonings. Stuff the turkey lightly. Makes enough stuffing for a 10-pound bird.

Variations: 1. Omit sausages and add 1 cup whole kernel corn and ½ cup finely chopped green chiles (or 1 cup, if you like the taste of chiles). Substitute ½ cup cognac for the Madeira.

2. Omit sausages. Sauté ½ pound sausage meat with the onions, breaking it up well. Add to the stuffing with 1 cup pecans.
3. Omit sausages. Add 1½ cups finely shredded Smithfield ham to the stuffing. Sauté the onions in ham fat instead of butter.
4. Omit sausages. Add 2 cups crisp crumbled bacon to the stuffing. Sauté onions in bacon fat.
5. Omit sausages and celery. Add 2 cups coarsely chopped Smithfield ham and 2 cups coarsely chopped, roasted and salted peanuts. If peanuts are not to your liking, you may substitute toasted and salted filberts.
6. If you like oysters in a stuffing, add about 2 dozen oysters with their liquor.

White Bordeaux

The rich white wines of Bordeaux (Sauternes and Barsac) require an overabundance of sunshine that must extend into the harvest season for them to achieve greatness. Consequently, the white Bordeaux failed in 1964, despite the heights achieved by the red wines, because October rain prevented complete maturation. These sweet white wines achieved great breed, depth, and fruit, however, in '62, '61, and '59.

The drier white wines of Graves, which are picked earlier, achieved delicacy and finesse in 1964. Do not look for the older years in these wines—they are too risky and may have lost their freshness—but concentrate on the vintages of '61, '62, and '64.

Red Burgundy

The vineyard soil as well as the reputation of the grower plays a most significant part in the wines of Burgundy, even more than in Bordeaux. Since there are so many mediocre wines that bear exalted Burgundian names and vintages, you should exercise greater care in their selection than in most other areas. If any '53 or '55 Burgundies remain in your cellar, it would be wise to drink them up within the near future—next in the timetable would be the '59's. The '62's are excellent, quick maturing, and you can start enjoying them now. If you are fortunate in possessing any of the '61's, it would be wise to let them rest for at least another year or two before savoring their virtues. Avoid the dismal '63's, and '60's. The '57's are hard and, in general, not to be recommended; and the '58's, picked too early, are on the whole, poor. Those growers who had the courage to pick their '58's later than their neighbors have been rewarded and have produced remarkable wine, despite condemnation from the vintage charts.

Happily, the '64's are starting to arrive, rich in fruit, balance, and charm. They will not last much beyond 1972, but will give a lovely light during their brief, brilliant existence.

White Burgundies

A very sunny year may make great red wine, but it often imparts too much alcohol and insufficient acidity to white wine, thus interfering with balance. This was the tragedy of the 1959 white Burgundies, glorious in their youth, but now gone. As a safety measure, it would be a wise idea to avoid any white Burgundy that predates 1961. For present drinking, there are the delightful, fragrant, and harmonious '62's—soon to be followed by equally excellent '64's.

For those who like older white Burgundies, there is only one year to pick—1961. Here is a wine that is beginning to show its depth of flavor now, is slowly unfolding, and promises, at least from the better vineyards, to be good a decade hence. There are some fine '63's, but since they are not so well-known, the probability is that very few of them will ever reach the United States.

Rhines and Moselles

Except for Beerenauslese and other rare, expensive, very sweet wines, avoid any German wines that predate 1959. Interestingly enough, the '59's, the greatest year since the war, have conserved their freshness and fruit, losing only their early oversweetness, and promise to outlive any of their successor years.

The '60's, '61's, and '62's have proven light, fragrant, generally dry, pleasant, and most useful. But there is no doubt that the '64's, just starting to put in their appearance, represent the best vintage since 1959. They have tremendous style and charm, coupled with magnificent bouquet and finesse. Buy the '64's, enjoy their fruit, and elegance, and for special occasions acquire the great Spaetlese and Auslese of 1959.

Rhône Valley

There was great joy everywhere in Europe during the harvest of 1964 except in the Rhône Valley where a severe spring hailstorm affected quantity and quality adversely. This was particularly tragic since it was on the heels of a poor 1963. But all is not gloom: the growers here can boast of light, fine '62's. The '59's did not share the success of the rest of France, producing satisfactory, although not distinguished Rhônes. The '57's, '55's, and '52's are outstanding, vigorous, do not show their age, and still enjoy a good drinking future.

Loire Valley

Since youth is a virtue among the white wines of the Loire, it follows that it might be hazardous to acquire any years before 1962. Some of the best postwar examples of Pouilly Fumé and Sancerre were produced in 1962. The '63's show no merit and can be skipped. The '64's are showing their fresh charm; attractive and excellent

Quick Gourmet Recipe of the Month

Turkey Hash

1 onion, coarsely chopped
1 green pepper, coarsely chopped
4 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons oil
2 cups or more diced cold turkey
1 cup cold stuffing, if available or 1 cup diced cooked potatoes
Dash Tabasco
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
Cream or hot water
¼ cup blanched almonds
1 cup pitted Greek olives
5 eggs
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Sauté the onion and green pepper in the butter and oil for 3–4 minutes. Add the turkey and stuffing or potatoes and press down into pan. Add Tabasco and pepper, mix all ingredients well, press again, and cook over medium heat. If the mixture seems too dry, add some cream or hot water and let it cook down a bit. Add almonds and olives and correct the seasoning.

Beat eggs lightly, mix with half the cheese and pour gently over the hash. Sprinkle remaining cheese on top. Cook until eggs are just set. If you wish, you may run the pan under the broiler to brown for a minute, but be careful the eggs do not overcook and burn.

Serve with a green salad and crisp toast or bread. Drink a chilled California rosé. Serves 4–6.

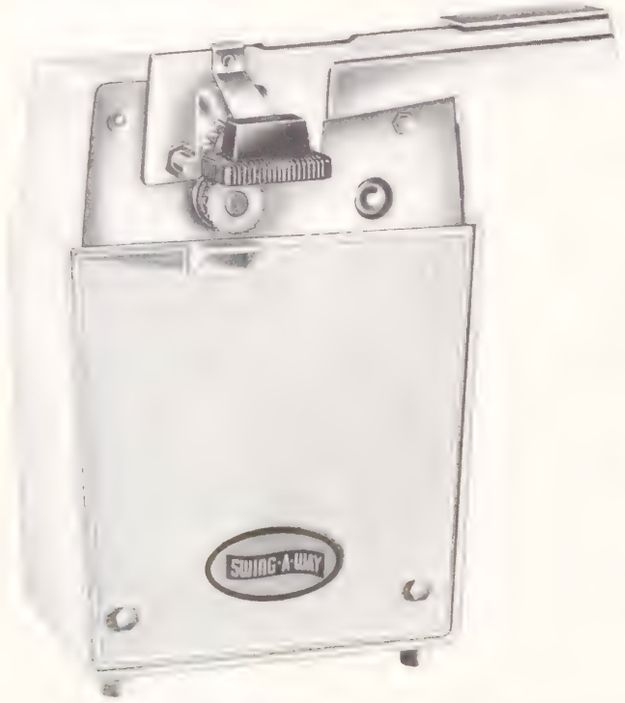
right across the board from Muscadet to Sancerre to Pouilly Fumé.

Beaujolais

Beaujolais, fruity, brilliant in color, and disarmingly engaging, has been born to be consumed young. There is simply no reward for waiting. In light of this, confine your purchases to the excellent '64's which are now arriving and will delight wine drinkers through 1967. We hope time gives us a worthy successor.

Champagne



Since most Champagne bears no date on the label, and vintage Champagnes are a blend of wines from various districts, "vintage" in Champagne does not have the same meaning as in other wines. After a particularly successful harvest, the world-famous Champagne houses customarily declare it a vintage year. They then start the delicate task of blending a wine that will be characteristic of that particular year while retaining the traditional qualities that identify the well-known brand.

We know the '55's have proven excellent, and the '59's, now seen everywhere, are showing themselves to be good, rich, and full-bodied. The '61's, soon to arrive, will be similar in characteristic to the '55's and will be the vogue of the years directly ahead.

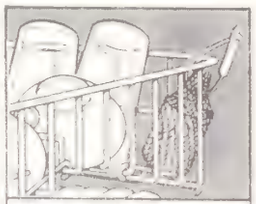
Simply amazing how 'Jet-Dry' automatically dries glasses spot-free in dishwashers!



Even though your dishwasher washes your dishes hygienically clean, your glasses and silverware can still come out with unsightly spots. This happens because minerals in the clean water itself cause these spots. Every drop of water left to dry on glasses and dishes after they are washed causes a spot. The water evaporates, but the minerals remain and form a spot. Detergents are helpless to prevent such spots, simply because they cannot wipe rinse water off dishes. But JET-DRY does. JET-DRY in the rinse water causes glasses, silverware and dinnerware to shed every drop of water right after they are rinsed. In a split second they are as bone-dry, spot-free and sparkling as if you wiped and polished every piece with a clean, dry towel.

If your dishwasher is equipped to dispense JET-DRY, don't let the reservoir run dry. One washing without JET-DRY can cause spots.

Leading dishwasher manufacturers recognize and recommend JET-DRY as the answer to spotting problems. They actually equip many models to automatically dispense JET-DRY, and place sample bottles of JET-DRY in these dishwashers at the factory.

Until recently you could enjoy spot-free automatic drying only if your dishwasher was equipped to dispense LIQUID JET-DRY. Now any dishwasher can dry dishes spot-free with new SOLID JET-DRY — a handy bar neatly encased in a mesh bag. Clip it to any corner of the upper rack, and watch your spotting problems disappear.

If your dishwasher is not equipped with a LIQUID JET-DRY dispenser use SOLID JET-DRY. Clip on any corner of upper rack.

Remember to buy JET-DRY®

CHILDREN'S GIFTS— WITH DIVIDENDS

Kits that encourage making and giving

"Her Majesty's Guard" is an easy-to-sew doll, resplendent in an authentic blue and red uniform and measuring 14½ inches from boots to busby. He'd make a jolly doorstop, too, filled with sand and a weight. At Wilburt, $2 ppd.

Six Japanese tools for carving wood or linoleum blocks fit in a snug box with ink, rubbing disc, brush, and sharpening stone. Might inspire holiday cards, bookplates, a lasting hobby. At John Leidy, $1.85 ppd.

Playful puppets or party favors can be made with this kit of thirty-three doll faces, assorted beads to string on pipe cleaners, plastic holders. Puppets are 3 to 4 inches tall. F. A. O. Schwarz, $6.50 ppd.

A project book will give any friend of Pooh's (and who isn't one?) a horde of amusing things to see and simple things to make: place cards, invitations, post cards, Christmas ornaments, cookies, valentines, puppets. Determined Productions, $3.50.

An apes-to-zebras cut-and-fold zoo includes twelve paper animals that are fun to play with or use as three-dimensional table decorations at a children's party. Made in Germany, this kit is at Wilburt, $2 ppd.

Everything a young photographer needs to develop, print, and enlarge his shots—plus a 35 mm projector to assemble and show them with—is contained in this photo lab, with directions. F. A. O. Schwarz, $15.45 ppd.

With Lego's colorful Gear Set (forty-three connecting parts) a child can build all sorts of moving models. Add a battery-driven Lego Motor-Pak; inventions go by themselves. Abraham & Straus, $4.95.

Kit for a young needlewoman dexterous enough for crewelwork holds one mushroom-patterned eyeglass case of natural linen twill, nine shades of yarn, liner, needles, instructions. Art Needlework, $6.50 ppd.

goes up so easy... looks like a dream!

You don't have to be an expert to panel a room when you use the Royalcote remodeling system. Durable and beautiful, Royalcote wood-grain panels are easy-to-use—go up quickly! New Royalcote adhesive fixes paneling in place—quickly and permanently over solid backing, studs or furring strips—eliminates unsightly nail holes. Finally, Royalcote color matched wood or metal moldings give you that superb custom-finished look.

Now, all you have to do is stand back and admire. Once up, your work is done. And, once up, Royalcote hardboard paneling is virtually child-proof, dent resistant, easy to clean with just a damp cloth. This wall is Honeytone Cherry. See all ten Royalcote wood grains, including Walnut, Pecan, Teak, Birch and Oak, at your Masonite dealer's.

For a colorful selection of panel-it ideas, send 10¢ for the booklet, "New Fashions in Home Decor." Masonite Corporation, 29 N. Wacker Drive, Dept. HG-11, Chicago, Illinois 60606.

Matching metal moldings [illegible] wood, including base, cove, inside and outside corners.

Indoor lighting

Much of the holiday activity is going to be indoors, so let's consider lighting situations there. Besides the standard "jelly bean" flash which gives a remarkable amount of light, there is a "flashcube" developed by Kodak and Sylvania to fit the new Instamatic cameras (see page 269): it holds four bulbs for use in rapid succession. There are light attachments for most movie cameras. If you have daylight indoors, try to take advantage of it by keeping your back more or less to it so that it and your flash will give your subject a nice balanced lighting. Of course, children may be playing or partying in front of a window so you have to take them toward the light or not at all. This so-called back lighting can be quite pleasing if you do something about it. By keeping at an angle, you can avoid window reflections and possible glare from the flash. By propping a large white cardboard beside you, or getting a friend to hold up a white cloth opposite the window, you can reflect some of the daylight back into your picture to supplement the flash. If your ceilings are white, you can increase the light level of a room by replacing the bulb of an adjustable floor lamp with a 150-watt reflector flood, and directing it at the ceiling so some of the light bounces back into your picture.

Whenever possible, leave some space behind your subject so that the wall or other background will receive less light and make your subject stand out. If you are taking a group of people—perhaps around a table or tree—try to have everyone approximately the same distance from the camera, or the near faces will be washed-out and the rear faces dark. Get the near ones to move back or the far ones nearer, then move yourself in to the 5-10 feet distance recommended on your flashholder. Another tip about snapping people: if you get them broadside to the camera, they will appear exaggeratedly broad in the print or slide. Maneuver them so they stand at an angle, in partial profile, then ask them to very slowly turn heads only toward you. When moving in as close as your camera permits, it's a good habit to tilt it very slightly after composing your picture in the view finder. This is because the lens is below the finder and may not get quite all you see at the top of the picture. Since placement of the finder varies, just remember that the tiny tilt for closeups should be toward the view finder of your camera.

Plan your script

Home-movie cameras which accept the Super-8 cartridge, like the Bell & Howell Autoload, are so easy that you may be tempted to shoot before you think. You will be better pleased if you plan a sequence of activity which tells a story, varied by long, medium, and closeup shots. A long shot (25 feet or more outdoors, less indoors) can set the scene: for instance, your living room with Christmas tree at the far end. A few brief takes at medium distances might show members of the household arriving on the scene. Then at 6 feet perhaps some closeups of individuals opening gifts. Why not plan a complete story and have your camera all set to shoot short related sequences from tree-trimming Christmas Eve to tired-but-happy sleepyheads Christmas night? This basic suggestion can also be applied to a series of snapshots. Very often even a still subject, like a table setting or a room decorated for a party, is more effectively recorded in a series of detail shots than in one picture that tries to include everything.

There is a tendency with a new camera to shoot too much, but your movies will be more active and interesting if you keep takes fairly short. You can even make a tree decorate itself by keeping your camera in one spot, on a tripod, during the trimming, and shooting a couple of seconds each time some decorations or lights are added. You might use the same technique on a toy that has to be assembled, like a doll house or a model train. Other tendencies to avoid are panning and zooming. Panning is not a good technique for amateur movie-makers; hold the camera steady. And if you have a zoom lens, use it very sparingly, preferably between takes and not during actual shooting.

A final tip: the best care you can give your camera is to use it; keep it loaded and ready, protected by a case or plastic bag. Take pictures frequently and study the ones you get back—and those of others—to see how to improve your own. If you insist on shelving your camera for months at a time, store it carefully away from excessive heat and humidity; and remove batteries to guard against possible corrosion. Ask your dealer to check your batteries periodically to see if you need fresh ones.

a decorative ornament. Above all, they embellish their rooms with local handcrafts, and they have a rich supply to choose from: Indian crafts, Mexican crafts, and the work of local American craftsmen. Navaho rugs, Acoma and Santa Clara pottery, Papago baskets. Hopi kachina dolls. Mexican tinwork, pottery animals, paper flowers, serapes, fine contemporary American pottery and hand weaves—all these enliven almost every house you visit.

Museum-worthy objects often stand side by side with the area's more casual products, for Southwesterners do not take decoration too solemnly. Even the most recently arrived "Anglos" seem to have absorbed the Indians' wry sense of humor and serene disregard of dollars-and-cents value. Newcomers also seem to acquire very rapidly the Indians' relaxed point of view toward religious objects. (Those whose ancestors were converted by the Catholic Spaniards 300 years ago tend to look on the saints as beloved friends rather than awesome ambassadors.) Consequently carved santos and religious paintings are everywhere, apparently used as much for decorative as for symbolic value.

On my first morning in Santa Fe we went shopping, starting as everyone does with the Indian women who settle themselves every day under the portales of the 350-year-old Governors' Palace. For a few dollars I bought a pair of simple silver and turquoise earrings. But after going the rounds of the shops (there and in other cities), I decided that anyone who plans to buy Indian crafts would do well to bone up first by reading, comparative shopping, or visiting museums. For there is a bewildering range of prices and quality, from cheap commercial imitations of the jewelry to really fine Navaho rugs which can easily run to four-figure prices (although they earn the weaver barely a subsistence wage). A good place for easterners to arm themselves with some standards of value is the American Indian Arts Center in New York (1051 Third Avenue). Their prices, naturally, are higher than in the Southwest, but their selections are of top quality and a good guide as to what to look for.

Almost every day we made an excursion from Santa Fe to some spot outside the city. One morning we drove to Taos, land of D. H. Lawrence and Mabel Luhan Dodge, and visited the Taos pueblo or village where the Indians still live in their terraced four-and-five-story adobe houses in approximately the same manner as they were when the Spaniards came in 1540. (Continued on page 318)

Each Indian tribe or pueblo has its own crafts speciality. Here is a representative selection of superior examples and their New York City prices: 1. Zuni (N.M.) pottery owl with babies, 8 inches high, $40. (Smaller, childless owls start at $5.50.) 2. Red pottery bowl from Santa Clara (N. M.) pueblo, also famous for its black pottery, 8¼ inches high, $40. 3. Reddish brown and beige bowl from Zia (N.M.) pueblo. 6¼ inches in diameter, $18.50. 4. Ogre kachina doll by member of Hopi tribe (Ariz.), 17½ inches tall, $55. 5. Basketwork by the Papagos (Ariz.): basket with brown and green motifs 13 inches high, $55; plaque with brown maize design, 25½ inches diameter, $55; covered basket in green and off-white split stitch, 8 inches high, $10. 6. Papago doll—a woman making jam—with real hair, a dress of wine red fabric. About 9½ inches tall, $25. 7. Swatch of Navaho rug in twill weave from Pine Springs (Ariz.). Yellow, beige, d white, 2 feet by 4 feet, 10 inches, $155. 8. Water color, Evolution of Life," by a Navaho, Richard Yazzie, 25 by inches, $50. 9. Hopi Massau kachina, 10 inches tall, $30. xceptionally fine Navaho rug based on a sand painting losely woven in clear blues, reds, yellows, and greens on tral ground, 5 feet by 5 feet, 5 inches, $1200. 11. ARIZONA AND NEW MEXICO continued from page 316

In one of the tiny shops I bought a couple of charming pen-and-ink drawings by a young Indian boy, one of them for 35 cents.

The town of Taos is full of art galleries, but we had time to visit only one, the Manchester Gallery, to see a family show consisting of photographs by Eliot Porter, an outstanding photographer of nature subjects who has prepared several books on the flora and fauna of the Southwest; paintings by his wife, Aline Porter, whose work has been exhibited in New York; and sculpture by their son, Stephen. A few days later when we visited the Porters in their house near Santa Fe, I was delighted to see how beautifully their New England antiques blended with their dark-beamed adobe walled rooms. Before long I discovered almost every family in the Southwest has come from someplace else, bringing part of their former background with them, which makes for marvelously varied mixtures of design.

Another afternoon we drove out to the little hilltop village of Abiquiu to call on painter Georgia O'Keefe, who showed us with pride the new wall-to-wall window she had just cut through the adobe wall of her living room to get a better view of her favorite tree. She also explained how her "mud" floors, as smooth and apparently as hard as polished concrete, are refinished every few years by Indian women who apply a new coat of adobe which they smooth on, in the traditional way, with their hands. And she gave us a haunting description of the Penitentes who used to cross the hill behind her house during Holy Week chanting the Miserere to the accompaniment of a flute.

Santa Fe is rapidly becoming an all-round cultural center. In addition to four museums, it boasts a widely acclaimed repertory opera that performs during July and August in an outdoor theatre nestled in the foothills of the Sangre de Cristo Mountains. And last year the city acquired its first secular college, St. John's of Santa Fe, western branch of the venerable St. John's College of Annapolis, Md. I was lucky enough to be on hand for the opening festivities. The buildings were designed in the Territorial style by architects Holien and Buckley and the interiors, by architect Girard. Among the many engaging details are the multi-paneled doors, each painted in a different scheme of three or four vivid colors; the lobby mural composed of symbols of all the various branches of learning (St. John's is the original "Great Books" school); and the landscape design by Garret Eckbo, who used carefully chosen boulders, rather than plants, to accent a sandy, grassless slope and the pool at its foot.

After the dinner celebrating the opening, guests were entertained by a small group of dancers from the Taos pueblo, each painted and costumed so that exactly half of him was white from head to toe, the other half bright blue. As the dancers turned this way and that, the changing patterns were fascinating, but this was not an authentic dance, the local residents around me explained (authentic Indian dances are never designed to entertain). I was happy to have seen it, however, because I never managed to be in any locality on the date a real dance was being held. (In planning a visit to the Southwest, it would be well worth checking dance dates ahead with the local Chambers of Commerce or the Visitors' Bureaus.

My next stop after leaving Santa Fe was Flagstaff, Ariz., which might not look too logical on the map. But it is difficult to cover Arizona and New Mexico logically. The excellent through highways make driving easy and fast, and in some places the scenery is magnificent. But the distances are so great that to see the two states entirely by car would inevitably involve hours and hours of seeing nothing at all. Air schedules, on the other hand, are designed to accommodate the needs and habits of local passengers, so you sometimes find that "you can't get there from here" unless you take a multi-stop flight or work out a crazy-looking crisscross itinerary.

FOR "WHERE YOU CAN BUY" SEE NEXT TO LAST PAGE.

In Flagstaff I picked up a car and drove south (alternate U. S. route 89) through Oak Creek Canyon, surely one of the most beautiful spots in the U. S. You approach the canyon from its rim and gradually work your way down, via a series of switchbacks, to the Oak Creek River. As I reached the bottom, it began to rain gently—a pleasant experience among the aspen and evergreens. But after driving a few more miles, I suddenly emerged into brilliant sunshine, in a valley surrounded by huge bare rocks of an incredible deep rose color. I had arrived at the town of Sedona.

Buildings in the cliffs

After a surprisingly good lunch at "The Turtle" I drove on toward Montezuma Castle. On my way out of Sedona I passed the Holy Cross Chapel, a gift to the community by one of the local craftsmen. Modern in design, resembling a framed cross, it nestles in the pink rock as if it had been created by the same geologic miracle.

Montezuma Castle, built by Pueblo Indians sometime between 1100 and 1400 A.D., is said to be one of the best preserved cliff ruins in the Southwest. Although for safety reasons visitors are not allowed in the upper castle built high in the face of the cliff, you can go through the lower building and get a close-up view of the building techniques that sired the Southwest architectural style.

I took the pleasant spruce-lined main highway 79 back to Flagstaff, then took off next morning for the Grand Canyon and Monument Valley—but not before telephoning ahead for a reservation at Goulding's Lodge. The drive northwest through the Kaibab National Forest in the San Francisco mountains was sheer bliss—no steep grades or distracting traffic, just steady progress through towering evergreens set suddenly ablaze every so often with groves of white-trunked golden-leaved aspen.

As often as I had seen pictures of the Grand Canyon, I was unprepared for its scale. Even as I stared at its vastness, I didn't believe it was true. After lunch at the El Tovar hotel, I drove east along the south rim, stopping every now and then at another lookout for another view. Finally I reached the gate of the Park where I filled up the gas tank and looked with disdain on the bags of water offered "for traveling across the desert." A few miles farther on I passed under a metal arched sign, "Welcome to Navaholand."

When I had telephoned Goulding's (so remote it has a mobile telephone number), I had been informed that dinner would be served ranch style promptly at 6:30, so I was keeping an eye on the speedometer and the clock. If I reached Tonalea on route 64 before 4:00, I figured, I could afford to stop for tea. I reached Tonalea at 3:50, but it didn't look as if it had ever seen tea. And I was thirsty (memories of those Grand Canyon water bags). Twenty minutes later I came to a mark on the map labeled Cow Springs. It was marked on the ground by a single building with a sign that said "trading post." It turned out to be not a shop for Indian crafts as I had expected, but the very modern little supermarket where I found myself the sole foreigner among a throng of Saturday-shopping Navahos. Diffidently, I presented at the checkout counter a bottle of Pepsi-Cola.

Route 64 is a brand new black-top road. Two years ago, I would not have been able to drive its sandy (or muddy) ruts. The speed limit is 70, and it becomes a game to see how steadily you can keep your foot on the accelerator.

Only Seeburg organs have ingenious Select-a-Rhythm.

So a Seeburg organ's more fun for everyone. Much more.

We insisted that our organs be more fun for their owners right from the start. That's why Seeburg organs—and only Seeburg—have the ingenious feature we call Select-a-Rhythm.

Listen:

Take a dozen percussion voices—drums of one sort and another, tom-toms, maracas, claves, cymbals, and so on. Now, using different combinations of these voices, produce different dance rhythms, say 18 of them. Then get an electronic mastermind to fix it so you can summon up any rhythm of your choice at the punch of a little button.

Choose your tempo, set it for "constant", and play away. Or, set it on "follow" and your personal percussion combo will follow your tempos.

That's Seeburg Select-a-Rhythm. Much more fun for everyone. Right away.

Seeburg Organs are as versatile and responsive as modern electronic organs come, and far better than most. Yet when your final choice is made, it will be made on quality of tone. And on that basis alone, we are confident you will choose a Seeburg with pleasure. A Seeburg organ speaks with the most beautiful and most exciting voices a modern organ can have.

Oh, yes. All that about one organ being "easier to play" than another. Nonsense. They are all easy to play. But a Seeburg is easiest of all. Why? Because Select-a-Rhythm is the greatest learning device since the metronome. (Incidentally, a metronome is also included in the Select-a-Rhythm.) Send for a free folder and the name of your nearest dealer. Write: Seeburg Organs, 1504 N. Dayton Street, Chicago 60622.

There's a Seeburg piano, too. Superb.

If yours is about to become a "piano family," we invite you to buy a Seeburg. You will be happy with it for years—to look at, to listen to, to play. Piano actions—a piano's "works"—were the original Seeburg product way back in 1902. Knowing what goes into the product led to the name: Superb Seeburg Pianos.

There is nothing to distract you. Not a billboard. The land is barren, only sparse vegetation studding the sandy soil. Occasionally you see a hogan, but it is miles before you see another and you wonder where the 84,000 Navahos actually live. The scanty traffic consists entirely of long-haul Diesel trucks, "camper" trucks, and pick-up trucks with three-generation Navaho families bouncing around in the back. When one or two Navaho men gave me a friendly wave (the women rarely smile), I realized how conspicuous I was, a lone woman driving a Chevy hard-top.

I reached Monument Valley at sunset, lucky timing for which I shall always be grateful. Those fantastic spires, pinnacles, and turrets of solid sandstone, precipitately rising 1,100 to 2,000 feet above the desert floor, are overwhelming at any time of day, but dappled with the shadows of twilight, they are pure magic.

It wasn't hard to find Goulding's (actually over the Utah border). But I can't imagine feeling more relieved on arriving at a Saharan oasis. As far as I could make out, there was no other place to eat or sleep within miles.

Next day, driving south toward Many Farms (the only place in the reservation where I came across a concentration of homes), I thought for a minute I had landed on the moon. All around me as far as I could see was bare black rock, the only vegetation, a few wisps of grass by the roadside. But when I topped the next ridge, there in the hollow below was a glorious stand of golden cottonwoods. I expected soon to be crossing the stream that was keeping them alive, but it must have been underground.

By this time I could tell when I was approaching a "town" by the water tower that gleamed for miles in the sunlight. But when I reached it, the scene was always the same: a few Quonset-like buildings and the long, low brick structures of the Navaho boarding school. (Because of the impassibility of the secondary roads in winter, the children must live at school.)

Around 5:00 in the afternoon I pulled into Thunderbird Lodge, the caravansary between the town of Chinle (pronounced Chinlee) and Canyon de Chelly (pronounced d'Shay), and I thought it might be nice to have a cocktail. But I was politely reminded that no alcoholic beverages are sold anywhere within the Reservation.

Leaping the centuries

Next morning I braved the sandy, one-car-wide, winding, climbing road to the rim of the canyon just far enough to reach the lookout point for the White House cliff dwelling on the far side. Viewed from across the canyon, the gleaming White House seemed even more spectacular than Montezuma Castle viewed close up. The higher section, tucked in the mouth of a cave in the sheer cliff, 30 feet above the canyon floor, used to be reached by ladders from the roof of a five-story house below.

Returning to Chinle, I headed next for Hubbell's Trading Post at Ganado. Established in 1876, this famous post and its 160-acre estate is one of the few parcels of private property within the Reservation. I was confused by the complex of buildings when I got there, and couldn't tell which one to enter. Seeing a large open doorway I looked in, and was entertained by the following sight: on a bench inside sat a Navaho woman in traditional tribal costume—velvet jacket, long full calico skirt, ropes of jewelry. Behind her whirred about twenty washing machines, but she was staring fixedly at the opposite wall. Looking in that direction, I saw the magnetic attraction—a television screen.

In addition to running a Laundromat, Hubbell's is profusely stocked with every kind of Navaho craft, and there is a comforting air of authenticity about the place. For the first time, I had the courage to buy a rug—a very small rug of coarse heavy weave. But I liked the pattern, the colors—off-white and mustardy gold—and especially the price: $33. This was not a rug to hang in a place of honor on the wall, but it made a good-looking bedside rug for my son's bachelor apartment.

The drive across the Defiance Plateau through forests of spruce and hemlock was an invigorating change from the treeless desert. On the other side is Window Rock, the Navaho Tribal capital. I had an introduction to Mrs. Anna Wauneka, one of three women on the seventy-four-member Tribal Council and former chairman of the public health program, and having heard of her accomplishments in the fight against tuberculosis and infant dysentery, I was eager to meet her. Mrs. Wauneka was in a meeting, I was told at the Bureau of Indian Affairs. But they insisted upon sending a pretty little Indian secretary to announce my arrival. Together we crossed the street to the octagonal Council chambers where the young woman asked me to wait at the door while she went inside. In two minutes she returned with Mrs. Wauneka, a commandingly tall, twinkly-eyed woman in Navaho dress. Apparently unperturbed by the presumptuous interruption, she was as friendly as if we had been meeting at someone's house for lunch. After a brief exchange of greetings to and from New York, I left, happy that I had made firsthand contact with the Navahos.

Forty-five minutes later I was over the New Mexico border at the Gallup airport where I turned in the car and boarded the plane to fly back across Arizona to Phoenix.

Phoenix is a big city and like almost every other city in the Southwest, growing bigger every day. In less than ten years it has stretched from 52 square miles to a sprawling 223 square miles that includes Tempe, site of Arizona State University, and the resort area of Scottsdale, now almost a city in itself. Both the Mountain Shadows Resort and the Camelback Inn are sparkling sunny spots for a holiday, or for luncheon, if you are staying someplace else. But I like to explore new places on foot, so I was happy to be lodged at a hotel within easy walking distance of Scottsdale's famous shopping, art gallery, and restaurant district. In October the sun was too warm for comfortable walking much before 4:00 P.M., but that gave me time to investigate two or three places each day before closing, and to windowshop after that. The opportunities were lavish: Indian crafts, contemporary crafts, basketry, imports from the Orient, antiques, locally designed resort clothes and accessories. Scottsdale is particularly proud of its Fifth Avenue, a three-block stretch of shops of all types.

The echoes of past centuries that pervade Santa Fe and some parts of Tucson are absent from Scottsdale and the other residential suburbs of Phoenix, which is a preponderantly modern city with an atmosphere more like that of Southern California. Adobe (and stucco) is still widely used for building, but the architecture rarely adheres closely to the traditional style. One exception I saw was the William Heusers' house of burnt adobe, designed by architect George Christensen and perched high on a ledge in Scottsdale's Clearwater Canyon. Mrs. Heuser, who had spent years studying details of the Territorial style, worked very closely with her architect, and the house is an inspiring demonstration of how a tradition can be adapted to meet both today's living needs and a difficult, *un*traditional site.

One evening I was taken to a concert at Arizona State University's new Grady Gammage Memorial Auditorium, the last major design of Frank Lloyd Wright (Taliesin West, winter headquarters of his Fellowship, has been a Phoenix-area landmark for twenty-five years). Fifty slender columns, 55 feet tall, support the circular outer porch, a spectacular sight when the building is lighted at night. The interior color scheme selected by Mrs. Wright—desert rose, terra-cotta copper and gold—is most ingratiating. And the auditorium is said to have perfect acoustics, a claim I wouldn't quarrel with.

I was sorry I couldn't squeeze in the 140-mile round trip to the Jackson & Perkins Rose Fields in Harquahala Valley, which is the largest rose farm in the world. Phoenix now claims to be the rose capital of the U.S., a fact you don't dispute after visiting only a few of the local gardens where lush roses of every variety contrast dramatically with the grassless desert soil.

Almost every garden has a patio bell, or a string of them—bronze or pottery bells that sway and tinkle in the wind. They were originated by the architect-designer-craftsman, Paolo Soleri, whom we visited one evening just in time to get a twilight glimpse of the fascinating concrete structures he and his students built by casting concrete on preshaped mounds of earth. I was also very much taken by his pottery planters—big ones for shrubs or small trees. Sometimes they include a supporting pedestal that you plant in the ground; sometimes the bowl is designed to project from the side of a slope.

One of the smaller delights (and lessons) of my spring trip to Phoenix was being introduced at the end of a warm day to a popular local thirst quencher, the Salty Dog. In New York and Washington, D. C., it goes by the name of grapefruit juice and vodka. But in those cities your hostess does not duck out to the garden to pick the grapefruit off the tree. Nor does she usually add the flourish that makes all the difference: frosting the rim of the pre-chilled glass with salt.

Travel between Phoenix to Tucson is no problem, since flights in both directions are frequent and fast. In April I made the trip by car—a 119-mile drive but, in April, an unforgettable experience. Mile after mile of the roadside was lined with blue lupin, white prickly poppies, desert marigolds. It was hard to believe they were actually growing wild, and on the gravelly shoulders of the road as well as in the sandy fields. Some species of cactus were blooming, too, and although I have to confess that cacti are not my favorite plants, to see them in bloom is an extraordinary sight.

During my first stay in Tucson, I got my first glimpse of Southwest ranch life. One morning I drove, with H&G's contributing editor, about 45 miles south through the Santa Cruz valley to the Goodwin ranch. Mr. Goodwin, a transplanted New Yorker who raises quarter horses, was jubilant because the first colt bred on the ranch had just won a blue ribbon. Through huge solid wooden gates that moved on rollers, we drove into the big sunny courtyard almost surrounded by adobe buildings: ranch house, guest house, servants house, shop, and garage. The place had once been a co-educational children's school, our host explained, and he had remodeled it with the help of architect Gordon Luepke, aiming to achieve the dignity of the Old Spanish haciendas tempered by the simplicity required for ranch life. In the main house, the ceilings had been raised 7 feet which gave the rooms unusually noble proportions (see living room, page 254). The blend of architecture and decorative objects in the local tradition with oriental rugs and antiques transported from the east was a mixture I had now become used to. But I did not expect to find it (along with Marin and Klee paintings, Picasso and Chagall engravings) in this remote cattle country, where mares grazed with their colts not far from the living room windows. Sensible concessions had been made, however: we learned that the comfortable chairs and sofas slipcovered in white sailcloth had replaced a collection of Belter furniture now in the attic ("too fragile for visiting ranchers, cowhands and children").

Tucson townhouse

Recently built houses in Tucson are apt to be transitional in design, reflecting many of the facets of the old adobe style without wholly adhering to it. In the older section of the city, however, some of the pre-Territorial buildings are being restored. E. F. Sanguinetti, director of the Tucson Art Center, lives in one of them, a townhouse version of the adobe style, with 15-foot ceilings and walls 3 feet thick. Its front wall, facing what was once the old Camino Real or Royal Way, is built on the foundations of the original adobe walls of the old Spanish town. Behind this ancient façade are rooms filled with a delightful medley of furnishings of widely scattered origin put together with a sure sense of decorative composition and a light touch of humor—for instance, the chest top arrangement of ruby glass and waxed red apples on our cover. When Mr. Sanguinetti invited us to dinner, we were particularly impressed by his inventive use of large white Italian pottery chop plates in lieu of place plates.

Of all the surprises I had in the Southwest, none could match the first sight of Tucson's Mission San Xavier del Bac, rising in luminous white splendor straight up from the flat desert (see page 255). A handsome building in the late Spanish Renaissance or Churrigueresque style, it would be a surprise anywhere in the U. S. But when you learn that this is the Papago Indians' own church, built by them under the direction of Franciscan friars almost 200 years ago, and still maintained by both groups today, what seemed at first a mirage seems a miracle. Vandalized at times by Apaches and for many years almost a ruin, the mission has gone through one major restoration and many minor ones, but always the Papagos had a hand in the work. The exterior, of burned adobe and lime plaster, is something to be enjoyed at leisure and at different times of the day, for one of its great charms is the changing shadows on its domes, arches, belfries and buttresses.

When you go inside, however, the dramatic impact of the exterior is doubled. For you look down the aisle toward a sanctuary that is one great blaze of gilded carving clear to the dome. And all about you and overhead is an exuberance of painting, carving, and decoration.

Countless legends have grown up in answer to the question, who were the artists? Some of the painting, perhaps by one of the friars, reflects training in the classic traditions of Spain and Italy. Some seems oriental. But a great deal is primitive and wonderfully gay. With its colors, its wealth of floral motifs, its multitudes of flying cherubim, the church is unquestionably the gayest I have ever seen. Another surprise: all the major santos are carefully dressed in real satins and velvets, which are lovingly cared for by the Papagos. It is not uncommon, they say, for an Indian to slip into the church on a cold night and lay an extra quilt on the reclining figure of San Xavier.

For me the mission epitomized everything that had fascinated me about the Southwest: the startling contrasts of austerity and exuberance; the diverse cultures so closely intertwined they have become one; the past brought up to date; the profusion of craftwork; the gaiety and playfulness; and the easy, intimate, informal role of religion in everyday life. I shall never think of the desert as barren again.

Windows in Southwestern houses are often quite complex devices for controlling light and air and (in the old days) keeping out marauders. ABOVE and ABOVE RIGHT, floor-length window with molded adobe reveals has three parts: traditional iron grille filled in with insect screening; next, wood-framed, side-hinged panels of glass; inside, fold-back, paneled wood shutters in two tiers that open and close separately. RIGHT: *Window in Edward Holler's living room (see page 259) consists of eight wood panels, some of which split in halves to open. SILVER FOR BACCHUS: ELEGANT WAYS OF OFFERING WINE

Suave or sparkling, fruity or sec, wine, since it is really more nectar than beverage, calls for a certain nicety of service comparable in a way to the charming ritual the Japanese have built around tea. Here, from England and the Continent (those citadels of grape worship), is a group of wine-serving accessories, all of silver, that step up the art of pouring everything from Chianti to Moët & Chandon to an apogee of elegance.

For imbibers who prefer the bottle at their elbow rather than on the table, a silver-plated wine stand, above, measures 26 inches high. $115. In it, a magnum-sized, silver-trimmed, crystal champagne bucket. $57.50. Iridescent plastic ribbon curtain from Austen Display Inc.

Champagne, iced to the proper zing, could find no better friend than an ice bucket that doubles as a cooler, fully insulated and metal-lined. $25. To sip the lovely stuff, a silverplated "glass" in the correct shape. $5. To chase the bubbles with, a rack of half-a-dozen swizzle sticks, each 6½ inches long. $15.75.

ALL WINE-SERVING ACCESSORIES FROM THE VINTAGE COLLECTION IMPORTED BY EISENBERG-LOZANO. AVAILABLE AT NEIMAN-MARCUS, PLUMMER MCCUTCHEON, J. W. ROBINSON. FOR STORE ADDRESSES, SEE PAGE 310.

Two ways to pour the red and the white: from a silverplated, handwoven basket, tarnish-resistant, yet pretty as Psyche's lamp. $38.50. Or: from a reproduction of a Victorian wine cradle, as gracefully curlicued as a Belter rocking chair. $15.75. The Chianti sits in a silver coaster, 4 inches across, with a wood center and felt bottom. $7. The wineglass, silverplated, has a good clutchable stem. $5. For sommeliers-at-home, a wine-taster with a chain long enough to clear head and spectacles. $10. For wine that just possibly may not be drunk up, the cradled bottle wears a fluted stopper with a sponge-lined collar that blots all drippings. $10.

For wine punches, a new kind of punch bowl—a pitcher of hand-blown flawless crystal with a silverplated collar and handle. An ice well chills the punch without watering it down, and a strainer in the spout keeps strawberry seeds and such where they should be—in the pitcher. $35.

The rites of after-dinner port and brandy do nobly via a tantalus set of silver-trimmed blown glass and oak that can be locked as tightly as the Bank of England. $70. Six cordial glasses, tray, $25; decanting funnel, jigger on stand, $10; and for brandy cognoscenti, a warmer (all silver-plated) and snifter, $12.50.

Naturally for dinner... but also for breakfast and brunch and lunch and afternoon snacks and before-bed snacks!

H&G'S GARDENER'S

Orchid care requires even less gear and equipment than most plant specialties. To grow orchids in your house you might need, left to right, some clay orchid pots, wire pot hangers, a hand sprayer (for either water or insecticide), some orchid "rafts," with looped wires, for the airiest epiphytes. Other materials required, from left, osmunda fiber, pot shards (broken pot pieces for drainage), fir bark as an alternate potting medium to osmunda, secateurs, wood or metal potting sticks, plastic labels, heavy wire stakes, knife with pruning blade, twine (you will need more twine than this). For everything in this basic accumulation except osmunda there is a variant.

HOW TO DIVIDE AND REPOT A CATTLEYA

1 When you find a cattleya (probably the best known genus among epiphytic orchids) "walking" out of its pot, you should repot it, even though its lead (new shoot) is all but in bud. New growth tends always to grow in one direction from a single rhizome.

2 Position of knife shows where new plant may best be separated from old. Note that new lead and three preceding pseudobulbs are included in new division. New division has most of its roots outside pot, where they inevitably get little food, water.

3 Old and new plants are root pruned before repotting (old plant may be worth saving, often is not). Plump roots are best ones as a rule, but bright white or green mean little except that the roots are clean.

4 Chunks of osmunda are cut and fitted around roots just below rhizome when this fern root fiber is selected as a potting medium. Other pieces of osmunda are then thrust among and around lower part of root mass and the whole assemblage is pushed into clean pot above generous layer of drainage material. Osmunda is wiry; only enough is used to bring rhizome up to rim level.

MONTH

WHAT YOU NEED AND WHAT YOU MUST DO FOR ORCHIDS INDOORS

ot everyone is blessed with such a tolerant ouse as Jerome Eaton is (page 290), and not eryone has fallen under the spell of orchid rowing to the same degree that he has. But any- ne who cares enough about growing his own rchids in his own living room, and who is will- ng to take more pains than would be needed to ise an aspidistra, is quite capable of produc- g orchids pleasantly and well. Not to bilk a lain fact, good orchids are not generally easy grow under home conditions without special re. (Some species, indeed, are virtually im- ssible in a residential atmosphere.) But the sic steps of orchid growing—in the house or der glass—are similar everywhere. Here is outline of the major areas of orchid care here in Mr. Eaton's view the greatest atten- on will be fruitful.

atering. Plants with pseudobulbs (cattleyas d epidendrums, to name but two) can store nsiderable amounts of water. Thus supplementary watering every three or four days is likely to be sufficient. Plants without pseudobulbs (such as paphiopedilum) require watering almost daily. The potting medium in which the plant grows will govern to a considerable extent the speed with which the plant dries out. Plants in fir bark are likely to dry out faster than those in osmunda fiber. And plants in clay pots, no matter what the potting medium, dry out faster than those in plastic pots. Watering schedules are flexible, to say the least, and dependent on such factors as amount of sun, humidity of the air around the plants, and the size of the pot as well as the potting medium and character of pot. Two things about watering are certain, once you have determined the particular needs of a particular orchid at a particular time in its growth cycle: do water thoroughly each time you water at all—making sure that the excess drains freely from the bottom of the pot. Do not allow extended periods of total dryness between waterings.

5 Slabs or chunks of osmunda are cut and fitted into every available space around new plant. Whole success of osmunda as a medium depends on firmness with which it surrounds roots and fills pot above drainage.

6 Pot stick is necessary to ram osmunda home around edges and especially in front of and beneath the lead. Note that one hand holds cut butt end of rhizome tight against "back" of pot (some orchid pots are given oval shape before firing to provide them with a back). Snip osmunda level.

7 Staking the pseudobulbs and tying with florist's twine, individually or one to another as required, helps create neater, more upright plant and conserves shelf space, too. One of the advantages cited for osmunda by Mr. Eaton (who prescribed these steps) is that it will hold a stake firmly for strings.

8 Whole plant may be lifted without loosening it in pot when planting has been properly done with osmunda. Wayward pieces of fiber have been removed with clippers and new plant should be good for three seasons more in new pot. Other orchid species may need different potting methods.

It took a lot of strength for your trees to put forth their lush, green foliage all summer long. Now, nothing but a deep-root feeding by Davey experts can restore their strength. This also helps offset the effects insects and disease can have on weakened trees.

If your soil is worn-out or hard-packed clay, Davey's new Organic Tree Food will rejuvenate the soil as it feeds roots. For normal soil, use famous inorganic Davey Tree Food.

Davey can also move in and plant good-size trees now—with modern equipment and experience that prevents damage to your lawn, gardens, walks, or hedges. Or, Davey crews can move that treasured tree where you've long wanted it.

Don't let your trees go into the rigors of winter without expert Davey pruning, bracing, cabling. Keep winter from having its way with unprotected trees. Protect them the Davey way.

CARE PACKAGES FOR A GARDENER'S CHRISTMAS

Six groups of related gifts that may be given separately or in any combination that strikes your fancy—or the recipient's

Dwarf juniper, $4.50. Stainless spade, $25. Max Schling Seedsmen.

Every gardener's Christmas should start with a new plant. And what is more logical than a good tool to plant it with? For $25 you can buy a wondrous stainless steel spade, left, to dig a $50 hole (not on sale) in which to put a $5 double dwarf evergreen juniper (Juniperus sabina tamariscifolia). The spade has a beautifully straight-grained shaft with an old-fashioned handle that really fits the hand. The juniper is one of the nicest and most readily available of the good Savin varieties—blue-green and slow-growing. It would thrive at the fore edge of a sunny border or face down a big boulder (where the spade wielder might take pains not to nick his new blade). •

Stainless trowels, fork, $4.95 each. Bulb planter, $2.95. Max Schling.

For smaller if not lesser plants, and certainly smaller holes, a hand-size trowel and fork quartet in stainless steel will do all the hand-size jobs. The narrowest trowel is fine for bulb planting, has a depth scale on the blade. • The glove wardrobe might start with a package of plastic throw-aways (for paints, insecticides), continue, left, through "stretch" and standard Greenthumb cloth, and yellow deerskin to tough hide gauntlets for clearing berry patch.

Green-thumb gloves, $1.29 and $1.49. Soft, piped leather, $2.98. Leather and canvas gauntlets, $2.

Wilkinson Sword V-head rake, $11.95. Scuffle hoe, $10.95. Three-tine fork, $10.95. All have angled hand grips.

Long-handled tools are a blessing if they can be maneuvered, and these three new ones of the superb Wilkinson Sword line can (note angled, knurled grips, above). Prowlike bronze rake (the maker spells it Wrake), stainless straight scuffle hoe, and narrow fork (ideal for weeding in flower borders, along edges), have vinyl covered shafts, marked in English and metric scales. The comfortable grip and the bend in the handle make stand-up, one-hand operation easy. ● Give a penny along with Wilkinson pruning tools if you are superstitious. Two sizes of secateurs (the smaller suitable for a duchess' reticule) are overshadowed by superbly holdable hedge shears and businesslike loppers that will sever a 2-inch branch with their 1½-inch jaws.

Secateurs, $4.95 and $12.95. Hedger, $15.50. Lopper, $12.50. Wilkinson.

Nutrients available locally at all garden centers, 49 cents to about $5.

Plant foods are available in enormous variety to suit enormously varied needs. This collection, all of smallish containers of standard products available with few exceptions under a host of local labels, includes, generally, from left to right and top to bottom: dry shredded cow manure, cottonseed meal, dried blood (all chiefly sources of nitrogen), liquid fish-meal fertilizer (in concentrated form, of course), holly and broadleaf evergreen food (a proprietary but widely available brand), general purpose fertilizer and bone meal. The smallest container, left, is a pound, largest 25 pounds, and prices range roughly from 50 cents to $5.

Humidity. Heated rooms will require supplementary humidification in winter. (This is not to be confused with the syringing of the leaves of some orchids in summer, a means of lowering the temperature of the plant.) Trays of pebbles that will catch and hold the overflow from watering directly beneath the plants will usually suffice.

The same cattleya division that was potted in osmunda, pages 328 and 329, is potted here in fir bark. Note how stake pulls aslant in bark.

Ventilation. Air movement is necessary to the well-being of all orchids. Some convection movement is usually present in all artificially heated rooms. But circulation can be assured in orchid cabinets (Wardian cases) by adjustable openings built in top and bottom. A slow-speed, low-power fan placed out of the way in a corner of an orchid window may prove the right answer.

Heating. However you supply or adjust the heat to your rooms (or, by means of electric heating cable, to orchid cases or trays beneath the plants) a maximum-minimum thermometer will be of help in maintaining suitable heat control. Such a thermometer will not control the heat for you (in a house, putting the whole heating system at the behest of the orchids would be a little prodigal), but it will, by recording the highest and lowest temperatures attained during the period prior to resetting the little metal flags to the ends of the mercury column, help you to know what your heating installation is doing to the orchid atmosphere. Both radiators and heating cables, incidentally, should be properly shielded so that the heat supplied is disposed evenly.

Hygiene. Weekly inspections of normally well-cared-for plants will be sufficient to reveal insects (slugs, snails, scales, or aphids) and evidences of disease (fungus, virus, and the like). Appropriate insecticides or fungicides recommended for orchids can then quickly halt trouble. Special attention to newly acquired plants —even isolation for a week or two in a separate room—will save your present plants from risk of new infestations.

This orchid was potted incorrectly with back of rhizome in center and no room for leads. If purchased plant looks like this, repot it.

Shading. General shade, with curtains or Venetian blinds, is no difficult to arrange where simple control of light is concerned. But some orchids that require a relatively cool position near the glass in your window may not be improved by the added light such situation often provides. (Conversely, some species may need to be away from the cool glass, but need more light—which often calls for supplementary light, or protection, or both as in an illuminated orchid case.) To provide considerable amount of incon spicuous shade near the glass, in sect screens having flat, ribbonlike horizontal wires are available. The higher the sun climbs, as at noon the less solar heat reaches the plants behind the screening. Ye the view through the screen is al most unimpeded. Venetian blinds can be adapted, with care, to achieve much the same effect.

Correct placement of new cattley division in pot locates cut bu of rhizome hard against "back" pot. Shards form deep under-laye

Notes for November gardeners

To paraphrase a venerable line:

"the garden dies but never surrenders"

First weekend

Basket build-up. Some summertime terrace plants—in tubs, pots, and hanging baskets—die in the autumn and are dumped on the compost heap. Others may remain in attractive vigor if refurbished, brought indoors, rested for a time, and then given a suitable place in a winter window. Others are capable of survival only in a storage frame or a greenhouse, and these, as their requirements indicate, may be worth boarding over winter at a nearby nursery or with a florist capable of giving them whatever care they need. Then there is a fourth group—hanging plants especially—not important enough to board, too durable to throw out, and too drab or unattractive during the off months to hang in a winter window. It is about this group that we have a perhaps unorthodox thought. Into the basket plants that either die back or are best cut back for a winter's rest (but that need not be otherwise disturbed), set a few small pots of plants that you can expect to do well in a sunny window. For example, amid trailing vinca which will perish outdoors and pendulous begonias which, indoors or out, will lose their top growth, set little pots of fibrous rooted begonias. Set them on the surface among retained foliage, or scoop out small holes in which to plunge the pots if existing roots and tubers will not be damaged. If your basket plants should not be normally watered, put your supplementary plants in nonabsorbent plastic pots and apply only enough water directly to them to satisfy their needs, and no more.

Needed or not, supplementary color may give even healthy plants a livelier indoor look. English ivies can be kept in perennially fine condition indoors or out. Yet a few patience plants, a crossandra or two, or small rooted cuttings from the summer's fancy-leaved coleus will add a note of freshness. African-violets, surely, will give the ivies a new look. Of such improvisations is winter gardening made.

Second weekend

Tossed salad. All good salads depend on their seasoning for success, and the leafage you toss beneath your broadleaf evergreens in the autumn is in that category. But in this case the leaves are brown not green, and the condiments are fertilizer, not salt and pepper. Ordinarily, for mature plants, a light increment of hardwood leaves (oak, beech) every autumn is food enough—with this year's layer becoming the food supply beginning, say, year after next. For the best performance, however, seasonal supplements of relatively fast-acting nutrients are always useful. Such supplements would not normally be needed or even desirable before spring, lest they encourage the autumn development of soft growth that winter might kill. The danger of such damage is now past, since nitrogenous fertilizers (and it is only the nitrogen that creates a hazard) will not go into usable solution this late in the year—nor will they become available to the plants in spring until the soil temperature has climbed again to 50 degrees or more.

The moral of all this: When you rake the hardwood leaves under the broadleafs, as we said at the beginning, salt the layer with either a complete fertilizer (an ordinary 5-10-5 or 8-6-6 formulation will serve) on the leaves or with them or under them—it makes no difference. Better yet, in our opinion, is an application of cottonseed meal, as good a nutrient for most broadleafs and other evergreens as you could find. (Pay more, if you like, and get a fertilizer especially formulated for such acid-soil plants as rhododendrons and azaleas, hollies, leucothoe and the rest; the difference in effectiveness will be negligible with surface application.) Reading notice. Here is an added starter for the list of Christmas books to give a dedicated plant amateur: S. A. Manning's Systematic Guide to Flowering Plants of the World (Taplinger, $10). This formidable title distinguishes a formidable book. But for anyone who can track down a plant species according to a botanical key, it will fill a medium-size gap between the full-fledged botanical references and the layman's alphabetized guides (which seldom guide). This is a useful but sometime volume—and not for the night table in the guest room.

Third weekend

Chrysanthemum anticlimax. Some garden chores are not subject to euphemistic definition—they remain chores, no matter how you spell them. Preparing the spent chrysanthemum clumps for winter is a chore (unless, of course, you can afford to heave out all your plants after they have flowered and start with fresh rooted cuttings next spring). The procedure does not vary much in principle from year to year. The purpose of doing anything at all to the plants, of course, is to preserve them safely over winter, so that you can then make your own cuttings (or divisions or Irishman's cuttings, if you prefer) against next season's needs. And the reason for making new cuttings each spring is in part to have better plants with bigger blossoms and in part to fend off the blights that tend to carry over from one season to another on any kind of live clump or division—but not on cuttings rooted from new spring growth. In most temperate climates, where most of the garden varieties are hardy enough to winter temperatures (the tender ones must be stored under cover to survive), protection from ice over the crowns and avoidance of water-logging is essential to good survival. So our more or less annual recommendation is to cut back all dead stems to a couple of inches, to renew all labels, to hoe out shallow trenches between plants so that any natural slopes of the land will complete the drainage job, and then to drift a good but airy layer of salt marsh hay or straw mulch over the individual crowns. (On dead level ground, you might do well to dig the clumps and reset them to about half their former depth, so water will drain away just the same. Mound the earth up over the roots to the former soil level, of course.) This is about all you can do or should do. If the plants die in a hard winter—all right, start again.

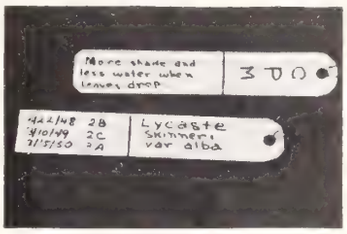
Fourth weekend

Pot cache. The average indoor gardener, one with perhaps a half-dozen window shelves to care for, will need maybe a couple of dozen clean flowerpots of assorted sizes on hand for winter needs. This is a good time to see to it that the proper assortment is cached, say, in the back of the broom closet ready for urgent if occasional need. (Any major potting jobs calling for a considerable number of pots of a single size would present a problem that would have to be handled on a different basis.) We suggest, for a starter set, four stacks of roughly equal height—all pots to be stored upside down for great stability. The list might include twelve of 3-inch size, eight of 4's, six of 5's, and four of 6's (or any other number that evened out the stacks, in case you keep a tidier broom closet than most people do).

This gives us an occasion to recommend our standard pot procedure—one that makes any but casual washing of pots unnecessary. Keep three basic complements of pots in the sizes you use. One set has plants in it now. One set had plants in it last year, and is now outdoors, stacked upside down, to weather and cleanse itself in the winter rains, snows, and frosts (upside down, the pots will seldom crack). The third set has weathered for a year and is ready for use any time. It is from this stack that you collect your broom-closet supply—always renewable, of course, on clear days or during thaws from the outside source. And if you don't think it is less trouble to maintain three sets of pots than to wash one set after each use, just try for a season washing your pots after each use.

Of course, some gardeners claim that a dirty pot never did harm to either plant or planter. But the provable facts are against him, and he is probably just lazy.

in the pot is perhaps more difficult than pouring pieces of fir bark from the bag into the pot. You will develop your own preference, however, just as you will for certain tools or pots. The basis for making your choice need not even be good logic. I usually use osmunda because I like it. And I use a wooden potting stick rather than the expensive aluminum one I got one Christmas because I whittled it myself from a piece of Osage-orange and it is as comfortable as an old glove.



Our reward for growing orchids in our apartment was periodic, not continuous, bloom. At any one time, the ratio proved to be: about ten plants in various stages for every one in bloom. (Each plant needed a rest a few weeks after flowering.) Although the time of flowering of any given plant might vary as much as three weeks from year to year, nevertheless proper selection and reselection ultimately ensured a rewarding number of flowers spaced evenly around the calendar. We have enjoyed the creamy white flower of Paphiopedilum insigne for a whole month, keeping it periodically on the dining table and on my desk. (This is no private miracle; most orchids have a surprisingly long life as pot plants and they stand up well even when cut.)

Getting these plant aristocrats to perform properly was sometimes a Herculean task. The proper balance of light, temperature, and humidity was the key. Of course there were always changing conditions that seemed bent on thwarting us. As seasons changed, for example, the proportions of these three essential growth factors had also to be changed, but still kept in satisfactory balance.

The treacherous winter sun

Everyone is aware of the terrific heat generated by the summer sun, but not everyone recognizes the treachery of the winter sun. As I would leave for work in the early hours of a winter morning under an overcast sky, with the outdoor temperature hovering near 15 degrees, I often failed to anticipate the bright sun that would break through later in the day. A few "cooked" leaves taught me the necessity of proper protective procedures. This led to a degree of necessary teamwork, and my wife soon became adept at giving the plants a midday cooling with a fine spray of water. Opening the special glass cases to permit fuller air circulation at midday was also useful. Weekly sponging helped further by removing city soot.

The perpetual juggling of plants from one location to another convinced me that some device was necessary to keep track of the requirements of each and maintain all of them in good condition. A coded label (see below) provided the answer. I settled on a plastic label that could be attached to the plant with a piece of copper wire. One side carried the plant name (genus, species, and variety) and a brief record of bloom, which included date of flowering, number of flowers, and a rough grading of their quality on a scale from A down to D. The other side of the label was equally simplified and carried a combination of three letters. The top letter referred to the ideal temperature category: C meaning cool, I for intermediate and W for warm. The middle letter had to do with the amount of sunlight: F for full sun, P for partial sunlight (more than ½ sun) and S for less than ½ sun. The last letter covered the moisture requirements and went from H (humid) through M (moderate) to D (dry). Below this combination was an area for special notations. With plants so labeled, proper placement can always be accomplished without referring back to books or records.

Vital statistics, all on one label

Each month saw more and more plants added to the apartment's roster. We purchased new plants on every trip out of town. Our visits to orchid-growing establishments around the United States and abroad were made ostensibly so we could see how things were done, but invariably we came home with a few new plants (or else they followed us after making the required stop at the U. S. Plant Quarantine station in Hoboken, N. J.). Our plants were soon fighting with one another for the available light. Then they were competing with us. Something had to be done. However, before I could work out a specific answer to the problem, a co-operative solution developed indirectly. The imminent birth of our first child suggested the need for freeing the entire library (our second most important growing area), and after considerable investigation, we decided to send our overflow plants to the country. An accommodating family with the necessary greenhouse facilities to care for them during the week agreed to board them for us. We would visit on weekends and take care of the potting chores, spraying, and the like. (We used to say we were going golfing rather than try to explain the real purpose for which we were going to the country.) When particular plants were ready to flower, we brought them back to the apartment to enjoy during their long blooming period; later we returned them for rest and revitalization. (Even today at our own house in the country, and with a greenhouse to fill horticultural needs, we regularly bring plants indoors to provide added pleasure and decorative satisfaction.)

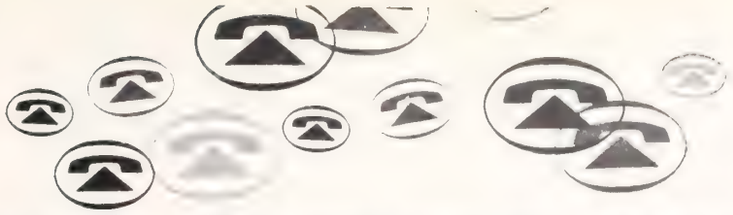
Our apartment was soon revolving around the needs of our infant daughter, and the loss of growing room for plants was more than compensated for by the wonders performed daily by Carol. I did notice, however, that while certain unoccupied corners could not support mature growth in an orchid or bring it into flower, such places could make ideal nursery areas for bringing seedlings along during their early stages of growth. So now, because we planned to move back into the country within a year or two, what better use could we make of time and space than to build a really worthwhile collection of orchids starting with young plants or even seeds?

The inevitable next step

In order to become acquainted with the entire cycle of orchid growth I suppose it was inevitable that I should get involved with sowing orchid seeds. Having no parent plants worthy of crossing (even if I could have brought them into flower at the same time in order to perform the cross), I purchased seed of especially fine parent crosses. I also bought the necessary beakers, agar powder, disinfecting chemicals. After studying the procedures diligently, I felt ready but nervous. One Saturday morning I swabbed the entire bathroom so that it was close to being sterile. I ran hot water into the tub furiously to generate steam, the principle being that as the steam cools and droplets of water form, they will settle on all available surfaces, bringing with them any spores or particles of dirt that had been floating in the air. Everything went well and the dustlike orchid seeds were finally floated on the gelatinlike surface of the agar within the glass flasks. Then my mother dropped in for a visit. That her son remained locked in the bathroom for several hours was a little difficult to explain, but apart from that, the operation was successful.

As the months went by, my seedlings grew and eventually were transplanted into community pots to pass those formative months before they could be moved into individual pots. By no means all of these seedling orchids would have matured and flowered in the apartment, nor were they ever intended to do so.

Enough of the perils (the pleasures never end). Here, in brief, are a few comments on the dozen or so orchids that I found most generally satisfactory for growing under the average conditions of indoor rooms with adequate windows. The listing is alphabetical, by botanical names, not according to my preference. I like them all.



Brassavola nodosa is a white flowering fragrant species which does well under conditions of intermediate temperature, moderate moisture, and partial sunlight. Its exotic appearance would lead one to assume that its needs were more difficult to satisfy. It blooms during the autumn months.

Brassia maculata, growing in moderate temperature conditions, flowers in the early summer. This Guatemalan epiphyte will do best in almost full sun, although its native mountainous climate is never too warm. But a moderate temperature is best and, during its period of active growth in spring and summer, abundant water is necessary. Remember, even during periods of heavy rain in the tropics and in sub-tropical areas, plants have sufficient time to dry out. There is no time when a plant should remain continuously moist.

Cattleya bowringiana is a very compatible bifoliate. It tolerates some deviation from its natural affinity for a moderate 60 degree nighttime temperature, but will shrivel and its growth be badly checked if you allow the roots to become too dry at any time. The potting medium (osmunda or bark) often dries out in two days and must be checked carefully. Cattleya bowringiana will produce clusters of flowers on several spikes on a mature plant during the autumn months.

Dendrobium nobile, a deciduous species, does best in half sun and in a warm, moist atmosphere when growing actively through its late winter flowering period. Its resting months through spring and summer are most beneficial when full sun is provided with reduced watering and cool temperatures.

Epidendrum aromaticum, one of the most fragrant, and Epidendrum atropurpureum with its striking purple, brown, and white flowers require similar conditions and treatment—warm temperatures and regular watering during active growth and spring flowering. A reduction of water and full sunlight will help them rest briefly and prepare them for a more active summer growing period. This is not only true of these Epidendrums, but of most orchid species. Neither of these species enters its actual period of dormancy until the autumn, and they remain relatively inactive with only enough water to keep the pseudobulbs plump until late February.

Lycaste aromatica usually grows best in cool temperatures and requires a bit less than full sun when in active growth. Being deciduous, it will spend several months leafless, at which time less light is needed. Blooming will commence in midwinter. Lycastes are best potted in a mixture of ½ garden soil, ½ leafmold, ½ peatmoss and, in order to keep this soil mixture from getting splashed out or falling out of the pot, cover the top ¾ inch of the pot with sphagnum moss. Since this is a species that has a definite resting period, it is as good a place as any to mention that even those plants that have very definite resting periods should not be allowed to dry out to such an extent that pseudobulbs shrivel. When a plant rests, you reduce water, but keep growth plump.

Miltonia candida is a cool growing variety from the mountains of Brazil which needs a little less than full sun. The predominantly yellow flowers are marked with either brown or purple blotches. This species needs plenty of water during growth, but less as soon as the flower buds open in the autumn. Moderate or light watering will suffice for the rest of the winter with low atmospheric humidity.

Odontoglossum grande is the brown and yellow barred Tiger Orchid. The minute brown specks on the leaves might cause you to think that you have been overtaken by red spiders, but they are normal markings. From high altitudes in South America they most appreciate full sun, free air circulation, and cool temperatures. This combination is difficult to achieve, especially in the summertime, but syringing on bright days will be of considerable help. If flowering is not over until spring, do not repot until the cool weather of autumn. The plant will be better able to take hold and begin active growth at that time. Make sure of good drainage when repotting. It will ensure a healthy plant.

Oncidium splendidum only needs half sun which can be achieved in any unobstructed window other than a northern exposure. Warmth is necessary yearround in order to produce its long panicle carrying several yellow and brown flowers in the winter months. What it lacks in fragrance is made up in its attractive, graceful form. If any one element is necessary for healthy growth, good air circulation would be it. A pot too small for the size of the plant will help prevent overwatering in that an excessive amount of potting material which can become soggy will have been eliminated.

Paphiopedilum insigne var. sanderae is a winter flowering greenish white ladyslipper of the cool growing type. A semi-terrestrial plant, it is best grown in ½ peatmoss, ½ chopped sphagnum moss, and ½ fibrous loam (a piece of chopped sod will do). This plant welcomes good ventilation although not a cold draft. It does not like strong sunlight, and when weather is hot, an overhead syringing is beneficial. Keep well watered at all times and between waterings do not allow to become completely dry.

Paphiopedilum niveum is the warm-growing, summer-blooming counterpart of Cypripedium insigne with long-lasting, brown-spotted white flowers.

Phalaenopsis amabilis is demanding, but worth the trouble. In order to enjoy its white flowers, produced on arching racemes during a long period in autumn and early winter, care must be given to maintain a 60 degree minimum night temperature. They must be protected from cold drafts as well as from direct sunlight, and need abundant moisture provided with good drainage. The latter requisite is the reason why Phalaenopsis are often grown in hanging Redwood baskets.

Sophronites grandiflora with its vivid red flowers makes one of the more attractive small plants. The entire plant, including the pot, doesn't often exceed 5 or 6 inches, and the sparkling color in midwinter is always spectacular, if something that small can be anything more than "eye-catching." It will do very well in a cool location in semi-shade if only a moderate amount of water is provided.

my, how CRYSTAL has changed!

I, Crystal, was a shy violet. Now I'm a passion flower.
I mean to live it up 'round the clock... enjoy, enjoy!
D-A-N-C-E my way through life!

I mean to PAMPER myself—wildly.
Be utterly chic. Sleep between satin sheets. Have my morning orange juice in a handblown crystal glass.

I mean to feel deliciously extravagant!
If I break a crystal glass—so what? C'est la vie!
I refuse to be intimidated any longer by my possessions.

I'm a swinger too. That's why they call me "Danse"
... pronounced D-A-N-C-E. We go well together.
Long-stemmed beauties meant to be looked at twice!

I make orange juice look so chic... it's sinful.
And I look di-vine with wedding cake and champagne.
I'm one of a family of exquisite patterns. Versatile, that's us!

I look deliciously extravagant... but I'm not.
I'm thoroughly practical. If you break me—c'est la vie, indeed!
I'm crystal-without-tears. I cost only a dollar a stem!

THE SUGGESTED TRIAL: YOU SIMPLY AGREE TO BUY THREE CLUB SELECTIONS OR ALTERNATES IN THE NEXT 12 MONTHS FROM AMONG AT LEAST 200 THAT WILL BE MADE AVAILABLE TO YOU

THE POOH LIBRARY

Complete in four volumes

All that A. A. Milne ever wrote about POOH, plus all the drawings by Ernest H. Shepard, in a new edition designed by Warren Chappell.

Winnie-the-Pooh: Christopher Robin and Pooh and all their friends having wonderful times. Over 100 illustrations.

The House at Pooh Corner: More adventures for Christopher Robin, Pooh, Piglet, Eeyore, Owl, Kanga, Little Roo, and Tigger.

When We Were Very Young: 44 poems, including the one about the three little foxes "who didn't wear stockings, and they didn't wear sockses." More than 125 illustrations.

Now We Are Six: 35 stories in verse that have endeared themselves to so many readers the world over. More than 150 illustrations.

THE POOH RECORDINGS

Read by Maurice Evans

RECORD NO. 1

Winnie-the-Pooh: We are introduced to Winnie-the-Pooh and the stories begin.

Winnie-the-Pooh Goes Visiting: Winnie-the-Pooh's visit to Rabbit's home turns into a near-disaster.

Winnie-the-Pooh Goes Hunting: Whether one knows a Wizzle from a Woozle is important. Pooh and Piglet discuss it.

RECORD NO. 2

Eeyore Loses a Tail: Eeyore is depressed about the disappearance of his tail until Pooh finds it for him in a most unusual place.

The Heffalump: Catching Heffalumps in a Cunning Trap is quite tricky and has unexpected results.

Eeyore Has a Birthday: Gifts of a burst balloon and a pot "to put things in" make Eeyore very happy.

A DEMONSTRATION OF THE CLUB'S UNIQUE BOOK-DIVIDEND SYSTEM

THE PURPOSE of this suggested trial membership is to demonstrate, by your own actual experience, four things highly important for every reading mily. First, that membership in the Book-of-the-onth Club is a certain way to keep from missing new books you fully intend to read; second, t you will pay on the average 20% less for se books you want than you otherwise would; rd, that you will have a wide choice—more than 0 books a year; and fourth, that under the Club's w Book-Dividend system, you can acquire useful d beautiful volumes—as well as fine high-priced rary sets—for trifling sums.

HOW CAN IT BE DONE? The Club's Book-ividend system is comparable to the traditional ofit-sharing system of consumer cooperatives. A portion of the amount members pay for the books they buy is accumulated and invested in entire editions of valuable books and sets through special contractual arrangements with the publishers. These are the Club's Book-Dividends. Under this profit-sharing system members have received over $330,000,000 worth of books (retail value).

* YOU HAVE A WIDE CHOICE OF BOOK-DIVIDENDS • If you continue membership after this trial, with every Club choice you buy you receive one Book-Dividend Certificate. This Certificate is then exchangeable upon payment of a nominal sum—usually $1.00 or $1.50—for one of the Book-Dividends. More than a hundred different volumes are at present available, and others are constantly being added.

BOOK-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB, Inc. A71-12
345 Hudson Street, New York 14, N. Y.

Please enroll me as a member of the Book-of-the-Month Club and send me THE SOOPER-POOH PACKAGE billing me $1. I agree to purchase at least three additional Selections or Alternates during the next 12 months. Members' prices for these books average 20% less than retail prices. I have the right to cancel membership at any time after buying these three books. I may accept this trial membership for myself, for myself and my wife, or for myself and any member of my family. I am to receive a Book-Dividend Certificate with every Selection I buy under the system described at left. (A small charge is added to all shipments to cover postage and mailing expense.)
PLEASE NOTE: Occasionally two Club choices offered per two or more months are sold together as a single unit. Such purchases are counted as a single book in fulfilling the membership obligation.

Some kids get all the breaks.

Less than half these interesting people grew up with a piano in the house (the Depression, they said). Today, some kids get all the breaks. The scrapper on the bench? Come Christmas there'll be a new piano at his house. It will, very simply, affect his entire life, because growing up with music is one of the best ways to grow up ever invented. Today, there's no real, down-to-earth reason why you can't give your own family more to remember from their lives at home. Kohler & Campbell will support your wise decision with a rich, resonant tone; exclusive quality features; a lifetime finish created by DuPont; a magnificent cabinet, and elegant styling. In fact, no other piano at any price offers all the fine features of a Kohler & Campbell.

BY DIANA BRYAN

Naturally we have a chopping block in the kitchen, but that doesn't do Don much good when he wants to carve a steak he has just cooked in the family room fireplace. So, to keep him happy, I recently acquired a hard wood carving board on a folding stand that can be toted here and there, wherever it's needed. The board is just the right height for an outdoor grill, but it is going to see a lot of indoor use this winter in our house. And it's as well-made and sturdy as it is convenient. I ordered it from Country Craftsmen, Antrim, New Hampshire.

We all know a good wine deserves a good glass, and the shape of the glass is a very important part of the wine's enjoyment. To quote from that great cook book "Mastering the Art of French Cooking" by Simone Beck, Louisette Bertholle, and Julia Child (Alfred A. Knopf), "The bigger the wine, the bigger the glass. A small glass gives no room for the bouquet to develop, nor for the drinker to swirl." By that criterion, Pasco's Adora pattern might almost be called the perfect wineglass. Certainly these long, thin-stemmed beauties made in Austria would start a bride on the right track or compliment the discernment of a couple on their fifteenth anniversary. My sister's is coming up next month and after seeing Adora at Bergdorf Goodman's in New York, I am very tempted to pamper her.

I've never seen (would never have thought of) a house gift as imaginative and at the same as thoroughly useful as the one that arrived from the couple who stayed with us last weekend: a charming functional picnic basket, packed with a peasant tablecloth, a bottle of excellent red wine, and a collection of gourmet delicacies—tinned meats, imported biscuits, a Reblochon cheese, dilled carrot sticks, a box of petits fours and a can of babas au rhum. I've told myself that come spring I'll build a whole picnic around it—if I can just resist the temptation to borrow from it in the meantime.

Kay Corbett said it was while she was browsing around Papier Mâché in New York that she got the idea for her "bar room" party. She was fascinated by some paper chandeliers—Japanese-lantern-style versions of the Tiffany glass lampshades that were so elegant when they were new and so soon became the hallmark of the pretentiously decorated turn-of-the-century saloon. An old-fashioned saloon, Kay decided, would not be too difficult to reproduce in her not-quite-finished basement. So she went to work with extra-wide kraft paper and a stapling gun, covered the walls and ceiling, and with the help of some talented friends, marking pens, and water paints cartooned a buxom reclining nude over a garish painted-on bar mirror, and, on the opposite wall, drew the saloon's front window complete with a street scene outside. The walls between were hung with "portraits" of muscular gentlemen in boxing shorts, punctuated with mottoes, rubber trees, and such. Small tables with red-and-white checked tablecloths were placed around the room. A serving bar, made of planks on sawhorses and decorated with a paper skirt painted to resemble glossy mahogany, was set up under the pretend mirror. The scene was appropriately lit (i.e., not much) with a dozen of the paper chandeliers—24-inch-diameter affairs that burlesque the Tiffany shades with disarming accuracy.

Besides liquor, the bar was equipped with the traditional "free lunch"—platters of cold meat, mounds of crusty breads and pretzels, pickles, half-a-dozen cheeses from Liederkranz to Jack, big jars of pickled eggs and pigs' feet. The gentlemen were invited to come in shirt sleeves and snappy weskits. The ladies wore whatever suited their fancy. The party was such a success I'm thinking of trying my hand at painted paper scenery for a Tyrolean after-ski party for the children.

Questions & Answers

By Thomas H. Ormsbee

REGINA MUSIC BOX

All of the metal playing disks for my beautiful Regina music box are marked in the 1700's and 1800's. Could these numbers refer to when it was made? J.C.—Sarasota, Fla.

The numbers on the disks identified the musical selections and had nothing to do with the date of the piece. The Regina Music Box Company of Rahway, N.J., made your instrument some time between their opening in 1886 and closing in 1915.

CALIFORNIA GOLD RUSH PLATE

Can you help me find out if this set of mining scene plates is unique? The plates are marked Mark-Milliet and Co. L.B.—Placerville, Calif.

Your gold rush plates were made in some quantity in France for American markets.

I would like to know the age and style of this rocker. W.M.—East Berlin, Pa.

Your American side chair with arched back splats and ball-turned front stretcher dates between 1760 and 1775. The rockers were probably added about 1800.

AMERICAN EMPIRE CHEST

A faint oriental scene decorates the two top drawers of this painted piece. Hinged doors of woven cane conceal the bottom drawers. Can you tell its age and origin?

C.A.S.—Charlotte, N.C.

Your chest is a very unusual American Empire piece possibly reflecting a transition to Victorian design. It would date between 1835 and 1850.

AMERICAN COIN SILVER MARKS

Can you identify my spoon from my rather crude drawings of the marks? The piece is a berry spoon 9½ inches long.

S.M.—New York, N.Y.

Your spoon is a coin silver tablespoon made by S. Douglas Brower who worked in Troy, N.Y., from 1832 to 1836 and in Albany, N.Y., from 1837 to 1850. Many American silversmiths used such marks which resemble English hallmarks.

What can you tell me about my inherited French clock made by Dubuc (the Elder) with a statue of George Washington?

H.P.W.—Panama City, Fla.

A clock like yours is in the White House collection which Mrs. Kennedy assembled. Such clocks were made shortly after Washington's death, for export to the U.S.

FRENCH FIGURE CLOCK

ROYAL CROWN DERBY VASE

Could you give me any information on my vase from its picture and sketched mark?

L.P. Dorval, Canada

The mark is one used by the Royal Crown Derby Porcelain Co., Ltd., Derby, England from 1890 to 1940. The vase is bone china.

Your opinion and comment on this baby carriage would be appreciated. Would it be possible to tell its age and the name of the manufacturer?

T.B. McN.—Toccoa, Ga.

The baby carriage is American. Its woven wicker body, wooden wheels, and metal tires date it about 1880–1895. Without a manufacturer's label, it is impossible to identify it further.

Love thy neighbor's child

JOSE OLEGARIO PALACIOS, COLOMBIAN, AGE 7. One of 4 children. Father deserted. Mother ill but works. Peddles soft drinks door to door. Earns $10 per month occasionally. Home is a hut on piles. Tin roof. One small room. Two old beds. No bedding. No facilities. Use rainwater for washing and cooking. Children ragged, hungry, undernourished. Youngest cannot walk. Rickets. Jose dreams of going to school. Can't attend. No suitable clothing or shoes. Mother sick with despair for children whom she cannot adequately feed, clothe and shelter.

You or your group can become a Foster Parent of a needy child. You will be sent the case history and photo of your "adopted" child and letters from the child himself. Correspondence is translated by PLAN. The child knows who you are. At once he is touched by love and a sense of belonging. Your pledge provides new clothing, blankets, education and medical care, as well as a cash grant of $8 every month. Each child receives full measure of material aid from your contribution. Distribution of goods is supervised by PLAN staff and is insured against loss in every country where PLAN operates. Help in the responsible way. "Adopt" a child through Foster Parents' Plan. Let some child love you.

PLAN is a non-political, non-profit, non-sectarian, government-approved, independent relief organization, registered under No. VFA019 with the Advisory Committee on Voluntary Foreign Aid of the Agency for International Development of the United States Government and filed with the National Information Bureau in New York City. Check your charity—we eagerly offer our financial statement on request because we are so proud of the handling of our funds. PLAN helps children in Greece, South Korea, Viet Nam, Hong Kong, the Philippines, Colombia and Ecuador.

SMALL HOTELS IN THE CARIBBEAN

Come the first drab days of winter and most of us who inhabit the ice-and-snow belt are afflicted with a common malaise—the desire to escape to a tropical island where the water is a beckoning blue and the sun just keeps on shining. Some head for the hyperbolic high life of the large luxury hotels, but more and more vacationers are seeking out secluded little hotels where the service is personal and pampering, the pace is unhurried and relaxed, the surroundings as idyllic as man and nature can contrive, and the food comes fresh from the sea and the market place. The Caribbean is studded with these away-from-it-all retreats, but they are surprisingly hard to locate. Mostly you hear about them through word-of-mouth, for few small hotels, with their limited accommodations, need or wish to advertise, and find contented guests their best propagandists.

Last March I went small-hotel hunting through the chain of islands that curves like a necklace across the Caribbean from the coast of South America toward Miami. I visited Tobago, Grenada, St. Vincent, Martinique, Antigua, Sint Maarten, and Jamaica, a trip that sounds extensive, but was only a sampling of the islands. Each hotel I stayed at or saw had its own special charm and individuality, compounded partly from the distinctive character of the islands themselves (although only minutes apart by plane, each one is surprisingly different), but mostly from the taste and personalities of their owner-managers. Everywhere I encountered intriguing, adaptable ideas and little courtesies that made me feel I was in a private house—a bowl of fresh tropical fruit by my bedside, a hibiscus blossom tucked between the salt and pepper on my breakfast table, a pan of water outside my beach cottage to rinse the sand from my feet, a pretty terry-cloth beach robe hanging in my bedroom closet. Friendly informality is the true essence of the Caribbean, a mood that washes over you like warm surf even before you reach your destination. I first became aware of it at Antigua, where the big Pan Am jet, southbound from Kennedy Airport to Trinidad, made its second scheduled stop, long enough for a look around the airport. By the time we took off, the few remaining passengers were joking and gossiping like old acquaintances. Mainland reserve had disappeared, Caribbean laissez-faire took over.

Tobago—the Arnos Vale Hotel

A half-hour flight from Trinidad's Piarco Airport lies tranquil Tobago, which so precisely fits your mental image of a tropical island that it at first seems slightly unreal. The road from the airport to the Arnos Vale Beach Hotel, near the village of Plymouth, winds past coconut palms and tangled vegetation broken by occasional tantalizing glimpses of secluded little coves and sparkling water with not so much as a stray sun bather in sight. The hotel—a main house and cottages tucked away on the ridges of hills that fall steeply away to a crescent of white sand and a private bay whose limpid waters, full of exotic fish and coral gardens, are a snorkeler's heaven—is like a natural (if more cultivated) part of the landscape. Local materials such as cedar and coral rock from the bay were used in the construction, and the sea-gazing rooms of the main house are open to each other, to terraces, cool breezes, and a panoramic view of gardens spilling down the hillside in a blaze of hibiscus, oleander, bougainvillaea, convolvulus, and croton.

Yet, despite this open airiness, there is a pleasantly paradoxical small-scale coziness reminiscent of an English country house (not surprising, since owner-manager Jeffrey Cooke and his wife Carol hail from England). In the lounge, deep armchairs coaxingly placed near crowded bookshelves face an old Dutch gun chest shining with the patina of age. A Murano glass chandelier is suspended over a lacy straw rug from Dominica. Dominating all this is a spectacular grand piano made for the Paris Exhibition of 1851, gilded and painted with swags and a Watteau-esque scene, that any antique dealer would give his eyeteeth for.

Everything at the Arnos Vale runs with the smooth synchronization that comes from good staff work, including meal service, something for which the easygoing Caribbean is not noted. A line of trim waitresses in gray uniforms and starched yellow aprons and high caps weaves smoothly from table to table, offering a succession of dishes. Food is Mr. Cooke's concern and chief interest, and meals at (Continued on page 35)

Yes, even dried-egg spots

At last! A dishwasher detergent that really does both! (1) cleans difficult food stains (2) ends water spots

You need a dishwasher detergent that does more than stop water spots. Now it's here!

No matter what the stain—dried-in grease, sticky chocolate, gooey syrup, filmed-in milk, smudged lipstick, stubborn tea stains—even dried-up egg spots—now you can have glasses, silver, dishes, pots that are cleaner, brighter than any other dishwasher detergent can make them—and without water spotting.

Electrasol's even-flow formula cleans without clinging. This is due to an extraordinary wetting agent that makes water "wetter" so it cleans even the most difficult stains—then rolls right off your dishes. Will not spot, film or streak...no matter how hard the water...or what make your dishwasher. No wonder Electrasol is recommended by every leading dishwasher manufacturer.

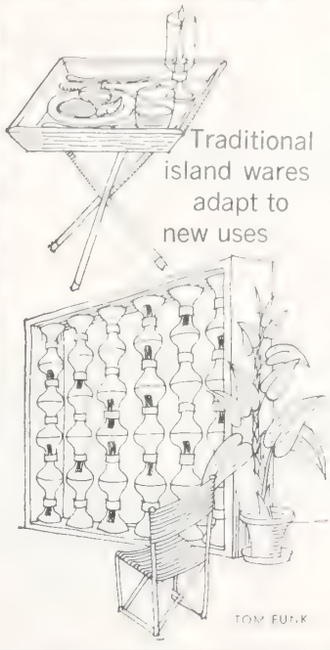
the Arnos Vale blend local dishes and ingredients with British and French cuisine. For my first dinner I had a cream soup made of christophenes, a pretty pale green squash with the translucence of alabaster; wahoo bonne femme (the fish fresh-caught that day); lamb with mint sauce; cheese; and a red Bordeaux from the hotel's excellent wine cellar.

To Carol Cooke goes the credit for the gardens around the hotel and cottages, a vivid tropical landscape rustling with birds. (Tobago and its neighbor, Little Tobago, a bird of paradise sanctuary, harbor enough species to keep a bird-watcher happy for months.)

Sunday buffet lunch at the beach was my final meal at the Arnos Vale and an introduction to some of the typically island dishes I was later to find throughout the Caribbean. In addition to cold meats, salads, and the local langouste, station wagons brought down from the main kitchen steaming pots of callaloo (the famous Caribbean soup made with crab meat and dasheen, a spinach-like vegetable), pigeon peas, rice, and curry (curry is the culinary contribution of Trinidad's East Indian population). The sun shone, the sea sparkled, and it was hard to leave, but if there is one thing you quickly learn in the Caribbean, it is that a confirmed flight, in the season, is more precious than gold. One particular inter-island airline has a way of changing schedule without notice, so it is wise to confirm and re-confirm at every step unless you really want to be marooned.

Grenada—Spice Island Inn



Green, lush, mountainous Grenada gave me my first glimpse of the genesis of many of the islands in the Lesser Antilles chain, the peaks of a submerged volcanic mountain range that once formed a land bridge between North and South America. As so often happens, the airport and the hotels were on opposite sides of the island (taxi transportation turned out to be one of the more unexpected expenses of my trip, for although distances are not great, rates are high). The road wound up and down the central ridge of the mountains, through plantations of bananas and cocoa, banks of fern and wild ginger, and the nutmeg and cloves that earned Grenada the name "Spice Island," passing at about 2,000 feet the shimmering green volcanic crater lake of Grand Etang.

There's a happy insouciance about Grenada that is reflected in the faces of the people and the names they paint on their buses (Hot in Time, I Go'n It Easy, People's Comfort, Sparrow) and shops (As You Want Bar, God's Mercy Store). Descending the mountain we came to the island's capital, St. George's, a charming old town of red-roofed houses on a green hillside, with streets pitching steeply down to the waterfront and harbor. The houses, a harmonious jumble of eighteenth-century British and French colonial architecture, reflect the mixed heritage of these bitterly contested islands.

South of St. George's, across the bay, lies the gleaming two-mile sweep of one of the Caribbean's most beautiful beaches, Grand Anse, and Spice Island Inn claims 1,200 feet of it. American owner-manager Alan Krassner fell in love with Grenada and Grand Anse beach while vacationing in the Caribbean, and opened Spice

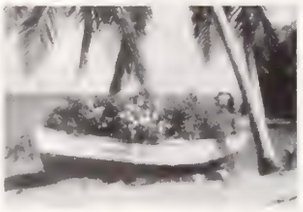
Island Inn four years ago. Assisted by Colin Laird, a British-born architect with offices in Trinidad, he has evolved one of the best designs for a modern island hotel I have seen. The dining room, kitchens, bar, and offices are in the central hotel building, while cottages stretch away on either side down the full extent of the beach, each so well oriented and separated that you have a sense of complete privacy—and 60 feet of beachfront to call your own. Between each bedroom and bathroom is a small private garden (and a handy hook on the wall for hanging up wet bathing suits) with sliding glass doors and louvers at either end of the bedroom to let the breezes through. Like many of the hotels I visited, Spice Island Inn is on the leeward side of the island where, I learned, trade winds blowing from the land tend to sweep insects out to sea. A Scottish couple I talked to told me that when they pick an island hotel from a brochure, they always check to see which way the palm trees lean—shoreward or seaward!



Meals at Spice Island Inn are a constant surprise and delight, for Alan Krassner and his chef, a young Englishman called Bert Toyne (who, before arriving at Spice Island Inn, had never cooked professionally in his life), have scrapped the typical hotel menu and created a light, refreshing cuisine suited to the climate and based on cold soups, simple main courses of plainly cooked meat or fresh fish (with never a starchy potato), and fruit desserts. Some of the more memorable tastes that still linger on my tongue are a velvety vichyssoise made with breadfruit instead of potatoes; a punch made from a native red sorrel, soaked, strained, flavored with cinnamon, and chilled; soursop fool; sopadilla ice cream; guava coupe; flying fish marinated in garlic, onions, and lime juice and fried Barbados style; and turkey with coconut stuffing. One heavenly concoction turned out to be simply good old Heinz canned tomato soup mixed with orange juice and a little light cream and chilled.

With a palm-shaded beach and buoyant blue water just a few feet from my door, and with the effort it took just to move further than the Inn's dining room, I still managed to spend a morning in St. George's (the Inn provides twice-daily transportation to town). The shops proved disappointing, but the market, like most island markets, was fascinating. I love to wander around the stalls, piled with exotic, unfamiliar produce. I picked up for pennies a handful of nutmegs in their natural state—glossy brownish-black nuts veiled with the scarlet threads of mace, an outer covering that is a spice in its own right.

St. Vincent—Young Island

Alan Krassner, who on his out-of-season busman's holidays stops off at other hotels in the Caribbean, had told me about a brand new hotel just opened on St. Vincent, so the minute I got to the airport I headed there. Young Island, which turned out to be really an island unto itself, is a twenty-acre retreat 200 yards offshore from St. Vincent, owned and operated by John and Polly Houser. Mr. Houser, a former vice president of American Express and Hilton Hotels International, has had plenty of major-league experience, but his own brainchild—the antithesis of the huge, impersonal resort hotel—reflects his belief that today's vacationers are seeking smaller, more peaceful places where life is casual and unorganized and you dress down rather than up. Young Island is without clocks or television sets; there is but one telephone which keeps rather haphazard communication with the mainland; and no eyebrows are lifted if you wander around barefoot.

At first sight, it doesn't look like a hotel at all, but a village of shingle-roofed huts (ten at the moment) and two larger pavilions set in a grove of croton, hibiscus, and ginger. The huts prove to be cottages for two, simply but comfortably furnished. Wood louvers and screens replace windows, and the bathroom opens to an outdoor shower screened by a head-high bamboo fence. To take a morning or after-swim shower in the open air, gazing at the trees on the hillside, is just one of Young Island's offbeat delights. Meals are served in the two pavilions (one has a kitchen and semi-circular breakfast counter; the other, tables and a central bar) and if you get hungry in between, there's a big bunch of bananas hanging outside the office. The food at Young Island is simple, island cooking, for the West Indian cook, Mrs. Campbell, is a dab hand with curries and pilaus, callaloo and pigeon pea soup, pumpkin fritters and coconut cake. Even the mayonnaise has an exotic taste here—it is flavored and colored with the native hot pepper sauce.

I was perpetually enchanted by the gentle grace and almost Elizabethan speech of the Vincentian staff at Young Island. My chambermaid, handing me a laundry bag, said, "Rest your linen in here, mistress," and Mrs. Campbell advised me, when making callaloo, to "cook it until the bush (dasheen) turns to rags."

The pleasures of Young Island are simple: swimming and snorkeling, bobbing on the Carib canoes used as rafts, lolling in hammocks, or climbing the hill to gaze seaward to the distant island of Bequia. When this palls, there is always the blue-canopied launch waiting at the dock to make the three-minute trip to St. Vincent, and a car and driver permanently on call on the other side. St. Vincent boasts a small but delightful botanical garden, the oldest in the western hemisphere, with a breadfruit tree descended from the one Captain Bligh brought from Tahiti, and a cannonball tree named for its puffy, sweet-scented flame-tipped flowers. The lively, bustling waterfront capital, Kingstown, has a central market, two cathedrals—one pure Georgian with gracefully arched windows and slim white pillars, the other a wild example of Victorian Gothic rising like a turreted mirage in the middle of the tropical landscape—and white and pink houses with verandas, gingerbread trim, and sloping, overhanging roofs of painted corrugated iron, faded by the strong sun to a soft dusty rose or chartreuse.

So far, I had been in islands where the accent, despite the local patois, was unmistakable British. But at the next island, Martinique, I didn't have to hear a word spoken to know that it is a département of France. It was in the air, in the combination of Gallic spirit and quickness and Creole gaiety.

Martinique—Auberge de l'Anse Mitan

Fort-de-France, Martinique's capital, is one of the most sophisticated and European in the Caribbean. Around the Savannah, or main plaza, are hotels, cafés, and excellent restaurants that serve both French cuisine and Creole specialties. The narrow streets, reminiscent of Paris' Left Bank, are chockablock with elegant stores selling French free-port merchandise, and old houses covered with wrought-iron grillwork and balconies and louvered shutters, their sides decorated with red and white or black and red shingles set in diamond pattern.

My hotel was not in Fort-de-France, but across the bay on a peninsula, near Les Trois Ilets, birthplace of Josephine, where you can see touching memorabilia of her life displayed in a tiny stone museum. One look at the local girls, with their superb carriage and glowing good looks, explains Napoleon's infatuation with his empress. The Auberge de l'Anse Mitan is a modest French family style country inn, and a favorite Sunday lunch spot for residents of Fort-de-France (boats make regular trips across for a fare of 3 cents). The hotel faces a beach and jetty, and the verandas, on one of which is the dining terrace, have an uninterrupted view over the bay.

The cooking of Mr. Ràpicault, the owner, was one of the high points of my trip. Each morning he would take the early boat to Fort-de-France and the markets, coming back with fresh fish and produce for the day's meals. There might be an hors d'oeuvre of thin slices of avocado, cucumber, fresh hearts of palm (crisply delicate, totally unlike the canned variety) and tomatoes vinaigrette; crabe farci, the meat mixed with onions, garlic, hot green pepper, and bread crumbs, and baked; kingfish cooked Creole-style with onions, tomatoes, and hot pepper, served with rice and slices of cheeses and fresh fruit. The bottle that is an indispensable part of any Gallic meal could be chosen from the list of inexpensive but good French regional wines, and if it was still half-full when the meal was over, Carmen, the Creole waitress whose slow, sleepy, radiant smile lit up the day, would whisk it away and bring it back next time around. It was at mealtime that the warm, family quality of the inn was most apparent. Guests, mostly French-Canadians with a few Americans, treated each other to apéritifs (after one experience of a local Martinique punch, made with a crystal-clear rum and decidedly lethal, I, too, stuck to apéritifs) and chatted back and forth between the tables.

Antigua—the Inn at English Harbour

By way of contrast, Antigua was the most British of the islands I visited—as befits the onetime home of the Duke of Clarence, later William IV, and Admiral Nelson. Roads wind like English lanes through neat fields broken by occasional patches of sugar cane and the strange fortlike structures that are the old sugar mills with the sails lopped off. Antigua is a prosperous, bustling island with a rum distillery, two potteries, a capital—St. John's—where angular modern buildings jostle the old colonial houses and an estimated twenty-seven hotels and guest houses, plus the American members only Mill Reef Club.

My hotel, the Inn, was on the south side of the island, tucked away on the slopes of Antigua's national park overlooking the calm waters of English Harbour, the land-locked stronghold of Nelson's Leeward Island Squadron during the Napoleonic Wars. The rooms that form part of the main building (there are more down at the beach) have private terraces where you can watch the comings and goings of boats in the Harbour while sharing a leisurely breakfast with bold little birds that raid your breakfast tray, dipping their beaks in the sugar, the marmalade, and the milk jug, and seizing stray crumbs of toast. The hotel is comfortable, relaxed, with a big terrace for outdoor dining and dancing, and a bar like an English country pub—wood settles, brick walls, dark beams, a collection of pewter mugs.

The hotel boat will take you across the water and into Nelson's Dockyard, which is being restored to its old glory by the Society of the Friends of English Harbour. Many of the buildings including the Admiral's House, now a small museum, have been rebuilt or repaired, but not as lifeless restorations. The Paymaster's House is a yacht chartering office, the Officers' Quarters are rented to skippers, and the Engineer's Office, a two-story eighteenth-century brick house, has been converted into a ten-room hotel, the Admiral's Inn. In the evenings, when the bar, dining room, and terrace are taken over by yachtsmen from the boats, guests, and island residents, it is one of the swingingest places on the island. This inn went down on my list of small hotels, and before I left Antigua I found one more—the Galley Bay Surf Club. On the western coast of the island, the Galley Bay is a freehand composition of cottages and separate hotel rooms (office, bar, lounge) scattered over a glorious beach. The lounge, furnished with some fine antiques, is insouciantly open to the weather on one side, screened only by a most unusual room divider made from Antiguan pottery braziers (called coal pots by the natives) stacked in ceiling-high columns.

THE LITTLEST TRADITIONS

Handmade, humble, and funny, they shed a deeper gleam than all the tinsel in town

BY EDITH SONN OSHIN

A special skoal this coming yuletide to Miss Templeton and Alvin, and to Billy B., who got the measles, and Martita who made funny faces. The toast may be a little overdue, but only in recent years did my husband and I learn that these people had played parts, even unwittingly, in some of the smaller Christmas traditions in our home.

When their roles first came to light, they gave me a small jolt, as if I'd been told suddenly that I'd been spelling Santa Claus wrong all these years. But I've come to appreciate that small group, and to think of them with affection when we unpack that big carton marked FRAGILE—XMAS DECORATIONS.

The Christmas carton is huge; its sides bulge, but the baubles within weigh so little that even our younger boys can now manage, unaided, to get it downstairs from the attic. Stored within the corrugated confines, wrapped inside smaller boxes and tissue paper and cotton, are the accouterments for the holiday season —the makings for our main traditions (such as stockings to be hung, and the copy of "The Night Before Christmas" to be read aloud by our youngest child), and, also, the wherewithal for our little traditions. Unlike the major customs which link us to our childhood and back beyond that, the little traditions have no ancestry. They weren't inherited (none are more than twelve years old). They just grew, unexpectedly, within our own family and from what I've learned in recent years, a few may have taken root in the wrong household.

The beginning of a small tradition is usually so simple it's rarely recognized as a custom-in-the-making. Its incipience may be in a thought expressed while trimming the tree, or in a child's offer of a handmade gift. The next year, a trinket in the Christmas carton awakens the memory of a delightful moment that occurred the previous season. The memorable gesture is recalled, or the remark repeated, and before anyone can say so much as "Please pass the tinsel," a little tradition puts down tender roots.

Among our favorite little customs, we count the hanging of certain decorations on the tree—specifically two little snowmen, and a cardboard ornament that holds a snapshot (circa 1955) of our oldest son. Each year as we carefully unwrap these from their nests of tissue paper, we smile at the re-emergence of pleasant memories. The tree decoration with the snapshot was made by our first-born when he was in first grade (he used a photograph of himself taken by the teacher, mounted it on cardboard and made a frame of green yarn for it). The snapshot shows a small boy in a heavy snowsuit, standing against the brick wall of the school building. His expression: one of trying bravely to smile into the sun. The year he gave this to us as a gift, he stretched to hang it as high on the tree as possible so we could see it easily. Each Christmastime, his stretch puts it higher on the tree: this season it will swing from a branch that brushes the ceiling.

In contrast, the little snowmen go face to face on a low bough. When the snowmen were new nine or ten years ago (they were found peeking out of the Christmas stockings), our second son toddled over to the tree and reached up to hang his right next to his older brother's. "So they can talk to each other," he explained matter-of-factly. Ever since, the two snowmen converse on a low branch (now the boys must bend low to fasten them).

During recent yuletides, I've discovered that not all our small customs have such innocent pasts. For instance, our "fig pudding candle," a certain woven mat, and our reindeer napkin holders have more history than I had suspected.

We use the reindeer napkin holders for Christmas dinner. In kindergarten our youngest son faithfully traced the pattern for these on oak-tag, cut them carefully, and, of course, colored each nose red. The reindeer faces have a rather sweet expression (how many reindeer boast a broad grin?) and our son had an equally engaging grin when he handed them to us.

When Susie asks for a new carpet, turn her loose on her daddy.

She'll tell him how important it is to have a beautiful carpet. One with lots of bright and cheerful colors. The kind of carpet a girl's room should have. A Masland carpet.

You knew that's what Susie would say. Not one word about "go-go" colors. Or pajama parties. That's because Susie really understands her dad. And, with a little more persistence and charm, she'll get his usual assent, "It's OK with me if it's OK with your mother."

Later, while Susie's doing her homework, tell your husband the carpet Susie wants is a good investment. Masland carpets are not only colorful, they're durable. They keep their beauty for years and years.

When everything's settled, take Susie to your nearby Masland retailer's. Let her pick the carpet she wants. Dad won't even know the colors are "go-go". But he'll certainly know when those pajama parties start.

The Magic of Masland Carpets.

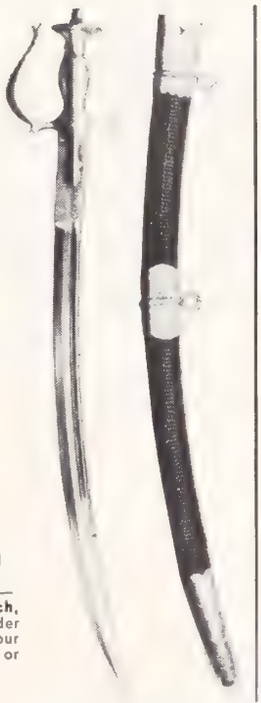
ANTIQUE GLOBES

Faithful Reproductions of 16th Century Masterpieces

Treasures for Home or Office

The rich beauty of these globes is so remarkable that we wish we could show them to you in all their color—lovely, muted antique colorings of ancient maps, detailed with absolute perfection. These maps were created by a 16th Century Dutch Master, printed flat and then carefully applied to the globe. Then mounted on an antique hardwood base, richly grained in walnut finish. Meridian frame is reproduced from old Italian hand-engravings. Equatorial frame adorned with charming signs of the Zodiac. Beautiful parchment "Legenda," suitable for framing, comes with globe.



Superb decorative pieces, works of art that will fascinate adults and children—as they study the antique concept of the world as Europe was first discovering it. You'll spend enchanted hours with it.

AVAILABLE IN 4 SIZES: 8" high, 7" diam. $19.95. Nine inches high, 8" diam. $24.95. 10" high, 8½" diam. $29.95. Large, 11½" high, 9½" diam. $39.95. Please add $1.50 per globe PP & Hdlg.

MAHARAJAH SWORDS OF THE Punjab Warriors

Regal Decorations for Your Home

These exact replica swords of the famous Warrior Sikhs are now available as handsome decorative pieces. They make a striking addition to library, den, or playroom walls—or to hang above a mantel. Until now found only in the stately homes of men who brought them back from India as trophies.

Made in the State of Punjab, where the art of sword-making is a tradition—handed down from father to son. Completely hand-forged and drawn of the finest steel. Their beauty is remarkable: Hilt is hand-engraved in Silverplate; Scabbard is covered with a rich velvet of Red or Royal Peacock Blue, set off with gold braid. Swords are full size—app. 3 ft. long. And even the steel fighting blade is a thing of beauty—with the hand-wrought inscription: Degh-Tegh-Fateh (we work, fight and conquer together).

Truly superb and rare pieces that you will treasure—and proudly pass on as heirlooms. Priced at $17. each, $32. a pair. Please add 95c per order P.P. & hdlg. Order and examine them for yourself. Farm scene in France, Georges Carveau

Important European Art Purchase (Not Reproductions)

Original Oil Paintings from 28 Artists from France, Austria, Holland only $6.95

Beautifully Framed in Rich Grained Walnut Finish. Each oil Painting Large 12" x 15"

Imagine! Original oil paintings (not reproductions) at the incredible low price of just $6.95. And each oil painting (12"x 15") comes to you beautifully framed in richly grained walnut finish hardwood! Oil paintings you will be proud to hang in your home for their exquisite full color beauty! Mail the coupon today.

Possible Increase In Value

This remarkable value is possible because a team of art buyers searched the studios, workshops and galleries of the important and promising young artists of Europe. The artists finally selected are from France, Holland & Austria. They are fine and unusually talented craftsmen . . . men who we think may achieve greatness! Paintings are selected not only for their exquisite full color beauty, but for their possible increase in monetary value.

Each Painting On Extra Heavy Canvas

The oil paintings selected for this special offering are beautiful landscapes, florals & fruits. They will beautify any decor (decorators are among our best customers) and win the praise and admiration of friends. They could be a snow-capped peak in Switzerland, a farm scene in France, a dazzling lagoon in Italy, a bowl of fruit executed with Renoir brilliance. Each painting is on extra heavy canvas, signed by the artist. Country of origin is indicated on the back. No two alike.

Offer May Not Be Repeated

Because our supply is limited orders will be filled on a first come first served basis. This offer may not be repeated again in this magazine so we urge you to mail the coupon & order now. Your order will be rushed to you fully insured. Simply indicate your choice of subject: Landscape, Seascape, Floral or Fruit. We guarantee your complete satisfaction or money refunded immediately.

Brighten Your Christmas

Miniature Hibiscus

An exotic touch of the West Indies, a slow, easy grower that produces magnificent blossoms. Famous as Hawaii's national flower, the Hibiscus flowers profusely. You have your choice of red or golden.

Miniature Florida Key Lime

Anyone having had the pleasure of tasting Florida's famous "Key Lime Pie" will need no introduction to this wonderful little tree. Those who have not should start a lime grove in the kitchen window now. Eager and easy to grow indoors, the lush dark-green foliage, fragrant blossoms and subsequent fruit will provide a gardening achievement not soon forgotten.

Florida Palm Tree

A touch of tropical Florida in your home all year. Versatile, it is America's easiest-to-grow indoor tree. Simple growing instructions will permit you to be the sole judge of the tree size—from 12 inches to 6 feet! Palms love deep shade and thrive where other plants refuse to grow.

WITH THIS FESTIVE MINIATURE
INDOOR HOLLY TREE

GROWS TO 3 FT. WITH CLUSTERS OF CHEERFUL BRIGHT-RED BERRIES–only $2.98

These are marvelous true miniature trees, little botanical gems grown and developed for planting INDOORS where they blossom and thrive all year round. The shapely and festive HOLLY TREES will add a bright and cheerful touch to Christmas with their handsome green leaves and clusters of bright-red berries. Just think of the many ways you can use several to decorate your house and table both during and after Christmas YEAR AFTER YEAR . . . and imagine the thrill of watching these miniatures as they grow from 10 inches when you receive them to 3 feet tall! The flowers (Hibiscus and Gardenia) produce exotic blossoms, while the miniature fruit trees bear up to 30 pieces of fruit at a time, and continue to bear fruit indefinitely. Before you know it, you'll be eating fresh fruit that you'll pluck yourself! All are true trees, not grafts but rooted cuttings of good well-known varieties. Indoor trees are the oldest, yet newest and most exciting gardening thrill. All the miniature trees have glossy, green foliage easily trimmed and shaped. Beauties to have and give, you'll find they are real conversation pieces!

BEAUTIFUL FOUR-COLOR BOX FOR CHRISTMAS GIVING

Just think what a wonderful and really unusual gift these trees make. Each is in its own pot, individually boxed in an especially nice, bright, colorful package that enhances the tree. Send us your gift cards. All are shipped directly to you from Florida groves. You can have your own little grove if you order now. This year's planting is limited, and orders are shipped in the order they are received. All sold on 10-day money back guarantee.

Miniature Orange Tree

Get your greatest gardening thrill when these sturdy little trees BUD, BLOOM and BEAR fruit (up to 30 luscious pieces at a time) right in your own home! Easier to grow than many common house plants, their glossy green foliage is easily shaped. It's a fine way to have fresh fruit all year 'round.

Miniature Gardenia

Imagine the thrill of producing these delicate, fragrant, snow-white blossoms right in your own living room! Undoubtedly America's most romantic flower, they are easy to grow, have lustrous dark green foliage, up to 18 magnificent blossoms at a time, and an unforgettable fragrance. You can even make your own corsage for that special occasion.

Miniature Lemon Tree

Countless articles have been written describing the many, many years of pleasure growing lemon trees in your home. Watching these miniature trees bud, bloom and bear fruit in a short period of your own efforts will be a great "green thumb" thrill.

PHOTOGRAPHED IN THE CHRISTIAN BROTHERS WINERY, NAPA VALLEY, CALIFORNIA.

Binning fine wines is an old-world practice. Brother Timothy bins The Christian Brothers Burgundy to be sure your dinner will be a memorable one.

Brother Timothy is in charge of The Christian Brothers' wine-making activities in California. Binning, or the maturing of the wine in bottles, helps to give this superb red Burgundy a full-bodied smoothness, and a true flavor and aroma, that no hurried methods could duplicate.

Here Brother Timothy examines a bottle in the soft light of a candle for color and clarity. He suggests you try the Burgundy, the next time you want to add special enjoyment to your steak or roast-beef dinner, or to any hearty meal.

You'll find The Christian Brothers Burgundy an excellent example of the outstanding table wines, dessert wines, sparkling wines, vermouths and brandy* that The Brothers have been making for so many years in California's genial soil and climate.

If you would like Brother Timothy to send you a FREE WINE SELECTOR, which tells you how to choose and enjoy wines, write to: The Christian Brothers, Department W, 1255 Post Street, San Francisco, California 94109.

Jordan's Virginia Ham

Aged Like Vintage Wine

Albert E. Jordan's Virginia hams have been a must at Christmas for over a century. They have a flavor that has excited the gourmet for even longer. They are prepared in the same painstaking manner our forefathers used over 300 years ago. Selected from only the finest porkers, cured in gentle seasonings and sugar, and smoked over mellow hickory fires. Then comes the aging, about one year, and off to our kitchens. There our chefs glaze them with sugar, molasses and wine, and bake them to a golden brown giving them the savory nut-like flavor enjoyed by gourmets everywhere. Why not order now for you and your friends? 9 to 15 lbs. average weight, $1.98 per lb., postpaid in U.S. Satisfaction guaranteed.

The Christmas Gift that gives a lifetime of Pleasure

Marg Ponds

DECORATIVE PAINTING COURSE
gives personal fulfillment & profit!

You can find no better gift for a loved one (or for yourself) than this—a gift bringing personal achievement and lasting pride of accomplishment.

Marg Pond's Home Study Course has opened a new world of interest and beauty to thousands of students with no previous art training, knowledge or experience. Following her proven methods, anyone who can hold a brush can learn to beautify familiar household articles with genuine oil paintings of flowers, fruits, cherubs or other charming decorations...and to create original objets d'art.

This unique "learn-at-home" course with its easy-to-follow lessons and personal guidance has enabled many ordinary people to achieve self-confidence, discover hidden creative ability and enlarge their incomes by selling decorated items to gift shops and friends. Many have opened their own shops or become teachers.

The course includes everything you need...color movie instruction films, paints, brushes, lessons, patterns. Its cost is low; pay as you learn if you prefer. It's fun; it's relaxing. Mail the coupon—today!

There may be a fortune hiding in your attic or cellar!

It may be disguised as an old lamp, a rusty doorknob, a plain porcelain dish, or some worn-out furniture you'd pay to get rid of. Yet this "Junk" may be worth hundreds . . . even thousands of dollars!

A FORTUNE IN THE JUNKPILE, the amazing new book by Dorothy Jenkins, the syndicated expert on antiques, will help you smoke out the fortune that might be gathering dust in your own home.

Its jam-packed with 300 clear photographs, know-how, and literally hundreds of insider's tips (like running your finger over a piece of pressed glass), or knowing "which way the onions should face" on Meissen porcelain, or how to tell a Phyfe from a phony). A FORTUNE IN THE JUNKPILE gives you a "professional's eye" for furniture of all periods, mirrors, frames, lamps, glassware, pottery, porcelain, coins, china, silver, buttons, shutters . . . everything from Barbizon to moustache-cups.

You'll find out when to sell (when pewter a hot item today?), when to wait, when to repair (sometimes it's a big mistake) and everything else necessary to cash in on the rising antique market.

And remember, they don't have to be "old" to be antiques.

Toys from the 20's, window blinds from the 1900's . . . the most worthless items are being bought by hungry dealers and collectors for high prices. Begin your stay-at-home treasure hunt today! Send for your copy of A FORTUNE IN THE JUNKPILE. $5.95 ppd.

Crafty eagle

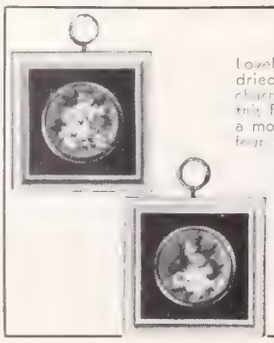
Keen on crafts that don't involve a complete workshop? Here's an intriguing idea. An American eagle to be fashioned from foil in glowing copper color comes in a kit which includes all materials. It has its own frame baroque box. 11" by 14". A family fun project, an interesting gift. $3 ppd. Treasure Trove, HG12. 31 E. 28 St., New York, N. Y. 10016.

Banish burns

You can't have accidents with cigarettes falling from precariously balanced perches on ashtrays any more. Ciga-Rest corrects this hazard, gives comfort as well to smokers who hate to reach for smoldering cigarettes. Washes easily—will not tip. In aluminum with lasting luster. Four for $5. Ppd. Sampson's, HG12. 1300 Springhill Ave., Dayton, Ohio 45409.

Happily apple-y

Turn the handle on this simple kitchen helper and apples are ready for pie, applesauce or good skinless eating! It peels, cores and slices evenly and it does it quickly. Clamps to work table or counter top. Strong, lightweight nylon with steel cutters and slicers. 6½" by 9½", $3.98 ppd. Spencer Gifts, 623 Spencer Bldg., Atlantic City, N. J. 08404.



The good works

The Christmas mood prevails at Hummelwerks. Christmas is many things.

A sudden swirl of laughing colors. A field, moon-paled and quiet under a heavy snow. A dusty box laden with silver tinsel and well-used lights. A note to the North Pole written with a dull pointed crayon.

It is a time of giving; a time of expressing gratitude and love. It is a time to talk and a time to think. A time to anticipate and a time to remember.

Christmas is many things.

But most of all Christmas is the home.

What better way to express your good wishes than by giving the magazine written for the home? The magazine embodying all of the hope and ideals and beauty of the home; of your home . . . HOUSE & GARDEN.

Splendidly photographed, with practical, stimulating articles, HOUSE & GARDEN is a remarkable gift for your discerning friends who take extra pride and interest in their home.

Easily ordered, modestly priced, this exceptional gift is further complemented by a handsome announcement card signed with your name.

This Christmas consider HOUSE & GARDEN . . . a gift to inspire the pleasant thoughts of you and of Christmas throughout the year.

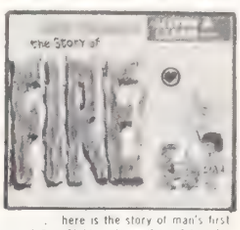
CHILD GUIDANCE RECORDS

We all want our children to grow up healthy, happy, well adjusted human beings. Intelligent . . . Successful . . Personable . . . Lovable . . . Fearless, able to realize their full potentials . . . What a world it would be! ! !

Well, we're not saying that these Child Guidance Records will guarantee this, but they'll help!

. . . teaches pre-school children the alphabet on one side of the record and how to count numbers from one to 20 on the other side.



lullaby record giving children added security and helping those who are afraid by showing how to "unwind" for a tranquil night's rest of thunder and lightning and explains the causes. This record has been played to Franklin's research into electricity and teaches children what to do when caught in a storm during a thunderstorm.

Side 1 is "Let's Play Fire Chief" and tells how to behave when a fire starts—Side 2 is "Let's Play Engineer" and teaches children not to play near railroads

. . here is the story of man's first use of fire. Children learn the safety rules to prevent fire, and the record cautions them not to play with matches.

A HANDSOME GIFT FOR A LIMITED FEW

Heavy Ivory Cufflink Set

Carved from Solid Elephant-Tusk Ivory

Splitting an ivory tusk is somewhat similar to breaking a diamond—it must be done just right or the tusk will powder. The skilled carver that tools these elegant imported elephants first splits the tusk, then carves these amazingly detailed miniatures and polishes them, by hand, until they take on a nice patina. A discerning gift in limited quantity whose value and appearance are enhanced as time goes by. These are really little gems. Cufflinks and tie bar set, in suede pouch, are a fine value for $5.95 ppd.

A traditional Christmas eggnog—made with gold or amber Puerto Rican rum. Photograph by Alan Fontaine.

How to make good, old-fashioned eggnog the first time you try

(Use gold Puerto Rico rum and follow one of the recipes below)

IF YOU really want to delight your friends with a Christmas eggnog, make it with rum. There's plenty of precedent. After all, this Early American merry cup started with rum.

Today, the grand tradition continues—but with a notable improvement: gold or amber Puerto Rican rums. They refuse to be subdued in an eggnog. The reason: all Puerto Rican rums are distilled at high proof and aged in oak. This is the law in Puerto Rico.

Here are two great recipes for a traditional eggnog. Use the one that suits your own tempo and taste.

Traditional recipe. Beat 12 egg yolks until light. Beat in ½ lb. sugar until thick. Stir in 1 qt. milk and a fifth of gold or amber Puerto Rican rum. Chill three hrs. Pour into punch bowl. Fold in 1 qt. stiffly whipped cream. Chill for one hour. Dust with nutmeg. Serves 24.

Quick recipe. Add 12 oz. gold or amber Puerto Rican rum to 1 qt. eggnog mix from your dairy. Fold in 1 cup whipped cream. Chill. Dust with nutmeg. Serves 12.

FREE BOOKLET! 31 rum drink recipes. Write: Puerto Rico Rum Recipe Booklet, 666 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10019.

You'd be surprised what a tuxedo can do for a roast beef.
What happens is this: make a dinner party formal and the women get all dressed up and look gorgeous and the men don their tuxedos which brings out all the gallantry that's been lying dormant all these years and the cocktails and the candles and conversation all start to take on more meaning and all the little witticisms you never remembered until it was too late are on the tip of your tongue and you start really tasting the wine and the flirtations become a little more dangerous and the roast beef melts in your mouth.

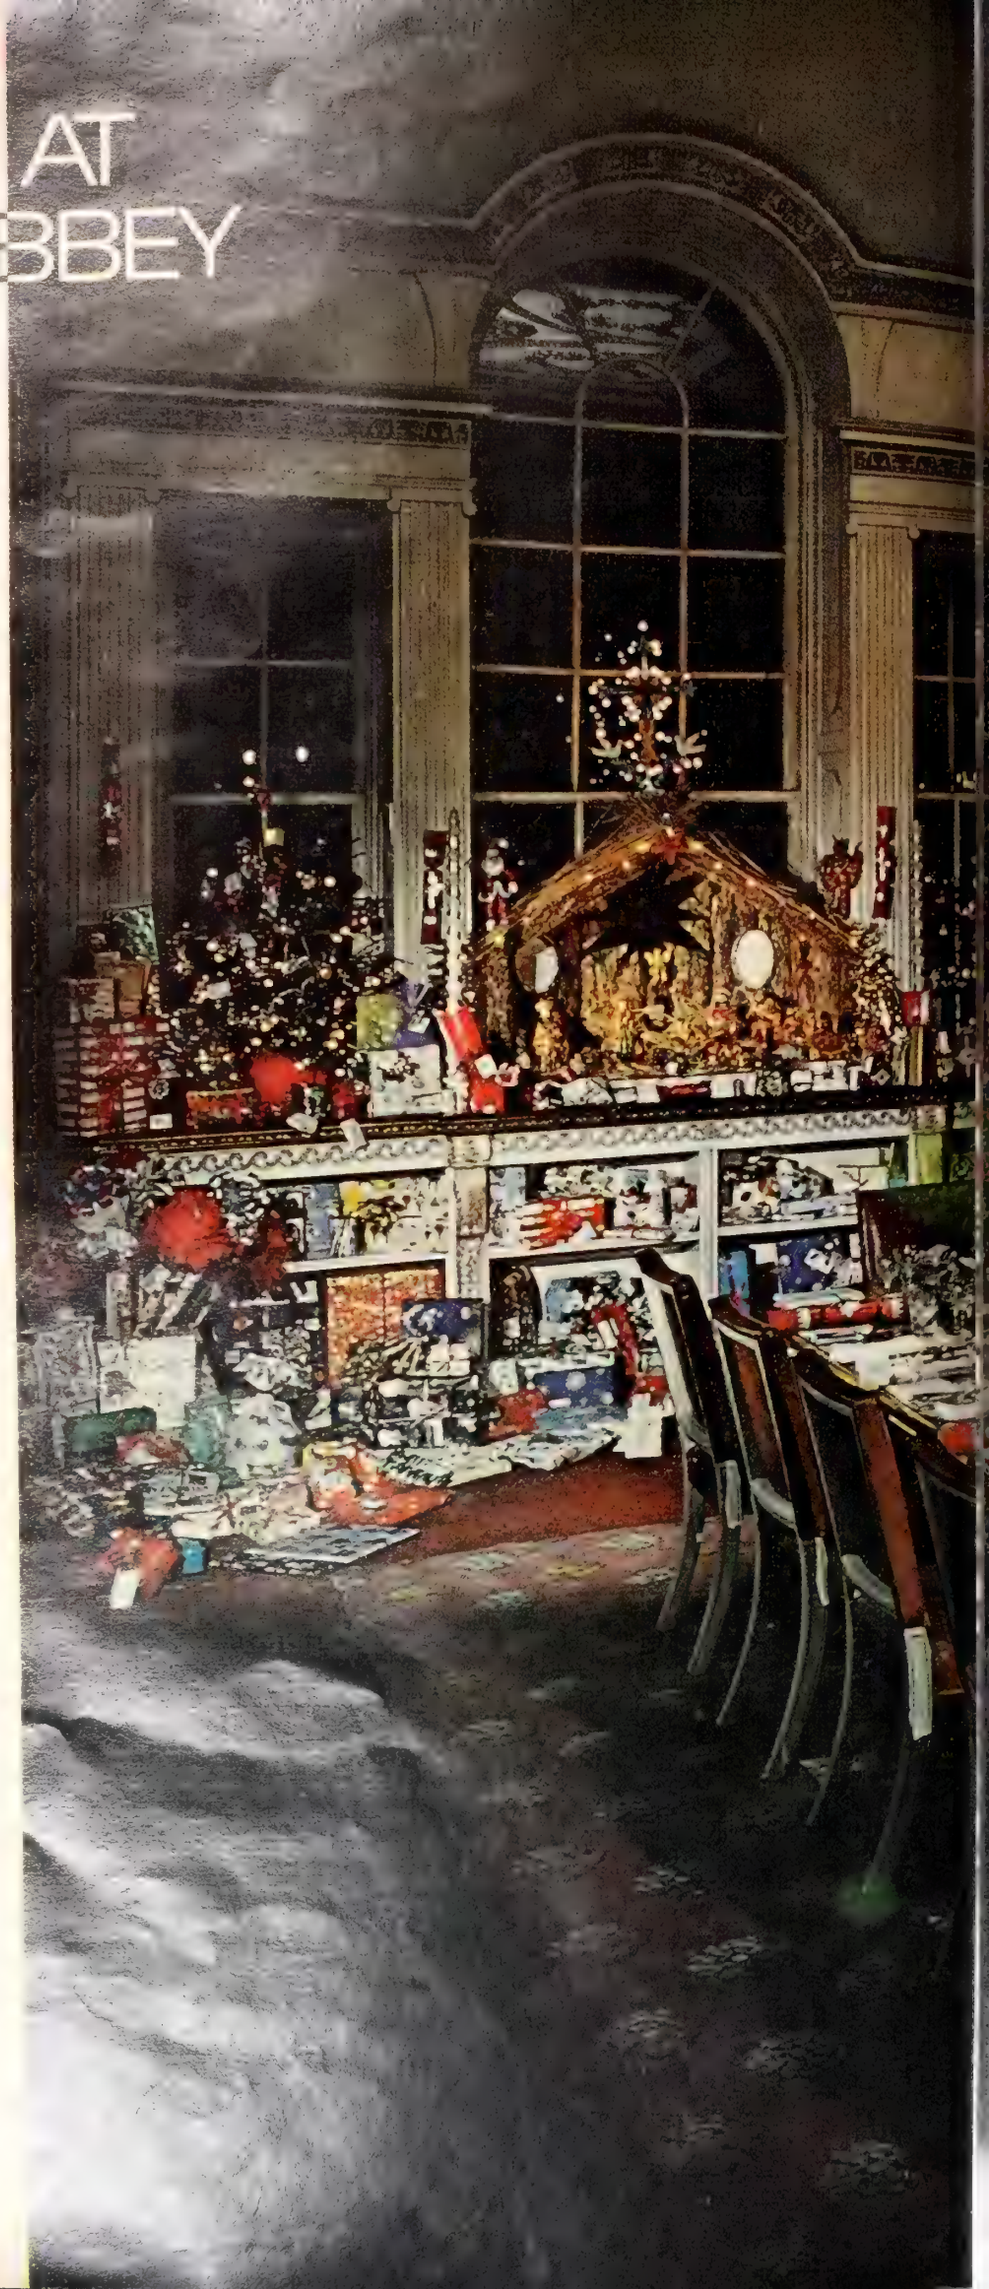
THE GREAT MYRTH AND MELODY"

NORMAN KARLSON

Traditions are like musical phrases in an intricate symphony: they come in modestly, swell to importance, fade into oblivion, and later return, often livelier than they were before.

Some of our treasured Christmas traditions are older than Christianity. Lights, certainly, and Christmas greenery. (The Church was not at all pleased when early Christians first decked their houses for Christmas with the laurel of the Romans' Saturnalia.)

Some of our mellowest traditions are in reality young. The internationally beloved Stille Nacht was first sung less than 150 years ago. But the "first American carol," had been written all of 170 years earlier, in the language of the Huron Indians. ("Listen to the angels in the skies...Mary has borne the Great Spirit, as they foretell.")



Some traditions, fading in one land, take root and flourish in another. Today we think of the Twelfth Night "King's Cake" (see page 158) as Mexican. But it was baked in France and England, too. At times the baked-in prize was a coin instead of a babe. Or there were two prizes, a bean and a pea, as Robert Herrick explained in his seventeenth-century account of an English Twelfth Night: "Now, now the mirth comes/With the cake full of plums/Where Bean's the King of the sport here,/Beside we must know,/The Pea also/Must revell, as Queen, in the Court here."

Some of the oldest and merriest Christmas traditions, having become a bit too merry, were abolished centuries ago. Dancing in the church, usually by altar boys, although it continued long after the Middle Ages, had been banned as early as the sixth century. The endearing Feast of the Ass commemorating the Flight into Egypt eventually degenerated from a solemn church ceremony into a theatrical so hilarious that it, too, was proscribed. But we can retaste its original spirit today in the revived Play of Herod (see page 184.)

Christmas itself was banned by the Puritans of Oliver Cromwell's England (mince pie they considered one of its worst abominations), and even in New England its keeping was frowned upon until well into the last century. But as wave after wave of newcomers from Germany, Ireland, Scandinavia, French Canada, and Spanish Mexico brought their own traditions over the sea or the border, the American celebration of Christmas became more widespread, more luxuriant, more varied than that of any other country in the world.

The most treasured traditions of all, perhaps, are the ones we initiate ourselves—the hour we set for opening family presents; the special spot where we always hang the mistletoe; the privilege accorded the family's youngest of putting the first ornament on the tree. The traditions that have come down to us through the centuries, revered as they may be, are enriched and refreshed by the simple rituals with which each family embellishes what a fifteenth-century monk described as "the great myrth and melody" of Christmas.

CHRISTMAS AT WOBURN ABBEY

An interview with the DUCHESS OF BEDFORD

The rich and enduring traditions of Christmas are joyously observed at Woburn Abbey on Christmas Eve when the dining room glows with all the remembered delights of candles and tinsel, holly and red ribbon, presents, Christmas trees, and a crèche. The home of the Dukes of Bedford, Woburn Abbey is one of England's finest houses, and contains a magnificent art collection, including the biggest and best assemblage of Canaletto paintings in the world. House and grounds are open to the public all year. Their size and splendor are hard to exaggerate—so are the vitality and charm of the Duke and Duchess.

"First of all," the Duchess told House & Garden, "people don't really understand a place like this. It is so hard for them to remember that this is a private house. It is our home. Christmas is a madhouse here. It takes tremendous organization. I have seven children, my husband, and two daughters-in-law. [illegible]

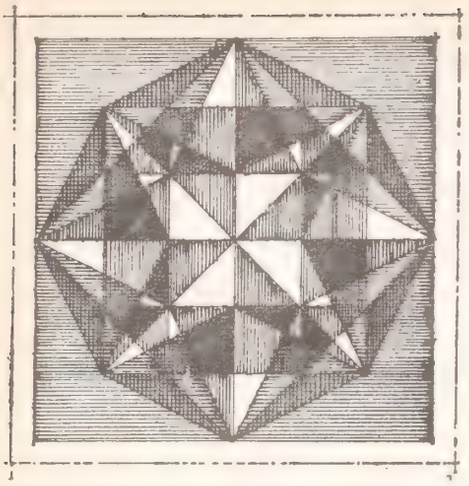
They each have a big present, something they want or need. Then they have—oh, twenty or more little presents for fun. I go to idiotic lengths with presents. You simply can't shop at Christmas, so I buy my presents all year-round. I have a great big cupboard which slowly fills up. Whenever I see anything I adore, I buy it for Christmas. Sometimes it is difficult to give things away.

"Four or five days before Christmas I start wrapping. My maid helps. She is marvelous with ribbons and bows. And the children help, too, wrapping each others' presents. They try and bribe each other to tell what they are going to get. Besides the children we always have other members of the family and a few strangers—people who have to spend Christmas away from their own countries. All these people have to have presents. Then there are the staff. They have their own Christmas tree, and I try to get each of them something personal.

"The decorations have to be started about three days before. It is easier for us in some ways than it is for most people; we have a full-time carpenter and electrician. Still I have to design and supervise everything. The crib we did last year I sketched out on paper, measurements and everything, but when it was done, it was far too neat and boxlike. So I fetched twigs and bark. We plaited twigs to cover the roof and nailed bark to the sides until none of the plywood was showing. Then I cut the piece of red glass that you see at the back into the shape of a star. For windows on each side I took kitchen foil and covered it with thin tracing paper, and put them in frames of plaited twigs. The rocks in the front are quartz and amethyst. I found them in a jeweler's store in Hatton Garden [London's main gem market] where they looked at me as though I were a nut—well, I guess I am.

"The figures, of course, are the best part. You would never believe they are made of bread. They come from Ecuador. A friend there got them for me. The colors are beautiful, and the decoration is exquisite. The year before we had Mexican figures. I try to do a different thing every year. Afterwards I give them to the vicar for the church.

"I made the cross on top with things from Woolworth's. I got their tiny colored lights, and the little birds they sell, and put them all together, sticking them at the back with Scotch tape. On each side of the crib is a Christmas tree. Under and around the crib we put most of the presents. Others have to go on the sideboards which we decorate quite simply with holly, tied with red bows, in the silver ice buckets. The center of the table is a bed of holly, tied with red and gold ribbons. I bury crackers [snappers in the United States] in it, and cut the ends that stick out in the shape of flowers. The only light is candles: fifty-six of them.



"The program for Christmas really starts at about six o'clock on Christmas Eve. The children from the village come in and ring hand-bells, playing carols. We give them refreshments. Then the choir comes and we have carols in the West Hall, with big log fires, and more refreshments. At eight o'clock the party in the house goes upstairs to change, and about nine-thirty we meet in the drawing room for champagne before dinner."

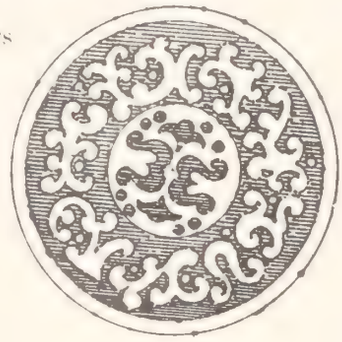
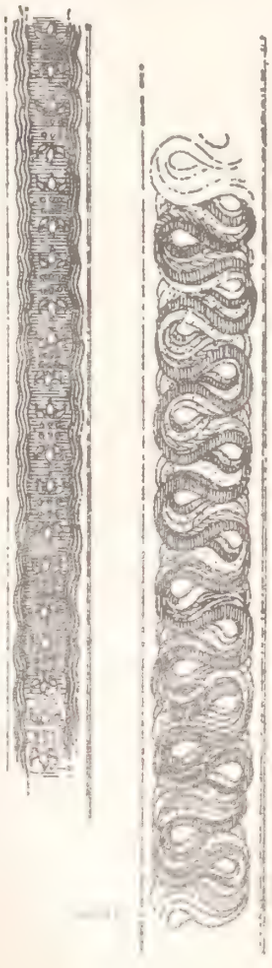
H&G's glorious Christmas ornaments for 1965



To make your house joyous and radiant this Christmas, H&G has inspired the design of not merely one but two special collections of imaginative and versatile decorations that you can use in a hundred ways. Here, the first—a series of gleaming vinyl ornaments inspired by old-fashioned candy—is used practically in toto to give an opulent look to a Christmas tree. Several sheets striped with ribbon-candy motifs are ruffled around the tree base, and individual candy-motif ornaments hang lightly at the tips of the branches. (Christmas balls are wired in clusters to the tops of the branches nearer the trunk.) For complete details on these sweet conceits, turn the page. The engaging designs in our other special collection are based on Latin American folk art. For the story of that, see page 144.



CANDY-MOTIF ORNAMENTS IN THREE SHAPES

RIBBON-CANDY STRIPS ON ONE SHEET

H&G's collection of candy-patterned ornaments includes a wide variety of shapes, sizes, and designs. The individual ornaments of rigid vinyl, ABOVE, come in three shapes and a total of seventeen different patterns. One assortment includes eight rounds, ranging from 5 to 18 inches in diameter, no two alike in pattern. A second assortment includes all three shapes—6-to-8-inch squares, 5-to-8-inch rounds, and one 4-to-10-inch rectangle—all in different patterns. The ribbon ornaments, RIGHT, come on a single sheet of flexible vinyl, 22 by 26 inches, which you can cut apart into strips, 1 to 2 inches wide. Ornaments designed and produced By Tiger Things.

Available at Lord & Taylor and other fine stores across the country. For a list, see page 200.

SWEET CONCEITS

H&G's special collection of candy ornaments include some you can buy and some you can make yourself

Candy has a wealth of happy connotations for us: holiday, party, treat, reward, luxury. Who does not remember from childhood the very special excitement stirred by candy canes, ribbon candy, the rock candy mountain? To decorate your house this Christmas, H&G has created a marvelous collection of ornaments inspired by the old-fashioned candies everybody loves. And to top them off, we have designed whimsical objets d'art of real candy which you can put together yourself. Two types of baubles make up the ornament collection. One is a sheet of flexible vinyl striped with ribbon candy motifs which you can use as is to cover a table, cut into smaller pieces for runners or place mats, or slice into candy-width strips to use as festoons or streamers. The other type is of rigid vinyl—separate shapes resembling, in giant scale, the mosaic candies in which the colored pattern runs clear through. Some of these rounds and polygons are large enough to use for place mats; some are small enough for coasters or, with a hole punched through and a string attached, to hang on a tree, in a window, or a chandelier. Both types are screen printed on a clear background in two color palettes—one predominantly pink and orange with touches of green, the other predominantly blue and green with touches of pink and yellow. Gay three-dimensional companions for these vinyl ornaments are the fruit, fauna, trees, and other decorative conceits we made variously with hard and soft, wrapped and unwrapped candies. On the next three pages you will see how happily the fake and the real go together—and on our cover you see how much zest a handful of old-fashioned sweets can add to the traditional Christmas wreath of fresh greenery.

Strips of H&G's ribbon candy decorations ripple down the chimney breast above a Victorian marble fireplace. On the mantelshelf twin urns hold topiary trees of perfectly edible hard candies in fruit shapes fixed by means of a heavy boiled icing to cones of Styrofoam. The glistening fish on the coffee table has a body of chocolate wrapped in foil, rests on a bed of rock candy. Our candy-patterned rounds of vinyl add Christmas color to the serving trays. Interior design by Rex Frey of Lord & Taylor.

1 Candy obelisks star for the holidays in a table-top composition. Styrofoam forms are covered with boiled icing, then paved with real candy easily removable by the sweet-toothed—candy stones in one case, maple sugar leaves in the other.
3 Real ribbon candy piled in three stacked compotes at one end of a party buffet glistens in the light of candles protected by hurricane chimneys around which are taped pieces of ribbon-candy vinyl.
4 A festive chandelier welcomes holiday guests in Mr. and Mrs. Moses Alexander Rubin's entrance hall. Individual candy-motif ornaments and ribbon-candy strips are attached with fine wire to the bowl-shaped ceiling fixture. Interior design by Galen Brand.
5 Fat little owls of paper-wrapped candies perch on a table in the Rubins' living room. The base of each bird is a large Styrofoam ball topped by a smaller one; U-shaped florist's fern pins hooked around the wrappers' twisted stems fix candies to base. In the windows, candy-motif ornaments.
6 Topiary trees of paper-wrapped candies grow on peppermint stalks in raffia flowerpots filled with candy pebbles. Styrofoam balls make the foliage bases; fern pins through wrappers anchor candies.
7 A candy basket woven of peppermint sticks and red licorice holds a mound of red, white, and pink candies to reward good children. At the window, candy-motif ornaments acquire translucency from the twinkling Italian tree lights.
8 Glass jars precisely lined, antipasto fashion, with rows and rows of candy stand on a large glass-topped coffee table laid with a runner of ribbon-candy-patterned vinyl. The capacious interiors of the large laboratory storage jars are stuffed with tissue paper.
9 A candy Christmas tree stands on a party buffet table and the dark wood gives an entirely different look to the ribbon-candy vinyl sheet that covers it. Coconut fruits and fondants make the tree; gumdrops make the taller tree on the table under the mirror. In both cases, the candies, most of them unwrapped, are speared to Styrofoam bases with toothpicks. Interior design by Rex Frey of Lord & Taylor.

Another special H&G collection to bring your house into bloom for Christmas

MEXICAN FANTASIES

A specialized and imaginative talent diverted to a new channel produced one of H&G's own collections of original Christmas decorations for 1965. We commissioned Mexican jewelry designer Humberto Arellano Garza to create for us from a traditional Mexican material—tin—a unique and captivating assembly of ornaments that would combine the exuberant gaiety of Latin-American folk art with the antique quality of tôle. Eschewing the usual bright primary colors, this gifted designer used muted tones and a flat finish which, while still in keeping with Christmas, make these decorations for all seasons—and immensely adaptable: you can group them or use them individually, link many of them by means of the little decorative chains that come with them, or combine them with other ornaments or with greenery.

H&G's Mexican tôle decorations fill a dining room with holiday exuberance. On the table, pineapple candleholders, large enough to hold their own with a sizable centerpiece, are supplemented by fruit decorations. Lily-studded lanterns stand on the console, and a third lantern, without a base, dangles from a pendant hooked to the curtain rod over the window. The swag ornament plus pendants and fruit decorations attached by chains embellish the garland of greens. You will find H&G's Mexican decorations at B. Altman & Co., New York; Joseph Magnin, California; Neiman-Marcus, Dallas.

You can use our gay tôle doves and fruits, mirrors and pendants in dozens of different ways—to swing from light fixtures, crown doors, stand in for paintings or book ends, or give fiesta gaiety to a holiday party (see pages 158 and 159). All the hanging decorations are lightweight enough (a virtue of tin) to be supported by removable Jiffy hangers applied to the wall, and the fruits, pendants, doves, swags, and mirrors can be hitched together in multiple combinations limited only by your ingenuity.

1 A crisply contemporary light fixture transformed into a romantic chandelier by a shower of fruits and pendants hooked to the inside ring that holds the bulb socket.

2 Lighting one end of a buffet table, a lantern with tôle lilies casually tucked into slots in its frame.

3 Decking a long, narrow pair of shutters, the scrolled medallion topped with a pair of doves and extended at the base with hooked-on pendants, doves, and fruit.

4 Crowning a mirror, the swag supplemented by a hanging pendant and three blue-green lilies.

5 On a glass-topped coffee table, a festive cluster of dove candlesticks and a dove-and-candle centerpiece. Behind it, the three-panel screen hides an empty fireplace.

6 Dove candlesticks standing in for book ends on a table-desk.

7 Brightening the setting for after-dinner coffee, a still life composed of fruit candlesticks and fruit decorations.

8 Sparkling centerpiece for a holiday supper table, three groups of fruit candlesticks and two bowls of Christmas balls on a bed of arborvitae laid on a scarlet runner.

9 Christmas replacement for a mirror over a sofa, the three-panel screen hung as if it were a painting. Fruit candlesticks liven the champagne tray; pendants and fruit are suspended from the molding of the wide doorway.

10 An overdoor (charming enough to be permanent) composed of the hanging plaque flanked by a pair of doves perched on the door frame. (For close-ups of shutters and tabletop, see 3 and 6, opposite page.)

11 On a fireplace shelf: one pineapple candlestick at each place set for a sit-on-the-floor supper; a pair of devoted doves nesting on the hearth itself; a sectional tree candelabrum hung with more doves and mirror ornaments.

12 Burst of color for Christmas Eve: on the chimney breast, a scrolled medallion hung with three long pendants and topped with a pair of doves and vivid feather-duster plumes; on the tree, more doves, more feathers (twisted into circlets) and the gifts themselves in bright wrappers. On the railing at the end of the sofa, tôle fruits growing on a garland of arborvitae. Interior design of all rooms by B. Altman & Co.

THE GLORIOUS WREATH

New designs you can make yourself to use in imaginative new ways

Decking the house with evergreens at the time of the winter solstice is an ancient tradition—a reassuring reminder that life continues to flourish even when the soil is hard and fruitless and trees are bare. Decking the victor's head with a wreath, the laurel wreath in particular, goes back to the Romans. But the latter-day blend of these two symbols—the evergreen wreath hung on the door of the house for Christmas—appears to be a native American tradition that has now spread to all parts of the western world.

As much as we treasure tradition, however, we also delight in imaginative variation, so this year, H&G brings to the Christmas wreath a host of new ideas, some pertaining to the way it is made, some to the way it is used. Here and on the next three pages is a collection of wreaths, all created for H&G by specialists in floral design. All are wreaths you can make yourself, or have your florist make for you. Or you can adapt our designs to your own ideas. For a wreath to be made of fresh evergreens, you can shape a foundation of chicken wire, or buy a wire wreath frame from the florist, fill it with dampened moss and wrap it with polyethylene wrap. Push the stems of the evergreens through the wrap into the damp moss and they will remain green for weeks. For the base of a wreath to be made of non-perishable materials you can use the Styrofoam circles which are readily found in small and medium sizes in most parts of the country. Larger Styrofoam bases, 24 inches in diameter, are also available in kits for making wreaths of more heroic proportions.

OTTO MAYA

A LUSCIOUS DELLA ROBBIA WREATH. left, makes a spectacular one-night garland for the holiday punch bowl. Flexible branches of newly cut hemlock and the stems of fresh cherries and grapes are fastened to the moss-filled wire base. The other fresh fruits are then set in place, wired wherever necessary to stabilize them. For a more permanent Della Robbia wreath, you could use artificial fruits, and to be authentically fifteenth century, you might make the wreath of laurel, either real or artificial. Designed by MacDonald Forbes.

NUTS, GRAPES, FROSTY HENS AND CHICKE opposite page, stud the arborvitæ wreath that girdles a handsome candela in Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Hammer's New York living room. Starting with the greens, everything is skewered with corsage pins to a Styrofoam base wrapped first with green velvet ribbon. Miniature wreaths circling the candleholders are made on little velvet-covered Styrofoam forms, and somewhat smaller fruits and trimmings are used to achieve the miniature effect. You could make this kind of wreath with fresh materials or artificial, or combination, depending upon which is more readily available. Designed by the Guy Butler Flower Gallery. Interior designer, Renny B. Saltzman.

THE GLORIOUS WREATH continu

1 PINE-CONE CHANDELIER reminiscent of the Scandinavian Santa Lucia wreaths sheds a holiday glow of candlelight on a library table. All the makings— Styrofoam base, pine cones, and ribbons—should first be dipped or sprayed with flameproofing liquid you can get at hardware or paint stores. Use florist's fern pins to attach the pine cones, between them tuck candle holders from the Five and Ten. If you cannot screw a stout hook into your ceiling to hold the chandelier, you could suspend it from a planted basket hanger or from the molding of a high wide doorway. Designed by Ralph Allen. Desk and decorative accessories from Doris Dessauer.

2 LIVING SUCCULENTS in a subtle range of greens and green-blues make the noble wreath that hangs in a niche in the New York living room of architects Judith and Richard Newman. The succulents will live through the holidays, can then be separated and potted. U-shaped fern pins are used to attach each of the tiny-rooted plants to well-moistened moss in a wire frame, left uncovered. Designed by Ellen Sheridan.

3 TISSUE-PAPER WREATHS in a rainbow of hues hang in Christmas-tree formation over Mr. and Mrs. Newman's Victorian marble fireplace. The paper is cut and folded into multi-layered wedges, then threaded onto a wire and ruffled open. (For complete directions, see page 209.) The finished wreaths are so light they hang securely on straight pins driven into the brick mortar. Tissue paper by Norcross.

4 FRAGRANT WREATHS OF DRIED HERBS combined with other dried materials make a festive addition to the planning corner of a kitchen. The Styrofoam base is covered with beige velvet ribbon and backed with a ruching to match. Wheat, pine cones, and seed pods help to give shape and additional dimension to the potpourri of herbs—dill, thyme, mustard, sage, bay leaves, and such. (If you can't grow and dry your own, you can buy them in bunches from Italian or Syrian grocers.) Designed by Stephen Barany.

5 A TRIO OF EVERGREEN WREATHS on the inside of a front door conveys good cheer to departing guests. The varying sizes of the circles and strong vertical of the ribbons accent the vari-sized door panels much more effectively than a single wreath, and the mixture of greens provides interesting shadings, texture, and fragrance. Designed and made by Stephen Barany.

6 NOSEGAYS OF TISSUE PAPER in glowing Mexican fiesta colors ring an entrance hall mirror, brighten the paneled wall behind. A single hoop of wire is all the base needed for these (for complete directions, see page 209), and the wreath may be hung by two nylon lines from the picture molding. Tissue paper by Norcross.

7 LOLLIPOPS, DOLLS, AND LITTLE TOYS turn glittery fake wreaths into supplements for the children's Christmas stockings. You can make the wreaths from a kit (see page 209); the removable gift-ornaments you provide yourself. Bows by Tie-Tie. Stove and furniture from Doris Des

COOKIE ART

A joyous Christmas tradition

Cookie baking in many homes is a joyous and fragrant pre-Christmas tradition. It can also be an art—a status officially recognized this year by the annual Christmas show at New York's Museum of Contemporary Crafts. For over two years the museum's staff has been tracking down the leads that enabled them to assemble well over a hundred decorative cookies, astonishing in their charm and variety. Some were baked to be eaten; others, often shaped in intricately carved antique wood molds, are inedible compositions designed solely to decorate or amuse. In Europe and South America, where some of the exhibits originated, cookies are part of a rich folklore, and cookie baking is an ancient folk art. The majority of the museum's prizes, however, are the happy experiments of Americans who baked them just for fun, modeling their creations from gingerbread or sugar-cookie dough as if it were sculptor's clay. But edible or inedible, all the cookies in the show contain a leavening of imagination which may inspire you with an irresistible urge to roll out the dough and try your own hand at this engaging art. If your results look too good to eat, you can save them for holidays to come by packing them in popcorn or paper and moth balls. Or, if they are made from non-fat dough, you can lacquer them to use as year-round ornaments.

1 Bright and festive boxes printed with multicolored kaleidoscope motifs will accommodate a variety of hard or soft and foldable objects. To the largest box we added multicolored foil ribbon, weaving it through strategic slits in the box top. We gave a flowerlike quality to the design on the orange box by adding paper petals inserted through slits in the box top and taped to the underside. To the smallest box we glued a generous handful of faceted "jewels" from the Five and Ten. Collapsible boxes come in a set of four.
2 "Snap-wraps" shape up in seconds, welcome odd-shaped gifts, lend themselves to all kinds of bedecking. A set of four comes with tissue paper, ribbons, and tags.
3 Marbleized paper-covered boxes, sturdy enough to save for storage, take on a holiday glow when treated to paste-on gilt paper ornaments. We chose golden paper sunbursts for the rectangular box, Father Christmas and a gilt snowflake for the oval, a Victorian dancing lady and gilt butterflies for the round. Boxes come in nests of the same shape—round, oval, or rectangular.
4 Long, shallow boxes, great for gloves and ties, present bright surfaces for scattered appliqués of diamonds, snowflakes, holly leaves. For extra pzzazz you might spray the motifs as we did, with silver, gold, or snow. Kit of four boxes in four colors includes gummed appliqués, tissue paper. Another kit contains three cans of fast-drying spray-on glitter.
5 A shopping bag stuffed with packages wrapped to match is an engaging and practical way to present a Christmas dinner guest (grandmother, cousin Edna, or the student nurse from Brazil) with gifts from everyone in the family. We added a binding of red tissue paper to the bag in mattress-ticking stripes, wrapped one of the gifts in red tissue, finished another with a spray of tinsel, threw in a lei of red and white tissue for good measure.
6 A cane-patterned bag bearing gifts wrapped in cane-patterned paper might be placed under the tree for a man guest. Extra touches: one package wrapped in silver foil; a home-lettered label trimmed with gold paper braid; a gold paper quill.
7 A tower of little boxes, each covered with a different Japanese paper, might enclose a series of small gifts destined for one lucky person, in which case you could bind them together with foil ribbon and top with a pre-tied bow. They come in a nest of ten.
8 Pert, bright origami-fold packets tidily wrap flat little gifts. Our additions: a ribbon sunburst sealed with a red gift card; phony honor medal topped with a foil-covered chocolate coin; a ribbon rose. Folding packets come in sets of six.
9 Saucy Saratoga trunk of corrugated cardboard is sturdy enough, large enough (10 by 12 inches by 15 inches deep) for small appliances, toys. Lined with fleur-de-lis paper, it comes collapsed.
10 Gaudy colored tins printed with lacy black frame for your own handwritten labels make stout containers for candies, cookies, anything perishable. We added a pair of shiny tassels plus a tiny Christmas ball to the orange tin. We glued to the lid of the mauve tin a paper honeycomb ball (and carefully cushioned the jar of honey with protective Bubble Wrap paper), and topped the azalea tin with a Japanese paper nest of Christmas balls. On the green tin, we ringed the label space with glued-on Christmas balls, completely covered the lid with matching balls, and crowned it with a fountain—an upturned tassel, spread open, topped with a ball.

Four holiday parties to give tradition a new sparkle

The traditions of Christmas are uncountable, and almost any of them could spark a party. But it is the imaginative little changes and flourishes made with each repetition that keeps a tradition alive. A party based on a tried-and-true theme is the warmer, the merrier, for the addition of an unfamiliar twist, while the rituals of other times, other lands offer the prospect of parties that are both truly traditional and refreshingly new. Whether you are planning a late-evening gala for adults or an early-hour feast for three generations, you can assure its liveliness by taking a fresh tack. You might begin with a very special kind of decoration—or motif or color—and let it ordain either the menu itself or the way you present the food. You might start with one spectacular dish and proceed from there. Or you might plan your party around an activity—dancing, or music-making, or a traditional Christmas game—and let the nature of the frolic be your guide. Starting here are complete plans for four Christmas parties, each inspired by a different idea. H&G's Christmas ornaments set the scene for two of them, and in our Holiday Party Cook Book, see page 187, you will find the menus for all four—plus ideas for their presentation.

Christmas dinner: a candy fantasy

Candy, the delight of all ages, is the sweet-tooth theme for a family dinner party at Mr. and Mrs. Renny B. Saltzman's. Star of the show is a spectacular centerpiece built of nothing more esoteric than a peck of candy canes, some lollipops, and an armature. The armature, in this case, is a gilt and crystal epergne, its center bowl heaped with a beautiful coxcomb of canes anchored in Styrofoam, its little flower holders filled with lollipops. More candy canes are hung like orderly coat hangers around the collar that supports the vases. Since epergnes differ, you may have to devise different ways to hang and plant your sweets, but you will have no difficulty with the little strawberry bouquets tucked into the napkins. Each consists of an egg-size piece of Styrofoam covered with paper-wrapped strawberry candies anchored by florist's fern pins (piercing their wrappers) and sprigged with artificial leaves. Looking almost as edible, the place mats are the largest of H&G's candy [illegible]d collection of ornaments (see page 140), and the window plaques are a cross-section of smaller sizes. Made of infinitely sounder stuff than candy are the Richard-Ginori china, [illegible]llace sterling, and Belgian linen by Matouk. For shopping information, turn to page 200.

Twelfth night party, north of the Rio Grande

In commemoration of the frankincense, gold, and myrrh-bearing Magi, Twelfth night in Mexico is called Día de los Reyes—the Day of the Kings. It is a gift-giving day (not much gold, but lots of toys), a party-giving day, and an inspired time (January 6) to entertain traditionally, yet differently. For a north-of-the-border party, H&G has devised a fête around the delightful decorations designed for us by Humberto Arellano Garza (see page 144), plus an extraordinary menu, and the Mexican dessert known as Rosca de Reyes—king's cake. In this luscious concoction a tiny china figure of the Holy Infant is hidden away as a prize, and tradition has it that the finder must give a party on February 2—poetic justice in the Mexican manner. On the firelit table, above, the king's cake is watched over by Diautaud's sculpture in iron (La Sirene, a voodoo sea goddess) supplemented for the occasion by H&G's pagoda-like Mexican lanterns decked with tin flowers. Lacking Sirene, you could hang the lanterns just as elegantly around a mirror or a large painting.

n the window, like a pear tree with a partridge, H&G's Mexican three-section candelabrum, hung h our Mexican dove and rrors, sits in a bower of ferns, , and cachepots planted with rican-violets (a gentle ange from the lordly insettia). On the table, r four-dove candlestick nterpiece has grown a little rden of flowers borrowed m our Mexican lanterns, posite page. Oval pottery ates on oval stainless steel rvice plates make a pleasant iptical change in tableware apes, as do square es used for butter plates. nsk stainless flatware, aser's service plates. r shopping information, rn to page 200.

welfth nighters help themselves, buffet-fashion, to Pollo Mestizo—chicken and sausages mulled in pine-pple juice and white wine; uacamole, the velvety avocado lip garnished with the pits to eep the color limpidly lime, nd an acre of tortillas waiting o be wrapped around two aucy stuffings, one sweet, one ot as Popocatepetl. For complete menu and recipes, see page 194.

Supper for sixteen dancers

ECKERT

Come Yule in Santa Barbara, Calif., friends of artist Jack Baker and his wife lie awake nights wondering which of the Bakers' handful of Christmas parties they will be bid to. Last year, a lucky sixteen came to supper after a dance and stayed until cockcrow. The lure, besides music and food, was color—swacks of it which began in the hall, left, picked up speed in the living room, above right, and ended in the dining room with four tables, each set in a different way. ("They have to be," says Mrs. Baker. "We haven't got sixteen of anything.") The great hall wreath, hung like a mobile, was made of twigs curved into a hoop and set blooming with papier-mâché flowers made by the Bakers and their children. Glorious as Solomon, the tree was hung with folding paper ornaments from India and Africa and was guarded by two trumpeting angels (one on each window valance) which were once part of the trappings of an Indian marionette theatre. The table centerpieces were local products—bowls of flowers modeled in terra cotta by Mr. Baker, then painted. Table mats, too, were Baker-made: cardboard copies of Indian fans of the kind, the Bakers say, that houris in Paradise use to swat hummingbirds. What did the dancers have for supper? See page 191.

New Year's revel in black and white

POT-ADES

Op art, gayest of the seven current lively arts, can make a great motif for a party, particularly one to celebrate the American Walpurgisnacht known as New Year's Eve. Since no New Year's Eve would be wor its salt without balloons. here they are, hung upside-down like a wonderful cluster of black and white a trick possible only because the balloons are weighed down by slipcovers. (With the help of a kit and instructions you do the upholstery yourself, and if you prefer orange and pink or green and blue to black and white, you may have them.) Suspended on lengths of rickrack braid, the balloons make an airborne centerpiece for a black and whi buffet: op art tablecloth, white china, white milk-glass goblets wearing eyelet napkins like breastpocket handkerchiefs, and food that is as close to black and white as James Beard, H&G's gastronomic mentor, could devis (see page 189 for the menu). The cubist study, top, left, is made of bread. Below it is a pot of rillettes of goose inlaid with black olives, and, left, a platter of Italian sausage called cotechino and a bowl of tapenade, an aromatic dunk of olives and anchovies for raw vegetables. For shopping information, see page 200.

CHRISTMAS

"We've got to have a tree," my sister told me seriously. "She said so." "She" was the teacher at the little British-run school in the town in north-central India where we lived when my sister was about nine, and I was nearly six. "She" had been teaching us about Christmas, but I was a most inattentive student, ill-at-ease and dreamy, waiting only for the closing bell to ring and signal my release from the uncomfortably alien atmosphere of school. The stories about shepherds and mangers were altogether too remote to register very clearly in the way "she" told them, but in my sister's version Christmas seemed a most exotic festival with all kinds of magic involved in the preparations. Normally, December was simply a bright, sunny month, very dusty (the monsoon rains wouldn't break until mid-June), distinguished only by the fact that under the English system all schoolchildren had Christmas holidays. That year my sister and I decided to celebrate Christmas ourselves and find out why it was such a special occasion.

"She said it ought to be a fir tree," my sister continued thoughtfully, as though she were reciting a ritual of great precision.

"A fur tree," I repeated, very pleased with the mental image this produced. It seemed reasonable enough. After all, in a country where they had snow (which I had never seen, although I knew it was cold and white and fell from the clouds), they might well have fur trees to survive such a barbaric climate.

"And then we have to put lights and things on it."

"What things?"

"Oh, all different things. Decorations."

Well—trees, in general, were no particular problem. We had quite a large garden with plenty of shade trees near the house, a small grove of eucalyptus with beautiful, silvery leaves and a sharp, clean smell, which grew along a narrow brook, totally dry at that time of year. There were mangoes, guavas, and bananas in the orchard, and we examined them all diligently, but none of them, my sister assured me, looked at all like the Christmas trees she had seen in the pictures her class had been shown. Accordingly, we went in search of the gardener and presented our problem to him. He was a cantankerous old man, an excellent gardener in the tradition of his family, and like them, he never traveled beyond the Indian plains. He looked at us as if we had lost our wits. "You want a what?" he asked.

My sister described a Christmas tree as best she could. It should have short needles, not leaves. It should be sort of cone-shaped. It shouldn't have any flowers. He shook his head unbelievingly. He didn't know of any such tree. However, we could look around the part of the garden [illegible] beyond the more delicate shrubs and flowers and where he usually didn't let us run about or play ball. If we did find anything approaching my sister's description, he would like to see it. Just watch out for snakes, that's all.

As an afterthought, he asked, "What do you want the tree for?"

"We want to cut it down and take it inside."

"Inside the house? A tree inside the house?"

"Yes, to decorate," my sister explained with spirit. "It's part of an English festival. You wouldn't understand," she added loftily.

Clearly he didn't understand, but he made no attempt to probe this baffling foreign eccentricity. All he did was give us a lecture about whatever kind of tree we found we shouldn't think we had his permission to cut it down, after all the trouble he took to keep the garden green and shady, we came along wanting to cut down his trees and ruin his work, and did we know how long it took to grow a tree and on and on. We knew he meant what he said, but went ahead enthusiastically with our tree-hunt, anyway.

Late that morning, our determination to have a Christmas tree undiminished, but having exhausted all other possibilities, we compromised on something between a tree and a bush that we thought would have to do. It must, I think, have been some kind of a tamarisk; anyway, it had clusters of exceedingly narrow, feathery leaves on slender, grayish branches. It was rather too rounded in shape and a bit bedraggled, but we felt that it had the advantage of a good location. It was on the edge of our garden, next to the road, and while this made it rather dustier than some of the other trees, still, since we weren't allowed to cut it down, at least we could share it with passers-by, and that was how a festival should be.

Our next complication was one of decorations, and that, in turn, called for some ingenuity. Of course, Christmas ornaments weren't sold in the shops of the town, and we didn't know anyone who might have some of his own. In India, on festive occasions, you illuminate your house with rows of tiny oil lamps—just cotton wicks in earthenware bowls of oil—set along window sills and outlining the edge of the roof. These were obviously impractical for our tree. On the floors of the rooms and on the threshold of the house, on religious holidays, you make intricate, formal designs with colored powders to welcome visitors and bless the house. A Christmas tree, however, presented a different sort of decorative challenge.

Indians use tinsel a great deal—woven into the garlands that a bride and groom exchange during a wedding service, or mixed in with the flowers of a devotional offering in a shrine—but to us it didn't seem entirely appropriate for our tree. We connected it too strongly with the glittering silver and gold ribbons my grandmother used to hang, like necklaces, around the pictures of Hindu deities in her house. Equally, flowers, which she placed along with fruit, coconut, and rice, in front of the image in her prayer room, seemed to belong too definitively to Hindu ceremonies. I associated the golden marigolds, which grew all year-round, only with the faint, smoky smell of incense and the light sound of her voice singing the morning hymns. It didn't seem quite right to mix up religious customs and use Hindu decorations on a Christmas tree. So, tinsel and flowers were, in our figuring, out.

Ultimately, we settled on balloons for our ornaments. Usually we had balloons only at birthday parties, and that seemed to us most correct both in style and feeling. Christmas is, indeed, a birthday, and balloons, we knew, would be easy to find. There was always a man selling them on the outskirts of the bazaar. This involved us in a brief excursion to the center of town. The toy shop was an open-fronted, tin-roofed shack, surrounded by dozens of similar stalls selling cotton saris, sandals, fruit, vegetables, glass bangles—every necessary for ordinary day-to-day living. On other visits to the bazaar we were always captivated by the brightly painted wooden elephants, tigers, and buffaloes, the piles of basketwork rattles, miniature carts, hobbyhorses, the kites, windmills, and the tiny birds that pecked when you pulled a string. That day we concentrated on the man crouched on the road in the shade of the toy shack, holding great bouquets of his dancing bubbles.

For the first and only time in my life, we bought one entire, marvelous bunch of balloons and with hysterical exhilaration, we managed to push our unruly purchase into the family car. Almost helpless with laughter and anxiety, we wriggled about keeping the balloons from floating out of the windows into the growing heat of the day. Our harrassed chauffeur drove as if there were some kind of animal of uncertain temper in the seat behind him. Ducking frequently to avoid the balloons bumping gently against the back of his head (to the intense amusement and interest of the bazaar crowd) he steered the car carefully away, and took us home at not much more than a walking pace.

By lunch time we thought we had done a pretty creditable job of tying the many-colored balloons on our tree, with an amber one shining and almost golden at the very top. The little tamarisk was bouncing with them, and in the brilliant Indian sunlight looked, anyway, different and cheerful if not precisely Christmas-y. We rushed into the house to call our mother out to see our splendid achievement. Triumphantly, we summoned all the servants. Even the gardener and his wife and children gathered at the tree, caught in curiosity about this unprecedented departure from the usual household routine. By then they all knew that our activity had something to do with school, but weren't, I suppose, quite sure whether it was some mysterious sort of homework, and therefore worthy of respect, or just a childish prank—a silly waste of time, effort, and balloons.

People walking by on the street outside stopped to stare—barefoot villagers coming back from market, office-workers in loose white shirts, carrying huge black umbrellas, on their way home to lunch, the usual groups of ragged, half-naked children. A couple of women in pink and purple saris halted their horse-drawn carriage to look at our tree. I dare say it made quite a remarkable sight, that undistinguished bush suddenly alive with inexplicably jolly balloons in the blazing midday of an ordinary Indian town.

Everyone gazed in astonished silence for a while, unable to decide whether it was a moment for congratulation or alarm. My sister and I had expected a more enthusiastic response. I had hoped that when we had completed the prescribed ritual for decorating a Chrismas tree, something splendid and thrilling would happen. I was beginning to feel a bit disappointed with so tame an ending to our energetic morning's work.

Then it happened—with a noise that made us all gasp with surprise. In the burning intensity of the sun, one by one, our balloons burst. The first one, my favorite amber, popped with a startling report like a pistol shot. Then another. And another. I waited breathlessly, giddily guessing in my head which would go next. Bang followed bang at quick, irregular intervals until, a few minutes later, only dozens of pathetically limp fragments of dead rubber were left on the tree.

I think my mother was somewhat concerned that we might be bitterly disheartened by the fiasco our brave experiment turned out to be, but I, at least, was delighted by the way our Christmas tree had lived up to its promise of excitement. I can still remember the entranced faces of the servants' children and the kids on the road as balloon after balloon exploded with such a satisfactory and wildly festive noise, and the equally festive and satisfied squeals that accompanied each explosion. I still think that, for totally unforeseen reasons, it captured much of the wonder and gaiety of Christmas—and, with perfect timing, the kind of magic I had hoped for.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Journalist, novelist, and playwright Santha Rama Rau was born in India, is a Wellesley graduate, and now lives in a New York City brownstone. The wife of H&G's music consultant, Faubion Bowers, and mother of a thirteen-year-old son, she is as familiar with the customs and the pageants of the West as with those of the East where she spent much of her childhood. Recalled from those enchanted years is this Christmas anecdote which so vividly translates an occidental tradition into an Indian idiom.

Fernery has all the happy connotations of the word greenery and a few more besides. Fernery is itself an almost onomatopoetic term, calling to mind, if not remembered sounds, at least visual intimations of greenness, coolness, delicacy, and the utmost grace. Ferns are good garden plants, as enthusiasts who make a specialty of rock, bog, and wild plantings know. They are also, in simply enormous variety, fine plants for growing indoors. The plants and the arrangements for two bay windows on these two pages and the following were planned by H&G with the collaboration of James Fanning. Alfred Byrd Graf of Julius Roehrs Company advised on the selection of varieties. In each of our imaginary windows, the pots are set in a shallow tray of waterproof plywood partially filled with vermiculite and river-washed pebbles in order to maintain the humidity that is a vital need of almost all ferns

Ferns are among the world's oldest plants and, with the mosses, once dominated the open land spaces. Many ferns continue to play a great variety of parts in gardens and indoor plant arrangements as well as in their native mountains, fields, and bogs. They are as conspicuously beautiful, dainty, or spectacular today as they were all those millennia ago. Not all the modern counterparts are easily come by in the florist shops, but a commercial greenhouse of any pretensions will carry most of the commonest or most durable varieties, opposite page. Many of the rarer and more notably exotic types can also be found, if you are willing to seek them out. Some of both are combined in our window tray, above. These might be called, for want of a more precise term, the "ferny" ferns, since all but one or two (such as the great shield of the staghorn fern at far left) display the most feathery foliage of the whole realm of spore plants. Some have roots as unusual, if not as beautiful, as the fronds. At least one, the tree fern, cibotium menziesii, could become a great tree. For more about ferns, see Gardener's Month, page 212.

Where spring lives all year

A refreshing example of the rare house that can brook the four seasons yet always be "on" is Mr. and Mrs. George L. Coleman's in Palm Beach, Fla. Two factors account for its year-round ebullience: the way it is furnished and decorated and the way it is lived in. A very good example of the English Regency style in architecture, the house was purchased by the Colemans about seven years ago along with a certain amount of furniture—far from enough, some of it interesting, none of it antique. The question that the Colemans passed along to their interior designers, McMillen, Inc., was how to use the "found" furniture, what to add, and how to wrap up the mixture in an ambiance that would spell permanent springtime.

Except for glassing in a huge porch (and turning it into the most used room in the house), no major architectural changes were made. But with infinite patience and searching, one fine antique after another was hunted down until the house was completely furnished with English, French, Chinese, and contemporary pieces, all in enormous rapport against a Regency background. The mood of a twelve-month spring was maneuvered with great sweeps of white, lots of green and yellow, and, in some rooms, with quasi flower beds of bright floral prints.

Yet in no sense does the house look tropical. It would seem as natural in Maine or Michigan as it is in Florida. And the Colemans live in it the year-round, leaving only when the summer's heat drives them north in their boat or winter snows lure them north to ski (both are as ardent as Olympians). They love music and have piped their hi-fi through the whole house. Mrs. Coleman is a gifted gardener and keeps every room loaded with greenery and, when she can manage it, her favorite flowers—orchids and lilies. She is also a gifted hostess, and makes a point of never serving meals to her house guests in the same spot twice in a day. Six to eight people can lunch or dine in the loggia (the old porch), and twenty can sit down to dinner in the dining room. A really big party begins with drinks on the seaside terrace, then flows through the dining room into the loggia, out onto an upper terrace, and down to a third beside the swimming pool. As an old friend and perennially delighted guest remarked, it is a house that, for obvious reasons, should be called "Infinite Variety."

The loggia is verdant with foliage, man's and nature's

In the loggia, left and opposite page, the use of black and white plus green and a bit of yellow does much to make odd bedfellows seem not odd at all. Antiques and contemporary pieces sit side by side without a sign of disparity. Unifying, calming white walls, floor, upholstery, and fern-patterned curtains are the catalysts, cool companions for the vivid rat-a-tat of zebra rugs, black lacquer, and two marvelous sofa cushions—pansy beds captured in chintz. The louvered doors at the end of the room screen a bar. Beyond the paneled door lies the kitchen.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY GRISBY

The living room, although more formal than the loggia, is no less vernal. All of the upholstered furniture came with the house, and all of it was promptly re-covered in a lambent Fortuny print—a sophisticated background for Siamese silk pillows the color of a tiny new fern. The antiques, mostly tables, are set in strategic spots—none more serviceably than two black lacquer Chinese taborets used to serve a pair of facing sofas, in lieu of the usual cocktail table. Painting over the mantel is a Cavaille, the one over the console, a Bardone.

In the dining room, the golds of the living room are echoed by the Italian cotton curtains, deepened in the suede-covered chairs, and augmented with bits of brown in a new rug woven in Spain. In this room, too, diverse styles of furniture are paired with aplomb. The chairs and lacquered table with its beautiful brass pedestals are French and contemporary. French, too, but centuries older are the Régence console and mirror, gilded to a fare-thee-well. Oldest of all, and cool as a piece of ivory amid all this dazzling sunniness, is the dragon-bordered screen of ancient lacquer.

In the guest bedroom, tulips nod, butterflies dance

In the guest bedroom, two enchanting fabrics put a clutch of "found" furniture (perfectly good, not very exciting) right on cloud nine. Windows and beds prove that no flower is as fresh as a tulip—especially a bouquet printed in a primavera gamut of pink, yellow, and deep rose on a white background. On an armchair and the chaise longue, rows of pale yellow butterflies are outlined in stitching. Everything is here to delight and comfort a guest: a deep-piled Spanish rug woven as a blessing to bare feet—even a hair dryer and a closet shelf full of amusing straw sun hats to wear to the pool.

CHESSBOARD-BOX

EASY-TO-MAKE

CHESS set

To win at chess is not easy for a rank amateur, but to make this winning chess set is surprisingly simple, even for a child. All you need is a collection of empty spools of different shapes and sizes; a variety of unpainted wood drawer pulls such as you can buy at lumber or hardware stores (wood buttons might be substituted); and four wood spoons rescued from coffee containers to serve as shields for the knights. You stack the spools and the drawer pulls—turning some up, some down, to create a distinctive shape for each type of piece—and glue them together with Liquitex gel medium glue which you can get at an art supply store. Then you paint each team—king, queen, two bishops, two rooks, two knights, eight pawns—with Liquitex artists' colors in a distinctive pattern. To make a board with a storage compartment for the men you will need two sheets of ¼-inch plywood, 24 inches square, and two deep-scoop picture frames to fit them. (Or you can make your own frames: for each one, join four mitered lengths of picture molding, 24 inches on the inside, with tiny picture nails.) Mark off one board into 3-inch squares. Paint alternate squares black; color the others with red Crayola crayon and buff hard for permanence. Rub the frames and bottom board with red Crayola crayon, and buff. Glue chessboard, right side out, to the back of one frame; plain plywood to the back of the other. Join the frames with a hinge on one side and a clasp on the opposite side. Line the box with felt. You can make a family project of collecting spools from relatives and friends, but if you despair of saving enough fast enough (we used 74 spools, 62 pulls), you can order H&G's spool assortment from Austen Display, Inc. For shopping information, turn to page 200.

Five famous artists in their PERSONAL BACKGROUNDS

An artist is a person with a constellation of special gifts, and for those of us who are constantly nourished by those gifts, the life of the artist at home has tremendous fascination. The personal setting created by someone with a passion for interpreting life in a visual way can be a highly stimulating source of ideas. We are stimulated, too, by the artist's boldness: a painter or sculptor asks no one whether his rooms are successful, because to the true artist personal conviction is essential. Recently H&G visited five famous artists at home. We discovered that they live in surroundings that range all the way from Spartan austerity to extraordinary sumptuousness. Yet, with or without intention, their personal backgrounds subtly reflect the spirit of their respective work.

GEORGIA O'KEEFFE

"The only reason I don't want to die," says Georgia O'Keeffe, "is because I would never see this country again." The country she is in love with is an awesome, austere, dramatically colored land of mountains and mesas forty miles northwest of Santa Fe, N. M. There in the remote hilltop village of Abiquiu, Miss O'Keeffe lives in an old adobe house she restored from near ruins. A complex of flat-roofed, one-story buildings and sunny walled courtyards, the place is permeated with the echoes of time. Weathered board doors on great iron hinges punctuate the thick outside walls. But wherever Miss O'Keeffe wanted a better view of the green Rio Chama Valley she did not hesitate to open up those same walls with large modern windows. Nature on a grand scale is the subject of most of her paintings; nature's materials and nature's effects fill her house. Comfortable, straightforward, well-ordered, her rooms reflect the quiet confidence of a woman who wants "neither an Indian house, nor a Spanish house—just my house." There are relatively few pictures on her walls, relatively few objets d'art. She does not collect art; she collects stones, portable pieces of the country she loves. Polished smooth by time and river waters, black, white, or veined with color, the beautifully shaped stones she gathers on rigorous "rocking" expeditions are displayed all over the house.

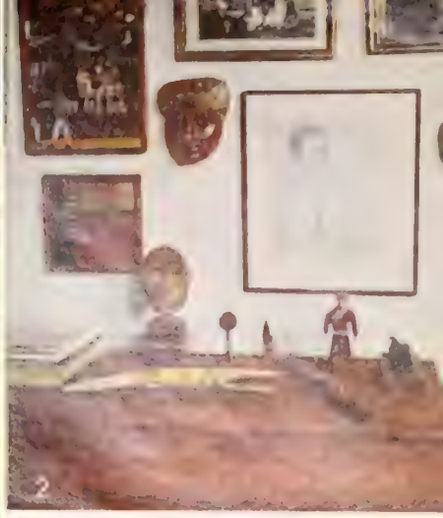
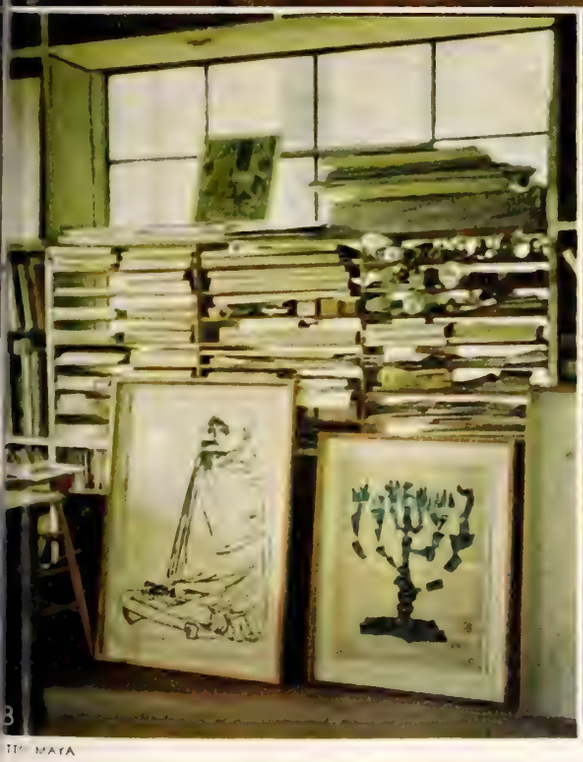
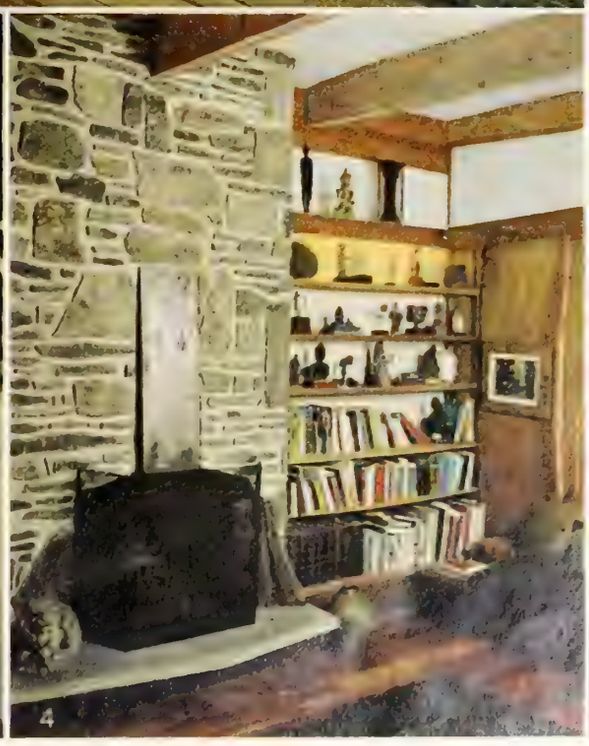
4. Window was recently enlarged for better view of favorite cottonwood tree. On left wall, a large O'Keeffe: cloud formations seen from the air. 9. Small door cut into larger double door leading to covered passage and courtyard. 10. Casual arrangement of driftwood and rocks on living room coffee table. Open space below is partly paved with tile; smaller masonry pier, actually a chimney, contains a fireplace where the Shahns cook supper in summer. 2. Ben Shahn relaxes at luncheon table comfortably placed by a sunny window. 3. Dining room is a genial blend of eating room, library, art gallery. Nakashima made the chairs and the spindle-backed slice-of-a-tree-trunk bench-table. Mr. Shahn himself made the dining table near which stands unusually fine Siamese Buddha. 4. Against a few square feet of dining room wall is displayed a typically wide-ranging group of prints and sculpture including a Leonard Baskin print, a Daumier, a Roman head, a Portuguese santo, a Rembrandt etching, and, a small Kearns sculpture.





BEN SHAHN



For over twenty-five years, painter Ben Shahn and his artist-writer wife, Bernarda Bryson, have lived in a modest one-story stucco house in Roosevelt, a general-store town in rural New Jersey. Here they have worked at their separate professions (Mrs. Shahn's special interest is art history), brought up five children, three of whom are now artists themselves, and assembled an extraordinary collection of antique sculpture as well as drawings, prints, paintings. The house is part of a village built during the Thirties for a group of garment workers. Mr. Shahn had designed the mural for the community's schoolhouse, was taken with the place, and a few years later, when outsiders were admitted, decided to move there. Since then, the little house has been ex-

In the studio, a whole wall of varied storage surrounds a wide window, goes straight across its lower half. 4. Living room fireplace and chimney breast is a masterpiece of craftsmanship—each stone specially selected and laid according to a pre-designed pattern, the metal hood gently slanted back to the masonry. 5. banded by a wing planned by the artist's good friend, designer-craftsman George Nakashima. Elevated on masonry piers to second-story level, t gave the Shahns a big sunny new living room and in the unwalled space beneath, a sheltered outdoor dining room.

The deep interest in "the state of man" that illumines Shahn's work glows, too, in his personal background. Casual, comfortable, much-ived-in, the house clearly reflects the tastes of art-loving, book-loving people. The Shahns insist, however, that the furnishings and arrange-ment of their rooms were wholly fortuitous. But, intentionally or not, the house also reflects a facet of Mr. Shahn's talent that is especially narked in his drawings and illustrations: his sense of the ornamental. The wealth of beautifully grained wood, the play of natural textures, he choice of furniture (including many superbly handcrafted pieces by Nakashima), and above all the beautifully composed arrangements of pictures, sculpture and even working materials—all reveal the artist's special sensitivity to the details of his immediate environment.

1. Across one corner of the purple-walled living room stands a screenlike Nevelson sculpture. On the floor below the window, a collection of unstrung violin bows in an American Indian basket. 2. Sitting at her glass dining table, Mrs. Nevelson chats with a guest. Sculpture behind her is sprayed gold, smaller ones on table with matte black. 3. Against a wall of exposed brick are African carvings and artifacts, and a shelf of American Indian pottery. 4. Hall between the living room and dining room is lined with another sculpture.

LOUISE NEVELSON

An unforgettably vital and serious woman, Louise Nevelson lives in a Kafka-like fortress dedicated to her work. Visitors to the old-fashioned five-story house near New York's Chinatown are admitted through a grilled door, and their ascent up the stairs is a dramatic preparation for the impact of the rooms above. On the landings are enormous pieces of the artist's sculpture: compositions of found objects of wood (chair legs, finials, moldings, "a few pieces of De Kooning's house"), mounted in boxlike frames, usually stacked to form walls. On the third floor where the artist receives callers, the furniture consists of a dining table and chairs, a Chinese cabinet, a wooden armchair, three big floor cushions, for through the years Mrs. Nevelson has eliminated everything that seemed to her unnecessary or extraneous. But everywhere, against the walls and on the floors, stand her sculpture and cases of her prints. Louise Nevelson's personal background is her art.

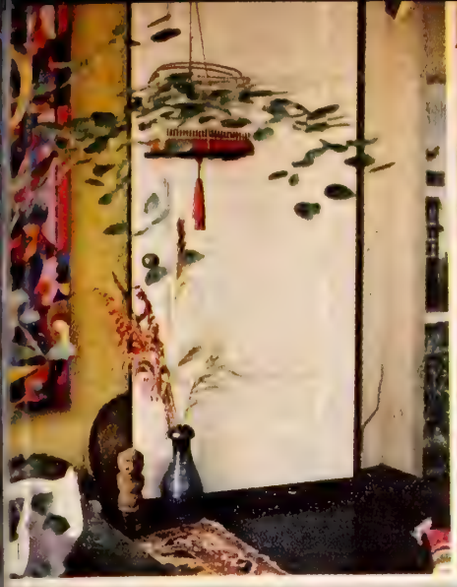
1. Over the fireplace, from a blue-painted cord, hangs a single picture, a Morandi pencil sketch. As precisely placed against the tall chimney breast as any element in a Stamos painting, it leads the eye inevitably to the group of small-to-tiny sculpture at the end of the otherwise bare mantel. 2. Mr. Stamos sits with his back to a short wall covered with his favorite prints and drawings. Built-in window shutters are painted vivid yellow. 3. Two Stamos paintings dominate a corner furnished with treasures of wildly diverse provenance: a Majorelle Art Nouveau lamp, a signed Majorelle table, Belter chairs, an early Mies van der Rohe table, Bokhara saddlebags stuffed to make floor cushions.

THEODOROS STAMOS

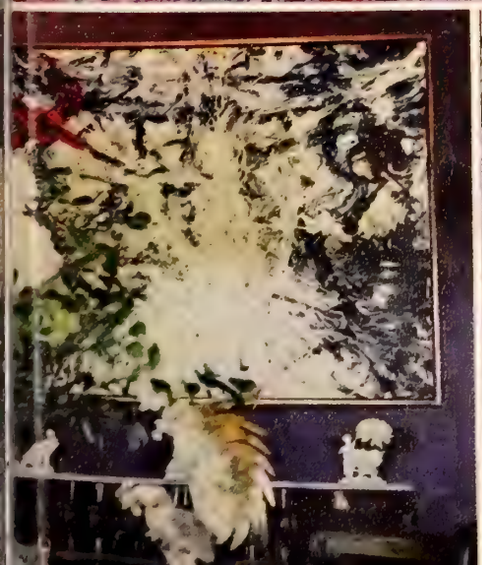
No Greek can avoid blue, yellow, and white, explains Stamos. The tricolor palette predominant in the work of this painter, who was born in New York of Greek parents, is predominant also in his personal environment. You first come across the blue on the front door of his gray-painted brick Victorian house on a quiet side street west of New York's Central Park. You meet it again in his white-walled living room, accompanied by accents of yellow. And here you recognize other qualities that distinguish the painter's work—his economy of means, the elimination of everything not truly important. Nothing has been allowed to obscure the room's handsome architectural details: generously scaled moldings, a beautiful parquet floor with a marquetry ribbon border. The furnishings are sparse, but each of them is a collector's piece, and the deftness with which they are arranged produces a unified look.



1. Alfonso Ossorio sits among a profusion of wicker furniture, birds in cages, plants, and hanging baskets in the small tropical sitting room he calls the bird room. Over his head, one of his panels that resemble three-dimensional mosaics is carefully hung to catch the light. 2. His white-walled, white-curtained bedroom is austerely furnished, its only color the Oriental rugs and the bright Early American throw on the bed. On the bookshelf headboard is a group of New Mexican santos, and under the glass bell, a Philippine ivory figure of the Virgin with real hair and a cloak of richly embroidered satin. 3. Through iron railing of a second-floor balcony at the back of the house, you can look down on the railed terrace on top of the boathouse. 4. The guest room windows are hung with silk curtains gathered, in eighteenth-century French style, into balloon-like tiers, tied with cord and tassel, stuffed with paper

ALFONSO OSSORIO

The large tile-roofed, mullion-windowed villa where Alfonso Ossorio lives on the edge of Georgica Pond in East Hampton, Long Island is called "The Creeks." Built at the turn-of-the-century for muralist Albert Herter, it astonishes arriving visitors with such Edwardian flourishes as an entrance pergola thick with climbing roses and polychromed in the Greek style, a fountain set in a concrete basin embellished with painted motifs. But these give only a hint of the opulence within. Ossorio's art is assemblage—panels dancing with colors, textures, translucents, opaques, the components themselves fascinatingly complex, the total effect one of extraordinary richness. His house expresses a passion for accumulation, an exuberance of detail. An expert would spend months cataloguing the contents: an exceptionally fine collection of paintings by Dubuffet, another collection of Jackson Pollocks, and, in addition, Oriental rugs, a Pleyel piano and other antique musical instruments, Spanish ironwork, Victorian furniture, antique portières, old crystal, Hindu bronzes, New Mexican santos, Rose Medallion china, Philippine craftwork. The arrangements change constantly, for this is no static museum. But each object, large or small, is so carefully placed that the nervous clutter such a diversity of treasures might be expected to produce is nowhere to be found



1. On another wall of the bird room, an early Ossorio. 2. On studio wall, the artist's "palette," an orderly array of artifacts to be used in his panels. 3. More palettes: a bowl of stock-pot bones, bundles of glass dolls' eyes. 4. Over the gray carpet in almost every room, a steady parade of Oriental rugs. Screening light fixture in hall, a wire sculpture by Claire Falkenstein. 5. As you come in front door: flowers piled on ledge below an Ossorio. 6. In dining room, a Regency walnut credenza with mirrored doors; on table, an old American glass compote, an eighteenth-century Portuguese vermeil rooster. 7. Against dining room wall, two nineteenth-century teakwood chairs from the Philippines. 8. In music room, a diversified mélange: American Empire sofa, peel chairs, tatami-topped table, handsome Waterford crystal compotes.

Two musical jewels written when a

Music and Christmas. Christmas and music. The connection is infrangible. The ear of the heart listens at this time of year, much as the mind's eye turns toward snow, fir, Magi, and manger. To hear Christmas hymns out of season is jarring, yet the first carol of this month instantly puts a catch in your breath. Perhaps our childhood—adult life they say, only repeats memories—determines this tenacious association of music and Christmastide. Almost any of us can whistle something from The Messiah, and people who are musically soundless for the rest of the year will join at some point these days in "Joy to the World" or its equivalent. Yes, Christmas and music go together like a reindeer and sleigh.

No music in Christendom today more aptly celebrates or more splendidly evokes the spirit of Christ and his season than those two medieval jewels—The Play of Daniel and The Play of Herod. These are masterpieces of ancient beauty—in story, in action, in the music of song, chorus, and instruments. They are operas of sorts, crude, primitive, even inchoate, for they are the very beginning of our Western music as we know it. Yet their original profundity of soul and manner resounds and endures in today's performances by the singers, actors, and instrumentalists of New York Pro Musica, that distinguished organization of a dozen artists directed by Dr. Noah Greenberg.

The Middle Ages, usually reckoned from the end of the old empire of Rome in the fifth century to the discovery of the New World in the fifteenth, were a dark period in history. For all that, three forms of drama with integrated and abundant music inched into light —the mystery, the miracle, and the morality plays. Oldest of these are the mysteries, and they are still extant in fragmentary texts and vague but reconstructible music. At a later date, these drama forms employed the spoken language of the people and dealt with heroes and villains of thoroughly mortal flesh. But during the Middle Ages the mysteries were acted and sung in Latin, a language incomprehensible to all but the learned. The stories were all Biblical, and the venue was the Church itself.

The word "mystery" meant a religious service, and not something "unknowable" as it means now. The Church's central concern then as now was to keep faith aflame in the hearts of the people. The means of propagating Christianity or, as one medieval document gracelessly puts it, "fortifying the faith of the unlettered vulgar," was to imprint the Bible's inspiration indelibly on the minds of men and at the same time to delight them. Church music-dramas were the happy solution, and one of their most favored stories, rendering clear the highest holy message, was the birth of Christ Himself. Few events have been recited, retold, and re-enacted throughout history with more vigorous emotional and esthetic acclamation.

Monks, priests, clerics, nuns worked within their monasteries and convents composing these artistic texts and accompanying music. For them, this was an act of piety, and so were the performances. Even personages of bishop rank participated. The Gothic cathedrals all over Europe opened their portals at festival times, notably Christmas, to costumed singers and musicians who trooped down the naves and across the transepts acting out the Sacred Word. Sir Ass, oh heigh"

the church was a stage evoke for us today the universal spirit of Christmas

BY FAUBION BOWERS

ances started at "matins," the night office of the most leisurely hours: midnight to dawn. The office ended with a Te Deum, a celebration choral praise which connectively concluded the night and began the religious day.

While most Christmas texts dealt with the Birth of Christ, the repertory included and emphasized any incident applicable to the spirit of Christmas. There was, of course, the coming of the Magi, the dramatic interrogation of the shepherds by the midwives at the manger. "Whom seek ye in the crib, shepherds speak?" they demand in the famous Quem quaeritis scene of Herod. Eventually a host of plays arose around the prophets who antedated Christ, but had predicted his coming. Daniel, Isaiah, Moses, Habakkuk, and their like had all made statements pertinent to Christmas. According to the ancient Jewish Law, which spilled over into the Christian Church, only two witnesses were required to "establish truth." As deponents, the prophets' testimonies were essential. The profusion of prophet plays at Christmastime rose from the demand of medieval audiences for more fare, both religious and theatrical.

The version of The Play of Herod used by Pro Musica was written in the eleventh century. Their Play of Daniel is slightly more recent; it dates from 1150 A.D., while the actual manuscript Dr. Greenberg and his scholarly associates labored from is still more modern —1230 A.D. Both plays are French, although this fact is due largely to the accident of textural preservation. Their provenance is on the banks of the Loire River—the network of cathedrals, rectories, and religious domiciles of Fleury, now known as St. Benoit, and Beauvais, whose castle and cathedral still stand.

The Play of Daniel tells the story of the handwriting on the wall forecasting the downfall of Belshazzar's kingdom and the triumph of Darius the Persian. Daniel is punished, as everyone has heard, in the lions' den, but he is invincible and becomes, as reward, favorite of the king. The play belongs to Christmas specifically because Daniel's last lines are the prophecy of Christ: "Behold, the holy one comes," the countertenor who plays the role of Daniel sings; "the most holy of the holy . . . The end of the kingdom of the Jews and its suppression is at hand." An angel appears in the choir loft and vouches for Daniel's prescience, again in song, "Christ is born . . . just as the prophet foretold."

The Play of Herod is contemporaneous in action with Christ's birth and based on the New Testament. The opening grand processional praises the beast of burden who brings the gifts of the Three Wise Men—red gold from Arabia, frankincense and myrrh from Sheba—and alludes to Mary and Joseph who arrived in Bethlehem riding him:

Out from the lands of the Orient was the ass divinely sent;
Strong and fair was he, bearing burdens gallantly.
Heigh, Sir Ass, oh heigh!

The guiding star is a candelabrum pulled by ropes as it travels across the church ceiling finally to settle and hover over the altar. The scene then shifts to the center of the drama, Herod's court. The king is furious to hear of the birth of one greater than he. He throws down to earth the Book of Prophecies. Stylized and static as so archaic a drama form is bound to be, the play is full of high theatrics: Herod's evil is described in sinister drumbeats; his voice is a distressingly low bass. At last he spitefully commands the Slaying of the Innocents. In order to be certain of destroying the Child, all male children in the land are to die. The mother Rachel sings her lament—a solo symbolic of the grief of all bereft mothers. She is comforted by the Consoling Women (played by the same countertenors who first appeared as the Shepherds). Then the children are slain. But lo! They ascend to Heaven. "Suffer little children unto me . . ." Herod dies in a paroxysm of guilt. The Holy Family returns safely to Bethlehem.

Daniel, as the text shows, is basically a happy play. He skillfully triumphs over adversity. Herod is tragedy. The children are killed and Herod is a villain without mitigation. Such is the diversity within the music and religion of the Middle Ages as expressed in their Christmas theatre. Both mystery plays are marvelously recorded on Decca Records (Daniel: DL 9402, Stereo DL 79402; and Herod: DXA 187, Stereo DXSA 18187), and this year, for the first time, The Play of Daniel will be televised on Christmas Eve over all the stations of the National Educational Television network. When you hear the music, your faith may not be fortified as much as your esthetic vision will be. Almost certainly you will be moved to the mystic awe which must have touched the people who created this music and those who made up its early audiences.

The Pro Musica first performed The Play of Daniel in 1958. Its revival came about as the result of a chance remark made by Margaret Freeman, then curator of The Cloisters, that charming reconstruction of a French monastery on the banks of the Hudson which is an integral part of New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art. "Let's do something beautifully, here," she said to Dr. Greenberg. After a few hesitant tryouts in concerts and the expenditure of thousands of dollars (the costumes are lavish), the present polished and spectacular version of Daniel was given on the echoing stones of The Cloisters—the entrances and exits haloed by Romanesque arches, the footsteps and backgrounds softened by the green of vines and grass. Four years later, in 1962, the more pageantlike and extensive Herod was offered there, too. This year at Saint George's Episcopal Church in New York City Herod will be performed on December 28, 29, and 30. Daniel will be presented at the same place on January 1, 2, 4, 5, and 6. Next year, however, during (Continued on page 220)

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF CHRISTMAS DRINKING

A case for moderation at the season of good cheer

BY JAMES A. BEARD

The mileage in eating and drinking run up by the average American from the middle of December to Twelfth Night would reach from here to the far side of dyspepsia. In the midst of all the hospitality, there is little chance to be cautious, much less to keep any sort of regimen. No matter how we promise ourselves to be sensible this year, chances are that after the round of parties, we'll end up in the same frail post-holiday condition. If Lent came right after Christmas, how easy it would be to observe!

The problem is how to break the tradition of a surfeit of food and drink without feeling you have been either lacking in hospitality or a party kill-joy. I, for one, would like to propose a change to less potent potables for the Christmas season—the kind that make you feel satisfied, but not satiated or stupefied. This may take a conscious effort on the part of host and hostess to break new ground, but it is well worth it. In addition to the standard liquors, it is an easy matter to keep on hand the makings of several light drinks, with fruit juice and bouillon for the total abstainers. But do set them out where they can be seen. Many a guest would be grateful for a temperate tipple, but hesitates to say so for fear of embarrassing the hostess. The queen of light drinks is, of course, champagne, but there are other less expensive concoctions that are just as refreshing and have a gently stimulating effect.

A kir, or vin blanc cassis, is delicious at any season. The wine should be very dry and well chilled, the crème de cassis of the finest quality, and the proportions subtle—the wine tinted, not deeply colored, and the taste of cassis strong enough to pique, but not dominate, the drink. You can also make a kir with champagne—not your best Dom Perignon, of course, but any modest, dry champagne, imported or American. Chill it well and add just a touch of cassis. For a large party, you might make a cassis punch and float strawberries, previously soaked in crème de cassis, on the top of the pale pink brew. For this you need ½ cup of crème de cassis (or to taste) to 3 bottles of dry white wine. (You can add a bottle or two of champagne if you like a punch with sparkle.) For guests who don't care for liquor but don't want to make a show of it, a cassis drink without the alcohol is a perfect compromise. Simply pour a little non-alcoholic cassis syrup over ice, add Perrier water, and garnish with lemon or lime.

Wine parties

Providing your guests share your tastes, a holiday wine party can be different and fun. You might copy the congenial British tradition of the sherry party, one of the easiest ways to entertain a large group. Have a good selection of dry sherries, manzanillas, and perhaps a montilla and present them, well chilled, in a large silver or crystal bowl of crushed ice as the centerpiece on a round, skirted table. Circle the bowl with your thinnest crystal sherry glasses. Spanish-style tapas (appetizers) are all you need with sherry—salted almonds, sharp cheese, cubes of Smithfield ham, tiny green Spanish olives, and possibly a bowl of chilled lobster, shrimp, and crab meat.

A wine tasting is an increasingly popular form of party that

As the pineapple is the symbol of hospitality, what could be more fitting than to fashion a centerpiece-dessert along its rotund lines? Cut top from Styrofoam cone and mark off diameter at top with two round toothpicks, at bottom with two more. Make diagonal guideline of toothpicks from top right-hand mark to bottom left-hand mark. Stick line of fruits (we used grapes and berries, but any small, firm fruit will do) on guide, then alternate fruits around cone. Top with real pineapple leaves.

Sprite alone is tart. Naturally tart for adult tastes. But introduce Sprite to a favored whiskey; the result is smashing! A fun couple! Alive! Exuberant! Yet subtle. Sprite complements, but never tries to dominate. Come make your whiskey happy.

Were Sprite and whiskey made for each other? Or is this exuberance just one of those things?

HOUSE & GARDEN'S

Holiday Party Cook Book

From Thanksgiving on, parties proliferate, for at no other season of the year are people so in the mood for enjoying themselves. Yet in the annual rush of entertaining and being entertained, we often tend to forget that a party does not come with a built-in guarantee of success. It is only as good as the idea behind it, the food that is served, and the thoughtfulness that spells true hospitality. Thoughtfulness is the underlying reason why many of the parties we report on in this cook book were so enjoyable. One hostess took foreign visitors into her family circle at Thanksgiving, so they could see this uniquely American tradition at work. Our food and beverage consultant, James A. Beard, held a New Year's Eve party at an unusually early hour out of consideration for friends who found staying up until midnight a wearying way to end the year.

Customs do stale, and you should never be afraid to discard them when you feel they have become outworn. Cold turkey and ham are not the only foods substantial enough to feed a crowd. Roast beef and pâtés, smoked fish and coulibiac serve just as well. Nor does holiday fare have to be elaborate. A good soup or homemade coffee cake can taste wonderful to guests surfeited with rich food and drink. Often it is not so much the menu as the originality of the meal and the way it was served that stay in the memory. At one black-tie dinner, for instance, there were only two courses—moules marinière with French bread and a green salad with Brie cheese. But the moules were served in individual white vegetable dishes while the table centerpiece was an heirloom silver tureen that, when the top was removed, became the cache for discarded shells.

JAMES A. BEARD'S NEW YEAR'S EVE PARTY

James Beard, H&G's food and beverage consultant, is noted for his imaginative hostmanship. Last year he broke with tradition by giving his New Year's Eve party unusually early—from six to eight-thirty. This innovation was hailed by his guests, who then had the choice of going on to later parties well fortified by substantial food and champagne or spending the rest of the evening quietly at home without feeling deprived of the customary end-of-the-year celebration. As frequently happens at Mr. Beard's parties the kitchen was the most popular place to be. Here drinks and a help-yourself collation (a menu we borrowed for our op art New Year's party shown on page 161) were set out on red Formica buffet tops designed to fit over the cooking surface of the U-shaped work island when food is served from the kitchen.

CHICKEN LIVER PÂTÉ* RILLETTES D'OIE*
RARE ROAST BEEF BURGUNDIAN MUSTARD
COTECHINO CRUDITÉS TAPENADE
CHERRY TOMATOES BREADS AND BUTTER

Chicken Liver Pâté

3 tablespoons butter
1 pound chicken livers
3 eggs
⅓ cup heavy cream
⅓ cup cognac
½ pound pork, freshly ground with ¾ pound pork fat
½ cup flour
Salt
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1¼ teaspoons thyme
Salt pork or mild bacon, thinly sliced
1 chicken breast, boned, skinned, well trimmed, and cut into 2 filets

Heat the butter in a skillet, add the chicken livers and tumble them in the butter just long enough to firm them. Blend half of the livers with the eggs in a blender, pour into a bowl; then blend the remaining livers with the heavy cream and cognac. Combine the liver mixtures with the pork ground with the pork fat, and flour. Add 1½ teaspoons salt, the pepper, and thyme. Line a loaf pan with the sliced salt pork or bacon. Add half the pâté mixture and arrange the chicken filets over it, filling them into the space carefully. Sprinkle lightly with salt. Add remaining pâté mixture and shake pan to settle mixture around the filets. Place in a pan of hot water and bake in a 350° oven for 1½ hours.

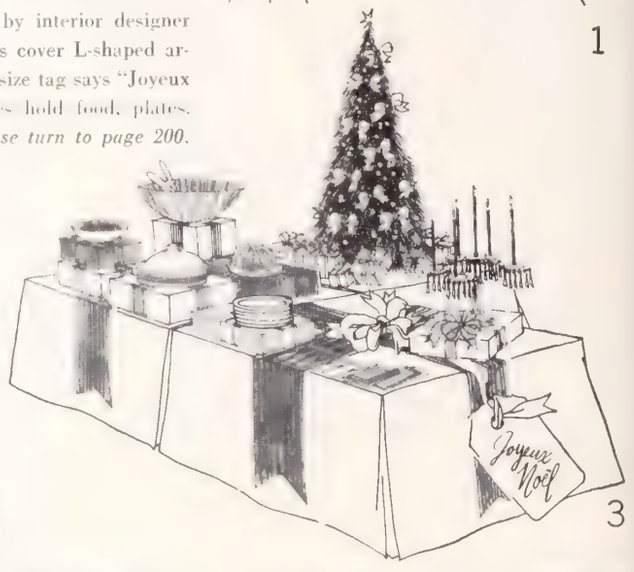
Rillettes d'Oie

1 goose, about 8–9 pounds, roasted and cooled
Salt
2-2½ pounds pork kidney fat or leaf lard
1 clove garlic
Freshly ground pepper
Dried herbs to taste (optional)

Remove the skin from the goose and cut the meat away from the bones. Reserve [illegible] fat from the roasting pan. Rub meat with salt and let stand for several hours. Combine with the pork fat, ½ cup water, garlic, pepper, and dried herbs if desired in a heavy casserole or braising pan. Add some of the reserved goose fat and cook in a 300° oven for about 4 hours or until the meat has cooked away from the bones.

Pour contents of casserole into a colander over a large pot and let the meat drain well. When it is cool and drained, shred it [illegible] with two forks. Place in a crock and pack in tightly and well. Ladle fat over the goose to cover. With this sealing layer of fat, the rillettes will keep for several weeks under refrigeration. Serve on bread or crackers like a pâté.

SPECIAL EFFECTS FOR TABLES



Christmas calls for festive table settings. 1. At a place setting, a long-stemmed crystal "egg" encloses holly and a rose (glass cover preserves flowers without water), the card is displayed on a tiny tree holder made of brass beads trembling on wires. 2. A crystal chandelier embellished with Christmas balls in one color and graduated sizes sparkles over interior designer André Fiber's dinner table; red ribbons extend from center to gifts at each place. 3. Christmas Eve buffet table is "gift-wrapped" by interior designer David Barrett. Felt and ribbons cover L-shaped arrangement of bridge tables, outsize tag says "Joyeux Noel." Wrapped, stacked boxes hold food, plates. For shopping information, please turn to page 200.

MRS. JULE RABÓ'S THANKSGIVING DINNER

Although Thanksgiving dinner is generally looked on as a family feast, Mrs. Jule Rabó, an American married to a Hungarian scientist, sees it as a unique opportunity to introduce foreign visitors or students to an enduring American tradition and "let them find out what it is all about." Last year, she planned a larger-than-usual menu with many native dishes and invited the temporary foreign personnel from her husband's laboratory to come and bring their families. With the kitchen the center of activity and attention for hours, the party quickly became relaxed and fun for everyone, including the busy hostess. As a prelude to dinner, there were cocktails of applejack and cranberry juice for the adults, pink lemonade made with cranberry juice for the children, and big bowls of nuts for everyone to crack and shell.

Scalloped Oysters

Butter
1½ cups rolled saltine crumbs (not cracker meal)
2 pints oysters, with ½ cup of their liquor
Salt, pepper
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
⅔ cup heavy cream
1 cup coarsely rolled saltine crumbs, buttered
Dash of Tabasco

Butter a 2-quart baking dish. Cover the bottom of the dish with a layer of ⅓ of the plain cracker crumbs. Add a layer of half the oysters and season with salt, pepper, and ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg. Add ¼ cup of the oyster liquor and ¼ cup of the cream. Add another third of the cracker crumbs and dot with butter. Then add the remaining oysters, the seasonings, and finally the remaining unbuttered cracker crumbs and the buttered crumbs. Add the remaining ¼ cup oyster liquor and cream and sprinkle with salt, pepper, and Tabasco. Bake in a 375° oven for about 20–25 minutes, or until brown on top. Serves 8.

Peanut Corn Bread

Prepare 1 package corn bread mix according to package directions. Add ¾ cup coarsely chopped salted peanuts to the batter and blend well. Follow directions for baking.

Cranberry Sherbet

1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
1 pound fresh cranberries
2 cups sugar
Few grains salt
Rind of 2 oranges, shredded
Juice of 3 oranges
Juice of ½ lemon

Soak the gelatin in ½ cup cold water about 5 minutes. Cook the cranberries in 3 cups boiling water until soft. Purée the mixture by forcing it through a strainer or by whirling it in a blender. Combine with the sugar, salt, orange rind and juice, and lemon juice in a saucepan. Bring to a boil. Add the soaked gelatin and stir until dissolved. Cool. Place the mixture in two ice trays in the freezing compartment. Freeze until almost firm. Remove to a mixing bowl and beat until light. Return to ice trays and freeze until firm. Serve as a palate cleanser between the main course and dessert. Serves 8.

PHILIP S. BROWN'S CHRISTMAS BREAKFAST

A sit-down breakfast party has become a Christmas Day institution in the Pasadena home of Philip Brown, whose witty articles on food and drink appear regularly in H&G. The same group of friends turns up each year—their memories jogged a week or two ahead by telephone—with an occasional new face replacing a drop-out. The party begins at eleven, gets going at noon when food is served, and continues, with present exchanging and talk, until the last guest leaves around four in the afternoon. The perennial centerpiece is a Mexican tin tree, gay with candles and ornaments heaped around the base. The color scheme is cheerful red and green—red and green [illegible] napkin ring, red and green ribbons on the handle of the knife that cuts the stollen, and a dashing costume of red trousers and shoes, green shirt, red socks for the host.

Milk Punch

For each serving pour 1 ounce Jamaica rum and 1 ounce cognac into a 10-ounce glass, add ice cubes, and fill with cold milk. Sprinkle with nutmeg, if you like.

Finnan Haddie with Cream Sauce

3-pound piece finnan haddie
1 quart milk
¼ cup minced green onion
¼ cup diced green pepper
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup diced pimientos
½ cup butter
½ cup flour
2 cups light cream
Salt, pepper to taste
1 cup crumbs, buttered

Cover the finnan haddie with the milk and poach gently until the fish separates easily. Drain, reserving the liquid. Separate the fish into flakes and remove any bones. Arrange in a large shallow baking dish. Sauté the onion and pepper in the butter for 3 minutes. Add the pimientos. Make a roux with the butter and flour and add the light cream and 2 cups of the milk used for poaching. Cook, stirring, until thickened and smooth. Add the green onion-pepper mixture, season with salt and pepper, if needed, and pour over the fish. Sprinkle the top with the buttered crumbs. Serves 8.

Note: This may be prepared the day before and reheated Christmas morning.

Swedish Potato Sausage

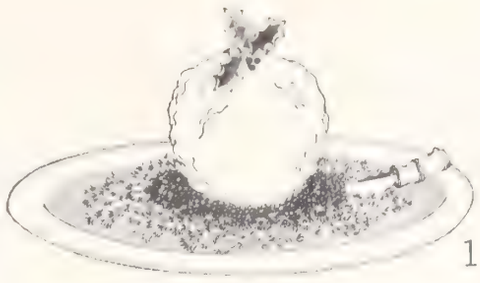
1 pound lean ground beef
½ pound fresh ground pork
7 cups grated potatoes
1 onion, finely chopped
1 tablespoon salt
2 teaspoons ground ginger
⅓ cup butter

Mix well all the ingredients, except the butter, and stuff the mixture loosely into sausage casings. Cover the sausages with salted water and refrigerate.

To cook these delicious sausages, remove from the brine and poach in salted water for ½ hour. Drain. Melt the butter in a large skillet and brown the sausages on all sides. Serves 8.

Stollen

¼ cup butter
⅓ cup sugar
2 teaspoons salt
1½ cups milk, scalded
2 yeast cakes
2 eggs, beaten
5 or more cups flour
½ cup each of slivered citron, quartered candied cherries, halved blanched raisins
1 tablespoon finely chopped candied orange peel
Melted butter
Confectioners' sugar or thin sugar icing



Add the butter, sugar, and salt to the scalded milk. When the mixture is lukewarm, crumble in the yeast and stir until dissolved. Add the eggs, 3 cups of the flour, the citron, cherries, raisins, and orange peel. Beat well, then add enough additional flour, about 2 cups or more, to make a soft dough, and knead until smooth. Cover and let rise until double in bulk, then knead again and divide into 3 portions. Roll each into a round shape, brush the top with melted butter, and fold over ⅓ of the dough of each round to form oval shapes with one side higher than the other. Do not press edges together. Place on a buttered baking sheet, let rise until double in size, and bake in a 350° oven for 30 minutes, or until done. Serve sprinkled with confectioners' sugar, or covered with a thin sugar icing. Serves 8–10.

MR. & MRS. JACK BAKER'S MIDNIGHT SUPPER

To entertain all their friends, the Jack Bakers of Santa Barbara, California, give not one but three annual Christmas parties, decorating the whole house in a different colorful way every year. For a late supper after a holiday dance, the menu is light and simple, centering on omelettes that can be made and filled to order whenever guests are ready to sit down and eat. Come midnight, the dancers find steaming consommé served in covered lacquer bowls on tables set for four (see party details on page 160), then make their way to the cooking counter to choose their omelettes. Dessert—pineapples shaped of Styrofoam covered with rows of fresh fruit and finished off with a real pineapple top stands in as part of the decoration until the moment when the toothpick-pierced fruits are removed and eaten.

FANCIFUL SHAPES FOR HOLIDAY FOOD

Imagination is the ingredient that makes party food different. 1. For a cocktail buffet, Don White of the New York catering service, Telephone Chef, molds cottage cheese into a ball, tops it with a holly sprig, rings it with red caviar (to mix with the cheese) and parsley. 2. A shrimp "tree" of chicken wire banked with parsley sprigs and hung with shrimp is another of his ideas. This he surrounds with endive leaves decorated with a piping of cream cheese dotted with red caviar and tiny round onion sandwiches. 3. Mrs. Jule Rabó's specialty is the Hungarian körözött, a fat mushroom formed from goat cheese mixed with a little butter, the top sprinkled with paprika. Round it go capers, caraway seeds, and chopped onion to eat with the cheese.

Fillings for Omelettes

The following fillings may be incorporated into the omelette as it is rolled, or placed on top of the rolled omelette.

Sour Cream and Caviar

Add a goodly helping of either red or black caviar to the omelette and top with a spoonful of sour cream. Add a bit of chopped parsley or chives if you wish.

Roquefort Butter

Cream together ½ pound Roquefort cheese, ¼ pound softened butter, 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard, and 1 tablespoon cognac. Spoon a large spoonful into each omelette as you roll it. Makes enough for 8–10 omelettes.

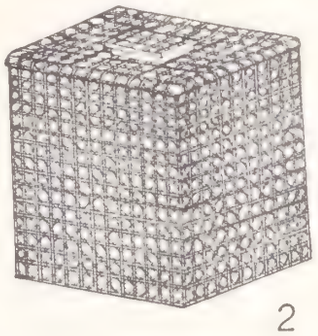
Creamed Codfish

1 pound salt codfish
Salt to taste
3 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
Pinch of nutmeg
1 cup milk
½ cup heavy cream blended with 1 egg yolk
3 hard-cooked eggs, sliced

Soak the codfish overnight or for several hours. Change the water once during the soaking. Place the fish in fresh water to cover and bring to a boil. Simmer for about 5–6 minutes, or until the fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Shred and taste for salt.

Make a roux by melting the butter and blending in the flour, salt, pepper, and nutmeg. Remove pan from heat and add the milk slowly, stirring until blended. Cook, stirring constantly, until sauce thickens. Stir in the heavy cream blended with the egg yolk and heat until well blended. Add the shredded codfish and sliced hard-cooked eggs. Spoon codfish filling into or over the omelettes. Makes enough filling for 6–8 omelettes.

Curried Beef



1 medium onion, finely chopped
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon oil
1 greening apple, cored and grated (skin and all)
½ pound lean, ground beef
2 tablespoons or more curry powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup beef [illegible]
½ cup seedless raisins
½ cup chopped salted [illegible]
2 tablespoons chutney

Sauté the onion in the butter and oil and add the apple. Break up the beef and add, [illegible] well. Brown the meat and [illegible] cook with the apple and onion for about 3 minutes. Add the curry powder and salt and blend [illegible] the beef sauce and simmer for 5 minutes. Add the raisins, nuts, and chutney and heat through. Correct seasoning. Spoon into or over omelettes. Makes enough for 6–8 omelettes.

GAY WAYS TO GIVE COOKIES

Christmas is the season for baking and giving cookies, a custom that Mrs. Donald L. Miller of Cincinnati makes the occasion for a party. She sends out invitations shaped like gingerbread men to about twenty neighbors, asking them to bring and exchange their specialties. Mrs. Cornelius Ross of Hartsdale, N. Y., presents her cookie gifts in the form of a tree, 1. She fastens lebkuchen to a Styrofoam cone with toothpicks, sets the tree on a foil-wrapped cardboard base, swathes it in plastic wrap, and ties it with red ribbon. Other thoughtful ways to give cookies are to put them in containers such as 2, a kitchen canister patterned with laminated cane, or 3, a blue-and-white enameled salad bowl, or to make them in decorative shapes to hang on a tree, like examples of cookie art shown on page 152.

MRS. NORBERT McKENNA'S NEW YEAR'S EVE SUPPER

On New Year's Eve, Tatiana McKenna observes the Russian tradition of serving a midnight supper with the table so laden with food that not a speck of tablecloth shows. Mrs. McKenna's guests usually number thirty—family and close friends. In addition to a tree, Christmas decorations, and pine and holly boughs, Mrs. McKenna likes to decorate the living room with a bouquet of quince, one of the first spring blossoms. She covers the buffet table in the dining room with a white cloth, stripes it with scarlet ribbons, and makes a centerpiece of red garnet roses and silver Christmas balls. The party begins at nine and at ten-thirty platters of cold fish and meat, salads, and hot foods in chafing dishes are put on the table so guests may help themselves. At midnight, two coulibiacs are brought piping hot from the oven.

Coulibiac of Cabbage

Butter
8 ounces cream cheese
2 cups sifted flour
2 large heads cabbage
Salt, pepper
1 large onion, chopped
6 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
1 egg beaten with a teaspoon water

Soften ½ pound butter and mix with the cream cheese. Mix in the flour. Let this pastry dough rest while preparing the filling.

Finely chop the cabbage, adding salt while chopping to draw out the water. Squeeze out all the water by taking handfuls of cabbage and pressing the water out by hand. Melt ½ pound butter and sauté the onion until transparent. Add the cabbage; cook uncovered, stirring frequently, adding butter if needed. Season well with pepper. When the mixture is cooked, add the chopped eggs. Add salt to taste.

Butter a 12" by 8" or a square ovenproof dish. Roll out the pastry to fit the dish allowing for sides and overlap. Place the pastry in the dish and fill with the cabbage mixture. Melt ½ cup butter and pour over cabbage. Seal pastry well, then invert onto a floured towel. Put the filled pastry back in the dish with the seam underneath. Brush pastry with the egg wash and bake in a preheated 400° oven about 15 minutes. Reduce oven heat to 375° and bake 20 minutes longer, or until golden. Cut in squares and serve in the dish. Serves 8.

Coulibiac of Meat

½ pound butter
2 onions, finely chopped
3 pounds lean ground beef
1 egg
½ cup beef bouillon
Salt, pepper
2 cups firm-cooked rice
¾ cup fresh chopped dill
1 recipe sour cream pastry

Melt ½ pound of the butter in a large skillet. Sauté the onion 2 or 3 minutes. Add the beef and egg, stirring briskly until the meat is coated with the egg. Cook until no red shows. Add the bouillon, season with salt and a liberal amount of pepper. Mix with the rice and dill, and fill the pastry. Melt remaining ½ pound butter and pour over the filling. Seal pastry well and proceed as in Coulibiac of Cabbage recipe.

Salade Olivier

3 cups sliced boiled potatoes
4 cooked chicken breasts, sliced (about 2 cups)
4 hard-cooked eggs, chopped or sliced
2 dill pickles, thinly sliced
Salt, pepper to taste
1½ cups mayonnaise
Lettuce leaves
Parsley

Combine the potatoes, chicken, eggs, pickles, salt, pepper, and mayonnaise. Mound on lettuce leaves and garnish with parsley. Serves 6.

DUCHESS OF BEDFORD'S CHRISTMAS DINNER

Christmas Eve at Woburn Abbey, home of the Duke and Duchess of Bedford, starts at six o'clock with a charming custom of carols sung and played by village children and a local choir, and refreshments in the West Hall, warmed by blazing log fires. At nine-thirty, house guests, who have changed into evening clothes, meet in the drawing room for Dom Perignon champagne before dinner (see details on page 136), a leisurely feast with a choice of dishes which ends about eleven thirty, just in time for midnight service at the estate church. Afterward, champagne, hot cocoa, and bûche de Noël, the French Christmas log cake, are set out for those who may need sustenance while opening presents and dancing into the early hours.

Roast Turkey Oriental

This is an unusual way of cooking turkey, but a pleasant change from the traditional Christmas roast turkey. For this recipe, you may use two young turkeys in preference to a large one.

1 large onion, chopped
5 tablespoons butter
2 cups rice, well washed
3 cups rich chicken or beef stock
½ pound cooked ham, diced
Salt, pepper to taste
10–12 pound turkey

Sauté the onion in the butter. Add the rice and mix well. Add the stock and simmer slowly until all the stock is absorbed, but the rice is slightly undercooked. Add the ham, salt, and pepper. Stuff the turkey with this mixture, cover with a tent of foil and cook in a 325° oven for approximately 3 hours, or until the drumsticks move easily and the juices run clear when skin is punctured at the joint. Remove the foil for the last 30 minutes to allow the turkey to brown, and increase the heat if necessary.

Sweet and Sour Sauce

2 slices pineapple, chopped
1 teaspoon chopped preserved ginger (optional)
Oil for frying
6 tablespoons chopped onion
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 tablespoon tomato catsup
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 teaspoon sherry
1 teaspoon cornstarch mixed with 1½ cups water

Fry the pineapple and ginger (if desired) in oil for a few minutes. Add the onion and fry until tender. Add all the other ingredients and simmer slowly for 5–10 minutes. Serve with the roast turkey and accompany with cooked and skinned chestnuts.

Snowball Surprise

2 quarts vanilla or coffee ice cream
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon brown sugar
6 tablespoons rum
4 bananas, chopped
4 egg whites
1 cup sugar
9"–10" round sponge cake layer

Press the ice cream into a bowl or deep mold, slightly smaller in diameter than the sponge layer, leaving a hollow in the center. Freeze until firm. Melt the butter and add the brown sugar and 2 tablespoons of the rum. Pour over the bananas and leave for 1 hour. Twenty minutes before serving, whip the egg whites until foamy, gradually add the sugar, and continue beating until stiff. Put the banana mixture into the hollow of the ice cream. Dip mold into hot water for a few seconds and loosen around edges with a sharp knife. Cover bottom of mold with sponge cake layer and place a flat cookie sheet over it. Invert to unmold ice cream onto the sponge round. Cover completely with the egg white, making sure all the ice cream is covered. Bake in a 425° oven for 5–8 minutes. With aid of two spatulas, slide onto serving dish. Heat remaining rum, ignite, and pour over top. Serve flaming.

MRS. JOHN HAUGH'S SOUP & SPIRITS BUFFET

Mrs. Haugh's wintertime soup and spirits parties are flexible and simple enough to allow her to entertain a lot of people informally either in Phoenix, Arizona, where Mr. Haugh represents Pima County in the State Legislature, or at home in Tucson during the holiday season. Each New Year's Day she holds open house from three to seven for friends who feel like dropping in for a late lunch or early supper (once invited, they are on the list and expected to arrive automatically every year). Drinks from the bar, set up in a glass-walled gallery, are followed by two really hearty soups (one is usually a menudo, the traditional Mexican "morning-after" soup and an ideal pick-up after New Year's Eve) ladled into soup cups from chafing dishes at either end of the dining room table.

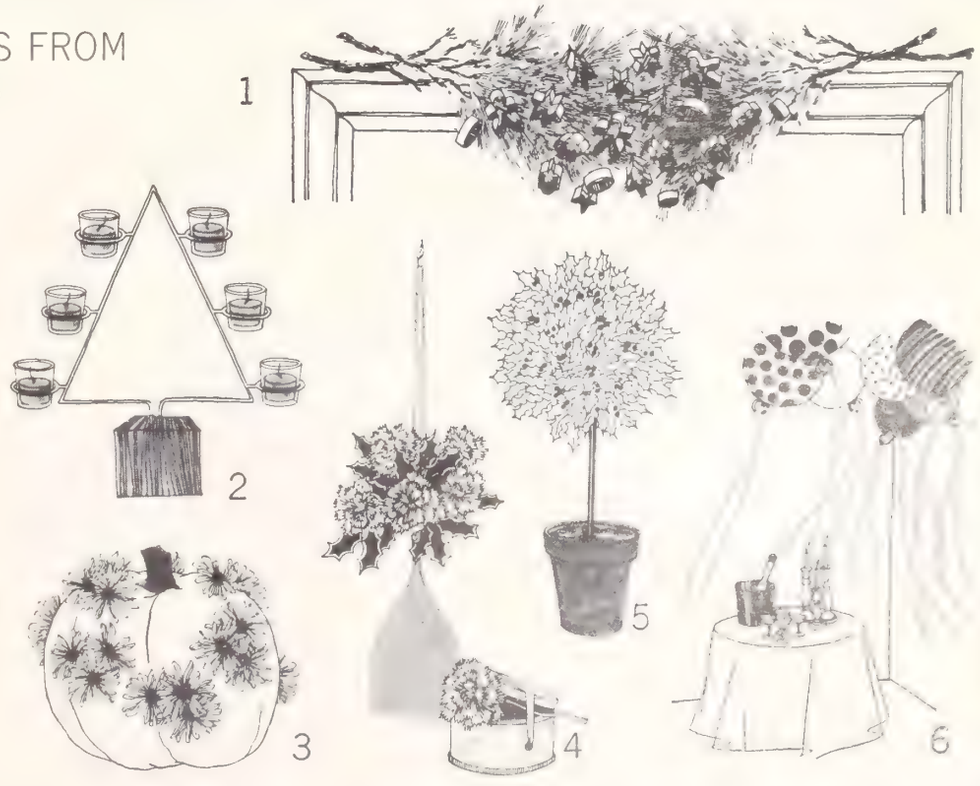
5 pounds tripe
3 cups white hominy
3 onions, minced
4 cloves garlic, minced
2 teaspoons cilantro
1 tablespoon oregano
Salt, pepper
Minced green onions and minced mint leaves or hot red chile sauce

Wash the calves' feet and cook in 6 quarts water for 1 hour. Wash the tripe thoroughly and cut in 1" by 2" pieces. Add to the calves' feet with the hominy, onion, garlic, the herbs, tied loosely in a cheesecloth bag, and salt and pepper to taste. Simmer 6–7 hours. Adjust seasoning. Serve with minced green onions and minced mint leaves to be sprinkled on top or a red chile sauce. Serves 12.
Note: This soup can be made ahead of time and frozen.



DOROTHEA WALKER'S CHRISTMAS EVE SUPPER

Mrs. Richard Walker, H&G's contributing editor in San Francisco, spends the holidays in the family's ski chalet in the Sierra Nevada mountains, so her Christmas supper is one that can be mainly prepared ahead in the city and carried in plastic hampers. As the Walkers like to ski all day, Mrs. Walker has ruled out the time-honored but time-consuming roast turkey, instead bases her menu on a Christmas ham prepared in the traditional Swedish style. Her guests find the fresh-cut pine boughs spread on the ground by the entrance, a delightful Austrian custom that prevents any slipping on ice and releases a Christmasy scent when the needles are crushed by snow boots.

HOLIDAY DECORATIONS FROM SIMPLE THINGS

In the creative hands of interior designers and florists, everyday objects become party props. 1. Irene Hayes hangs sprayed cookie cutters on pine branches over a kitchen door. 2. Stephen Barany constructs a candle tree from heavy wire coat hangers, bending them into a triangle with side loops for votive candles, then anchoring the tree in a wood base. 3. Constance Spry transforms a pumpkin into a Thanksgiving centerpiece by inserting flowers into holes cut in the sides. 4. Guy Butler sprays a goblet red, inverts it and glues Oasis to the base as a holder for a taper, carnations, and holly; puts a small gift in a miniature hatbox topped with a carnation. 5. William Pahlmann makes a little holly tree by covering a Styrofoam ball with glossy sprigs, inserting a dowel trunk and "rooting" the tree in a clay pot filled with plaster-of-Paris. 6. For New Year's Eve, he clusters helium-filled balloons, each with a swaying ribbon tail, in corners of the room.

Swedish Christmas Ham

10-pound ham
Salt, sugar, saltpeter
2 bay leaves
10 white peppercorns
Allspice
1 egg white, beaten
1 tablespoon dry mustard
Dry bread crumbs
Parsley, apple, or orange sections

Twelve days before you plan to cook the ham, rub it with a mixture of 1 cup salt, ¼ cup sugar, and ½ tablespoon saltpeter. Place the ham in a clean wooden or stone crock. Let stand 48 hours turning occasionally. Make a brine, allowing ½ cup salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, and ¼ tablespoon saltpeter to every quart of boiling water. Cool and pour over ham to cover. Place over it a heavy plate to weigh it down and let it stand for 10 days. Remove ham, wipe well, and place fat side up in boiling water to cover. Bring to boiling point again and skim. Add the bay leaves, peppercorns, allspice, and cover. Let simmer until tender, about 3 hours. When cooked, remove loose fat and cool in liquid. Brush with beaten egg white mixed with mustard and 2–3 teaspoons sugar. Sprinkle with bread crumbs. Brown under broiler. Garnish with parsley, apple, orange sections, or all three.

MRS. RENNY SALTZMAN'S CHRISTMAS DINNER

Although Christmas dinner at the Renny B. Saltzmans' is served in traditional family style (see page 157), the conventional turkey and plum pudding never appear on the menu. Instead, Ellin Saltzman serves succulent roast pheasant surrounded by fresh apricots that have been peeled, broiled and filled with red-current jelly and, for dessert, a vanilla soufflé. During the evening, their housekeeper's marvelous cheesecake, ice cream with mint sauce, bowls of fresh fruit compote, and champagne are on tap for friends and relatives who drop by to exchange Christmas greetings.

MRS. CESAR ORTIZ' TWELFTH NIGHT PARTY

Elisabeth Lambert de Ortiz, the author of H&G's recent Mexican Cook Book (September, 1965), is married to a Mexican U.N. official, so much of her entertaining is planned around the customs and food of that country. For January 6, King's Day or Dia de Los Reyes, when children in Mexico and other Latin countries receive their gifts, she gives an after-Christmas wind-up party (details on page 158), serves Mexican dishes, including Rosca de Reyes, a circular cake-bread in which a small china doll representing an infant has been baked. Custom has it that whoever finds the figure will have good luck, but in Mexico there is a further refinement—the recipient is obliged to give a party on February 2, Candlemas Day.

POLLO MESTIZO*
FRIJOLES RICE
GREEN SALAD GUACAMOLE TORTILLAS
ROSCA DE REYES*

Pollo Mestizo

4 tablespoons oil and butter (2 of each)
3½–4-pound fryer, cut into serving pieces
1 cup dry white wine
1 cup pineapple juice
Bay leaf
Salt, pepper to taste
6 small potatoes
2 medium tomatoes, peeled and seeded
2 cloves garlic
1 onion
6 canned pimientos
3 chorizos (Spanish sausages)
1 tablespoon capers
3 canned jalapeño chiles, or to taste

Heat the oil and butter in a skillet and sauté the chicken until golden. Remove the chicken to a covered casserole and add the wine, pineapple juice, bay leaf, salt, and pepper, leaving fat in skillet for later use. Simmer chicken until barely tender, about 45 minutes. Cook the potatoes in salted boiling water, drain, and reserve. Put the tomatoes, garlic, onion, and pimientos in a blender and blend until smooth, adding a little stock from the chicken if necessary. Skin and chop the chorizos and sauté in the oil and butter remaining in the skillet. Drain and add to the casserole. Put the blender mixture in the skillet and cook in the remaining fat for 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Add to the casserole with the potatoes and capers. Rinse the jalapeño chiles, remove seeds, if any, cut in strips and add to the casserole. Check seasoning, simmer for a few minutes and serve. Serves 6.

Rosca de Reyes
(King's Day Ring)

1 envelope yeast
2½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup sugar
2 eggs, well-beaten
4 egg yolks
4 tablespoons butter, at room temperature
Grated rind of 1 lemon
1½ cups mixed, chopped candied fruits and peels
Tiny china doll
Melted butter
1 cup confectioners' sugar, sifted
2 tablespoons light cream
Maraschino cherries, cut in half

Soften the yeast in ¼ cup lukewarm water. Mix half the flour, the yeast mixture, salt, sugar, eggs, egg yolks, softened butter, and lemon rind in a large bowl and beat until well blended. Dust 1 cup of the fruits and peels with flour and beat into the dough, with the remaining flour. The dough should be soft, but not sticky. If necessary, add a little more flour.

Turn onto a lightly floured board and knead until smooth and satiny, about 5 minutes. Shape into a ring, tucking the china doll into the dough. Place on a greased baking sheet, cover with a cloth, and leave in a warm place until the dough is double in bulk, about 2 hours or more. Brush with melted butter and bake in a preheated 350° oven for 30 minutes. Allow to cool.

Mix the sifted confectioners' sugar with the light cream and spread over the ring. Decorate with the remaining ½ cup fruits and peels and halved maraschino cherries. Makes enough for 12 large slices.

MR.&MRS. RALPH BAILEY'S CHRISTMAS EVE PARTY

A come-when-you-like Christmas Eve party at the Long Island home of H&G's gardening editor is a custom of some twenty years' standing (this year the regularly invited group of twenty will include couples who were at the very first party, plus new friends and grown-up children added since). Guests drop in and out as they choose, from nine o'clock on. Sherry is there to sip, freshly toasted almonds to nibble on, and good conversation is the main entertainment. "The steady roar," says Mr. Bailey, "sometimes drowns out the background music." Later, coffee is set out on a long Swedish table decorated with greens and candles, which remain as the centerpiece for next day's family dinner, and at eleven Mrs. Bailey heats and serves her special cinnamon buns, the heart of the custom. These she makes ahead in quantity and freezes, so there are always enough left over for guests to take home and the family to eat for Christmas breakfast.

FRESH TOASTED ALMONDS SHERRY
CINNAMON BUNS WITH HONEY-BEE TOPPING*
COFFEE

Cinnamon Buns with Honey-Bee Topping

1¼ cups milk
2 cakes compressed yeast
4½ cups all-purpose flour, sifted
Butter
1 cup sugar
2 large or 3 medium eggs
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
Cinnamon and sugar
¼ cup honey
½ cup crushed nuts

Heat 1 cup of the milk to lukewarm and dissolve the yeast in it. Stir in 1 cup of the flour. Cover and allow to rise in a warm place about 30 minutes. Beat 1¼ cups butter until it is soft and add ½ cup of the sugar gradually. Blend until the mixture is light and creamy. Beat in the eggs one at a time. Add the salt and lemon rind. Add the yeast sponge mixture and beat.

Gradually beat in the remaining 3½ cups of flour and continue beating for 5 minutes (an old-fashioned bread mixer is good for this). Cover the bowl with a cloth and let rise in a warm place until the dough has doubled in bulk, about 2 hours. Turn out on a floured board and roll the dough to a thickness of ¼". Melt some butter and spread generously on the dough. Sprinkle with a mixture of cinnamon and sugar. Roll the dough jelly-roll fashion and cut in 1" slices. Grease muffin tins, a square or rectangular roasting pan. Place each slice cut side down in the pan and let rise for ½ hour. (If you wish, you may freeze the buns at this point. Cover with freezer paper and place in the freezer. Remove 3 hours before baking.) Prepare the topping by combining the remaining ½ cup sugar, ¼ cup milk, ¼ cup butter, and the honey. Spread on the buns and top with the crushed nuts. Bake in a 350° oven for 30 minutes. Makes about 24 buns. If more buns are required, make two batches.

A new kind of dishwashing performance from Frigidaire

Frigidaire Custom Imperial SUPER-SURGE Dishwasher

adapts admirably to holiday entertaining. Make it a tasting of reds or whites, or limit the wines to those of one region, such as Bordeaux, the Rhône or Napa Valleys, and give your guests pads and pencils so they can jot down comments and reactions (as party take-homes, you might attach the pads to small clipboards painted in bright colors or decorated with Art Nouveau designs). With red wines serve good cheese, plus a terrine or pâté if you feel heartier food is required; with whites have oysters or clams and a tasty hot sausage or two. You will probably have to rent or borrow additional wineglasses, unless you are a collector of antique or reproduction wine rinsers, in which case by all means take them out of the cabinet and put them to the use they were intended for. Or, you can improvise wine rinsers by using attractive bowls filled with water. After the tasting, when everyone sits down to relax and compare notes, round out the evening with cognac or white alcohols, followed by coffee and sweet dessert biscuits, or sherbet served in little ramekins or Japanese teacups.

Fruit drinks

There are times when a glass of fruit juice is the most desirable refreshment in the world. At Christmas breakfast and luncheon parties, pitchers of fruit juice, with or without the addition of alcohol, have often proved to be the most patronized beverages at the bar. Even a really good lemonade, either straight or with the addition of claret, can taste marvelously refreshing. If you are observing Christmas in a warm climate, as many of us do, Sangria, the Spanish and Latin-American wine punch, is a natural choice. It is cool, colorful, and, with its garnish of fruit, inordinately pleasing to look at. Mix the Sangria in glass or pottery pitchers, using a split of soda to each bottle of dry red wine (a Chilean Burgundy or Spanish Rioja), and garnish with a sliced orange and long, curling zests of an orange and a lemon.

The drinking man's soup

With the present vogue for low-calorie consommé, you have yet another light mixer to offer holiday guests. For those who like it cold, you might add tomato juice, and vodka or cognac, with lemon slices, freshly ground pepper, and Tabasco. Hot consommé takes to a dash of sherry or Madeira, a sprinkling of grated cheese. Or you can serve it straight, sans alcohol. Tomato bouillon and mushroom bouillon are also light enough for cocktail party or pre-dinner sipping, but whatever soup you serve, be sure the cups or glasses are not too large. Your guests won't want to make a meal of it.

Pre-dinner drinks

Finally, there is the eternal question of how to get your guests to approach a carefully prepared holiday dinner in the proper state of anticipation rather than intoxication. One hostess I know, who loves to serve good wines, has recently taken a brave and successful stand on the business of drinks before dinner, admittedly not without initial protest. She serves only apéritifs or champagne until all her guests have arrived, and then has the first course in the living room accompanied by the first table wine of the evening, after which the rest of the meal is eaten in the dining room. No passing parade of hot and cold tidbits has taken the edge off appetites, and palates are not numbed by rounds of cocktails. Of course, she plans a first course that can be easily managed on the lap or at a small table (no filet of sole in white wine sauce or coulibiac of salmon). This sensible arrangement provides a welcome change of procedure for Christmas or Christmas Eve dinner, or at New Year's.

One of the most memorable New Year's Eve parties I ever attended was handled on these lines. We drank white wines and champagne with hot and cold sausages, wonderful breads and crudités until midnight. After the New Year had been suitably hailed and ushered in, everyone sat down to a superb beefsteak, kidney, oyster, and mushroom pie, celery salad with mustard dressing, and Beaujolais, with coffee and cognac to round out the celebration. It was an unorthodox but thoroughly satisfactory evening. In short, if you want to make yours the party of the year, go heavy on the planning, light on the drinking.

'TIS THE SEASON TO GIVE WINE

There is one last-minute gift you can count on not to be returned after Christmas or to spend the year languishing on a closet shelf — wine. Single people will welcome the luxury of a store of half bottles to sip with a solitary meal; married couples will bless you for providing them with a handy cellar to tap when guests turn up unexpectedly. One man-about-town we know cunningly ensures that he will never be forced to swallow a vinegary rosé with a tête-à-tête dinner by sending his current girl friend a selection of his favorite wines as an extra Christmas remembrance (a more tactful form of insurance than toting it along in a brown paper bag).

Twelve bottles or half bottles can come well within your gift budget, provided you pick your wines judiciously, mingling the less expensive imported or American wines with a few of the great French and German classics. Such a wine sampler of mixed bottles is a better choice than a case of a single wine, as it gives the recipient the chance to taste and test some of the wines available locally. However, be warned that not every area of this country is well supplied with stores that select and stock really first-class wines. To help you, we have compiled a list of some of the stores that do handle only the finest in wines and spirits (some sell only wines), based on personal knowledge of their stocks and services.

As you know, it is wellnigh impossible to send wine or spirits across a state line, but you can order by mail or phone from a store in another state for shipment to a friend there and specify if you want your present giftwrapped.

California

Jurgensen's Grocery Company
842 East California Boulevard
Pasadena, 91106

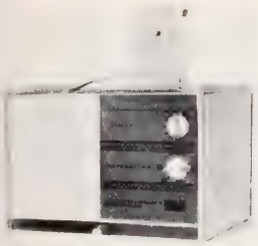
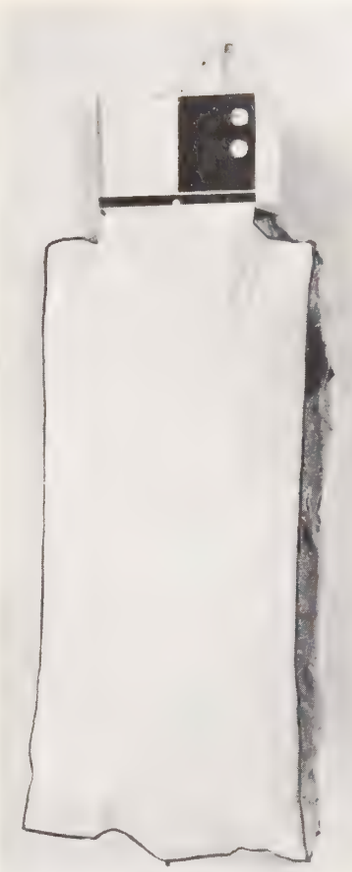
PORTABLE DRYERS

New devices for drying small lots of clothes can be used anywhere in the house and stored in a tiny space when they're idle

Now you can dry a few clothes at a time, whenever and wherever you wish. No more delays while your drip-drys drip, or irritations because you have too small a load for a standard-size dryer. The newcomers are compact and capable. Each has its special conveniences, but all work somewhat like hair dryers—by blowing hot air into a drying chamber. These portable clothes dryers can be used in any room at any season. Take one on summer vacations for drying bathing suits and shorts; use it in winter for snow-wet socks, mittens. Dry your nylons right in your bedroom or bath. One style is so small you can pack it in a suitcase; it will keep you dry wherever you go.

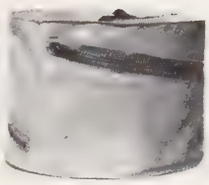


WILLIAMS



Raise or lower

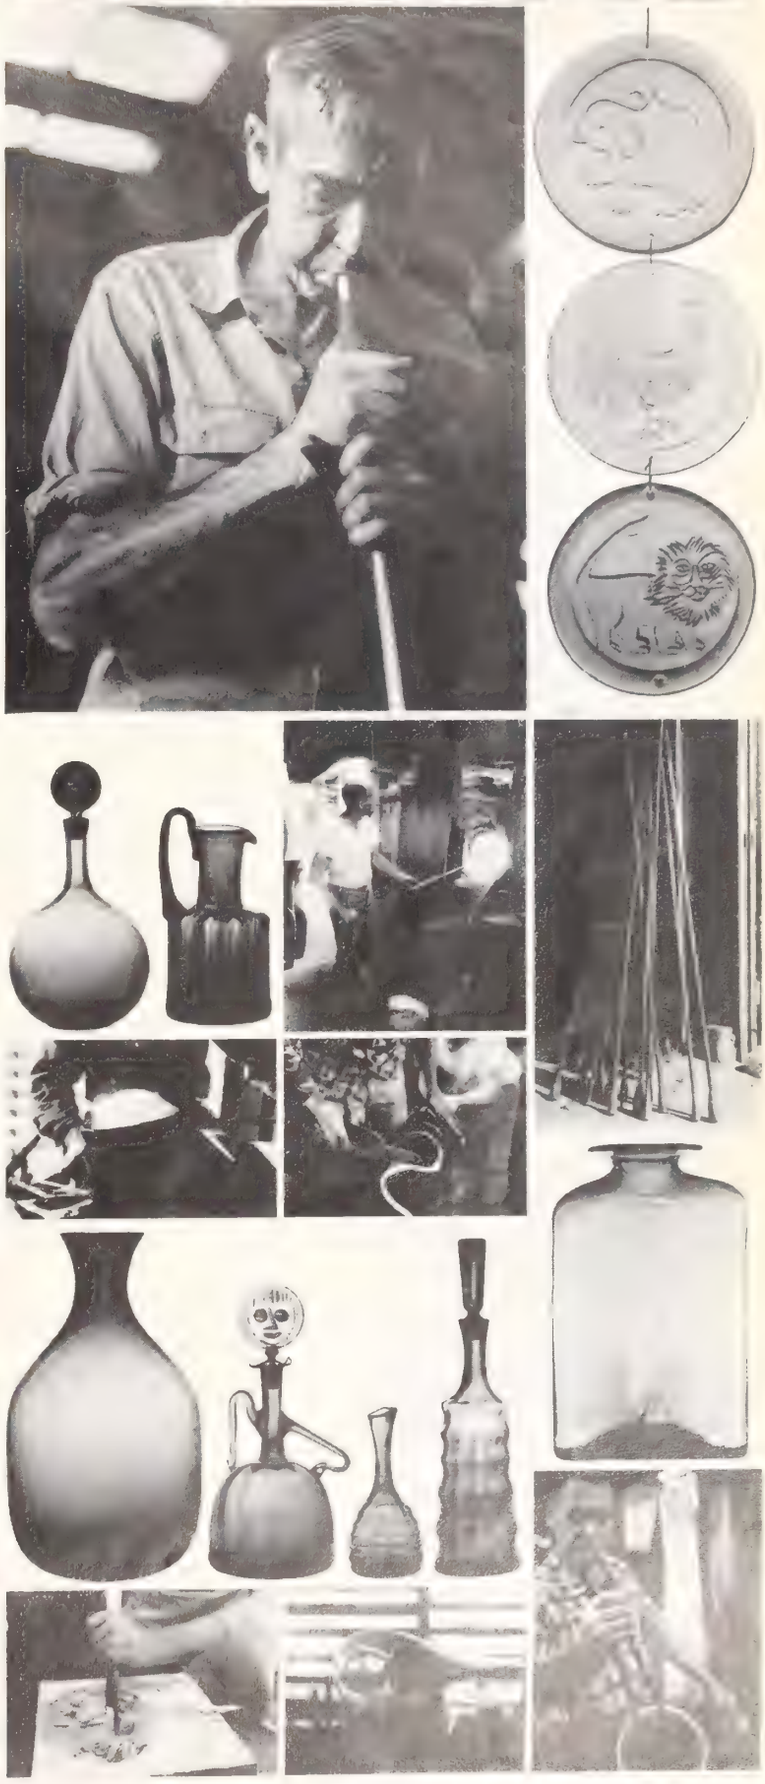
A dryer that can sit on a countertop, above, can also stand on the floor and grow up to 30 inches high, left. A revolving drum with a gentle tumbling action speeds up drying time -under ten minutes for wet nylons, about an hour for an Orlon sweater. Holds 2 pounds of wet wash, is 10½ by 15 inches. 13½ pounds. Udico. $39.95. Lavatory and fittings by Paul Associates.



Hang and unfurl

A compact dryer smaller than a train case when closed, above, contains a 54-inch-long vinyl bag that unfurls into a dress-length drying chamber, right. Hot air blowing down from the top is sealed in by a zipper closing. Clothes dry on hangers suspended from a built-in rack and acquire few if any wrinkles. This dryer comes with a special bracket for hanging it on the back of a door. Sturdy, leather-grained steel case in off-white with plastic trimming. The total weight is 11 pounds. By Arvin. $39.95.

Travel light



Ideal for small drying chores at home or abroad, this Tidie Drier can be tucked in a suitcase with ease. Only 5½ inches high in its vinyl carrying case, right, it rises to 8½ inches for use, below. Holds 8 ounces of wet clothes; weighs 3½ pounds. By Drico. $19.95 for dryer, $4.95 extra for hair dryer bonnet attachment. The lavatory, by Paul Associates.

ALL PRICES ARE APPROXIMATE.

Bedtime Lipstick. What will Fabergé think of next?

Yes. Lipstick to sleep in — and why not? Especially when it's a lipstick that's so good for your lips . . . looks so yummy . . . can't possibly come off!

Bedtime Lipstick is a fantastic new three-stage formula triumphantly perfected by Faberge's ingenious scientific laboratories. Looks like orange sherbet in the stick. Turns a luscious you-colour on your lips (Bedtime Lipstick merely intensifies your very own natural colouring).

Here's how it works: First, apply. Bedtime Lipstick glides on colourless. Then, wait three minutes, watching colour 'bloom' as your lips soak up the precious emollients and humectants in this bewitching new beautifier. Third, wipe off every surface trace. That's right — wipe it off! All that remains is dewy, delicious colour . . . on the loveliest lips you ever had.

Better get with it now. First thing you know, the smart girls will be wearing Bedtime Lipstick in broad daylight. Fortunately, there's no law against that. So hurry to your favorite fine store and treat your lips to this delicious new confection. Just 3.00 in a midnight-black case struck with gold for never-before Bedtime Lipstick by none other than Fabergé.

Bedtime Perfume by Fabergé

It's the most beautiful time of your life . . . wouldn't you love to capture that rapture forever? We don't claim miracles, but Faberge's new Bedtime Perfume has been known to keep wives so delicious, husbands so delightful, they don't feel a bit married.

Bedtime Perfume is a potent new potion — diluted by neither oil nor alcohol — scientifically compounded to 'bloom' with body warmth. Under 98.6° it lies dormant, so if you can't generate a little electricity on your own, forget it.

This bewitching new perfume to dream by, waiting to be lit by you, may be had only in all the world in Aphrodisia . . . Woodhue . . . Flambeau . . . or wild, wild Tigress. Sealed in an enchanting little frosted French beaker, Bedtime Perfume is gift boxed in fabulous Fabergé fashion — 5.00 and 8.50 . . . the most exciting gift you can get — or give — and such a wonderful way to happily-ever-after!

You'll see . . . there's never been anything — ever — like Bedtime Perfume by Fabergé (unless it's new Bedtime Lipstick, new Bedtime FlutterLash). Leave it to Fabergé.

If you want good coffee, you need a clean pot.

Ever see a cleaner 3-year-old pot?

The Corning Ware® Electromatic percolator is made of smooth non-porous Pyroceram® brand ceramic. Stale coffee oils simply can't adhere to it. So there's never anything in the pot to spoil the taste of the coffee. The percolator pictured above is owned by Mrs. R. B. Chamberlin of Horseheads, New York. It's been making her coffee automatically, perfectly, for nearly three years. Keeps her coffee hot without re-perking, too. It's a great gift. For yourself or someone else. 10-cup percolator, $27.95.

HOLIDAY CANDIES, SWEETS, AND COMFITS

Snug in their Christmas-Eve beds, twentieth-century children with visions of sugarplums dancing through their heads will find their dreams plummy indeed. Packaged in a hundred different ingenious ways, Christmas candies are no longer simple childish pleasures, but revelations of design and deliciousness. For pretty gifts—even prettier decorations—here are a likely few, all available at department stores, confectioners, or gourmet specialty food shops.

From France, bunches of grapes, oranges, and lemons (the latter in slices), all of hard candy. Grapes, 19 cents a bunch, oranges and lemons, 29 cents each. At Bloomingdale's. Box of luscious candy coconut and cream strawberries, from Blum's, $2.95.

Wrought-iron candleholder with foil-wrapped candies—some hard, some creamy—mounded around the tapers to make a toothsome centerpiece. Perugina, $17.95 ppd.

Christmas tree ornaments and trims of milk chocolate, some in conventional forms, some egg-shaped, all vividly wrapped and fitted with tie cords. Box of fifteen assorted ornaments, $1.98. From Paprikas Weiss Importers.

Don't put the Chartreuse too close to the milk

(someone might pour it on the cornflakes!)

But then why not? Chilled Chartreuse goes with lots of things... grapefruit, ice cream, desserts... and, naturally, on the rocks or as a highball. The main point is: chill Chartreuse before you serve it. For that's the new way to add finesse to Chartreuse's 350-year-old flavor. A most venerable and versatile liqueur. Last year, our ten-year-old asked his younger brother the question we'd all suppressed for several seasons: "How come, John, there's a hole in the head of each reindeer—and no antlers?"

"They're supposed to have antlers," John said. "They're supposed to be made of pipe cleaners. They're supposed to go through the hole. But the day we made them, we had a substitute teacher. Miss Templeton. She handed out the number of pipe cleaners we needed, only she kept calling me 'Alvin.' Honestly, she called every single boy 'Alvin'! I didn't like that. So, I never went up to her desk to ask for the pipe cleaners. I couldn't stand the way she called us 'Alvin.' So, mine don't have antlers."

We've always been partial, too, to our little handmade fig pudding candle. Our oldest son brought it home gift-wrapped from nursery school eleven years ago. A small bumpy package—we couldn't possibly guess what was in it! The wrapping paper was construction paper festively decorated with crayoned swirls of color. ("I made it myself," he said when he gave the package to us.) Beautiful, we said.

Inside was the candle. Blue. Squat. Lumpy. Curiously round at the bottom. A wick of string 2½ feet long.

"It's for putting in the middle of figgy pudding," he explained (his class had sung, with deafening off-key zest, a song about "figgy pudding" at their Christmas party). So we had pudding that Christmas, with the little blue candle alight in the center, its wick trimmed so it wouldn't flop over the side of the plate. Each Christmas dinner, we have fig pudding and each time the candle burns briefly during the trip from kitchen to dining table.

Two Christmas Eves ago, we discovered the whimsical past of that candle. We couldn't find it in the carton; frantically I fussed squirrel-like again and again through the bunched up tissue papers left in the carton. But no luck; no candle.

"I never knew why you liked that candle so much, anyway," was our oldest son's casual remark.

I explained why.

"Sure, I remember giving it to you," Mark said. "I still remember that I cut all the string for the whole class. By the day they dipped the candles, I was absent. That girl who always made funny faces—Martha or Marsha . . . Martita! That was her name—she'd made an extra one and gave it to me. I didn't make the candle, just the wrapping paper."

Late on Christmas Eve we found the candle. Somehow it had strayed inside a Christmas stocking. Martita's candle or not, it graced the pudding (we wouldn't have any other dessert).

For the past four or five holidays, we've set the pudding plate down on a handwoven mat, our second son's Christmas present to us when he was in second grade. He'd chosen tan, gray, black, and purple construction paper, and the checkerboard pattern evolved from strips of paper in those colors stands out, well, starkly, on a green cloth.

Last year as I took the woven mat from the carton, I noticed that the paper backing was beginning to curl away from one corner. Revealed on that inside corner, in childish printing, is the name of the craftsman: BILLY B. But our second son's name isn't Billy. It's David.

"See, I was right!" he said when he saw it. "I was sure I used more purple than Billy. He picked the same colors, and he took his home early. I told the teacher I thought Billy took mine, but we couldn't find out because he got the measles before Christmas. Anyway, mine had a mistake in it too." He was referring to a place where the weaving went over two strands instead of one. "So it doesn't matter."

And he's right. Disown the tan, gray, black, and purple mat? Certainly not. It was given with good intentions by a craftsman we love. What better setting for a platter bearing fig pudding with Martita's candle? Especially with antler-less reindeer grinning from the sidelines?

We wouldn't think of letting them idle in the Christmas carton. They're part of our holidays now because of the memories they hold and the meaning we thought they had. After all, isn't that what counts—the thought?

So skoal to Miss Templeton and Alvin, and Billy B., and Martita. Wherever they are these days, a toast and appreciative smiles from us. We're grateful to the touch of humor they add—it prevents sentiment, nostalgia, from degenerating into sentimentality.

Christmas Stories

The Twelfth Night Santons by Marion Garthwaite, illustrated by Winifred Lubell (Doubleday & Co., $3.25). An authentic Christmas story of Provence and the crippled shepherd boy, Pierre, and the santons he wishes to make. These are small statues of people and animals for the manger scene, crèche figures for which Provence is noted.

The Journey of Bangwell Putt by Mariana (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., Inc., $3.50). Bangwell Putt is a most unlikely name for a museum doll, but her adventures, told in pictures of herself and her friends and in the hand-lettered text, will intrigue every child of every age. A Christmas ball is part of the fun and makes this journey just right for the holidays.

The Second Christmas by Louis Untermeyer with illustrations by Louis Marak (Hallmark Cards, Inc.—Doubleday, $2.50). With the Bible account of the first Christmas as his inspiration, Mr. Untermeyer has created a legend of the Christ Child's second Christmas. A beautiful story by a distinguished American poet.

American Christmas edited by Webster Schott and Robert J. Myers (Hallmark Cards, Inc.—Doubleday & Co., $2.95). Forty-eight American poets interpret the meaning of Christmas. A few of the more modern testify to its present materialism. The poems cover 150 years—Whittier speaks of the Civil War; Louis Untermeyer and Robinson Jeffers writing about other wars, plead, on this one day, for peace. A varied and inspiring evocation of the Christmas spirit.

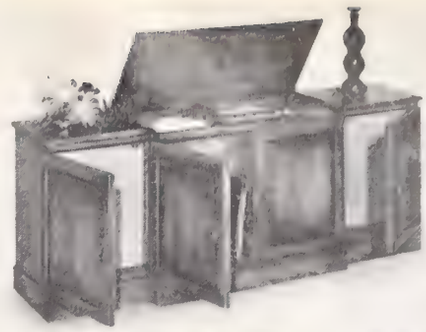
Children's Realm

The King Who Saved Himself from Being Saved by John Ciardi with illustrations by Edward Gorey (J. B. Lippincott Co., $2.95). All ages will be beguiled by this sophisticated version of a standard fairy tale in Mr. Ciardi's graceful verse. Mr. Gorey's drawings are humorous as well as imaginative. It's a little book (6 inches by 5 inches).

Harry by the Sea by Gene Zion, illustrated by Margaret Bloy Graham (Harper & Row, $3.25). A fourth adventure for Harry, the remarkable little black and white dog. Pre-school children who love the beach will be enthralled by Harry's adventures. The illustrations are large and easy to follow.

A Piece of String by George Mendoza, illustrated (Ivan Obolensky, Inc., $2.50). An allegory woven around an oddly assorted foursome—a lovebird, a flea, a mangy lion, and one human. The lovebird takes the flea on a trip to the back of the moon and we are awed by the beauty described. But despite the wonders of outer space, they return to their own familiar world, which needs them. The story is charming, but the language sophisticated; an adult might read it to children of eight years or older.

The Good Tiger by Elizabeth Bowen, illustrated by Mimouca Nebel (Alfred A. Knopf, $3.25). This is Elizabeth Bowen's first book for children, and a charmer by that gifted writer. Youngsters will cherish the quiet tiger who liked to eat cake and the boy and girl who invited him to tea. A read-alone-book for children from five to eight years old.



Deneki, written and illustrated by William D. Berry (The Macmillan Co., $2.95). A fascinating, true-to-nature story of an Alaskan bull calf and his mother, spanning a year on their home range in Mt. McKinley Park. Many other animals, birds, insects, and plants are included in the story and the sixty-two true-to-life wash drawings. Our young consultant reviewer believes this book will be avidly read by six- to nine-year-olds although some words are beyond their vocabulary.

Autobiography and Such

A Gift of Joy by Helen Hayes with Lewis Funke (M. Evans and Co., Inc.—Lippincott, $4.95). Theatre lovers will be pleased that Miss Hayes discusses actors and acting as well as many other subjects in these rambling reflections. Writing about her family, hobbies, work, and faith, she reveals her wide variety of interests. Quotations in prose and poetry emphasize her love of words. A very good choice for the budding thespian—or anyone else. Many pictures.

Morning and Noon by Dean Acheson (Houghton Mifflin, $6). A well-annotated account of Mr. Acheson's life from boyhood to February 1, 1941, when Justice Brandeis administered the oath of office that made Dean Acheson Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs. If he had not become a brilliant lawyer and public servant, he might well have had a distinguished career as a writer. His early childhood enthusiasms, the summer he spent working on the building of the Canadian National Railroad, his memories as a law clerk for Justice Brandeis, and his recollections of Justice Holmes make vivid reading. Mr. Acheson closes his reminiscences at the time he joined the State Department, because he felt too close to events from then on to report on them objectively.

The Years Between: 1939-1944 by Cecil Beaton (Holt, Rinehart & Winston, Inc., $5.95). Mr. Beaton's diaries of the war years may well be some of the most authentic descriptions of how the British fought and survived World War II. As a photographer for the Ministry of Information he recorded action in the African desert, India, and China. Between trips he photographed everything from bomb damage in London to the Royal Family—and he has written a most amusing account of a sitting with Winston Churchill. There are theatrical interludes, visits to friends, and parties—but war news and bombings are a constant second theme. Contains twenty-four pages of photographs including the author's famous one of Churchill.

Letters to His Daughter by F. Scott Fitzgerald, with an introduction by Frances Fitzgerald Lanahan, edited by Andrew Turnbull (Charles Scribner's Sons, $3.95). The advice contained in these letters to "Scotty" might well guide any college student today (if she would listen) in matters of manners, studying, people, literature. Mrs. Lanahan's introduction is a brilliant essay in love and understanding of her gifted father. All collectors of F. Scott Fitzgerald will prize this book.

Good Time Charlie by Vivian Cristol (Harper & Row, $3.95). Charlie is a ginger-colored cat who lives in Greenwich Village with the author. She recounts how Charlie found her and the ensuing joys and sorrows of living together for almost three years. The book is illustrated with some twenty photographs of Charlie taken by Miss Cristol.

Decorators' Delight

Decoration, U.S.A., by José Wil[illegible] and Arthur Lean[illegible] (Macmillan Co., $12.95). This handsome book documents and evaluates American decoration today. The best contemporary interior design is shown and discussed with regard to the changes that have taken place in America since World War II. A lucid running text is illustrated with thirty-two color plates. Also included are a very instructive and amusing "Furniture Family Tree" cartoon and a glossary at the end with pictures big enough to identify. The book is appreciatively dedicated to "Elsie de Wolfe, who put American decorating on the map."

Richer than Spices by Gertrude Z. Thomas (Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., $7.95). "When in 1662, the Portuguese princess, Catherine of Braganza, became the bride of England's Charles II, Eastern shapes and smells and colors were carried to England by the terms of her dowry." The Eastern trade influenced everything from taste in furniture to taste in food; it introduced passing fads and permanent habits such as tea drinking. A carefully researched and extremely interesting account of the great contribution the East has made to the world. Well illustrated. Also included are a fine bibliography and source list.

Masterpieces of American Furniture by Lester Nargon, A.I.D. (Architectural Book Publishing Co., $12.50). Arresting black and white photographs of fine furniture and room settings from thirteen American art museums. The pieces shown date from 1620 to 1840, and include examples of great American designers—Duncan Phyfe, John Goddard, Samuel McIntyre—as well as Shaker and Pennsylvania German furniture. Some photographs are accompanied by Mr. Nargon's measured detail drawings. His writing style is informed but personal. This is a designer's choice of museum masterpieces rather than a complex history of American furniture. The book has a good index.

Offbeat Travel

Between Viger and Vile by Arnold J. Toynbee (Oxford University Press, $3.75) illustrated. Most of the articles in this book were originally written for the Observer News Service. They cover Dr. Toynbee's impressions of visits to the United Arab Republic in 1961, Morocco in 1962, Nigeria, the Sudan, Ethiopia, the United Arab Republic, and Libya in 1964. A fascinating look at Africa through the eyes of a great student of history whose observations are acute but tolerant and based on an intelligent appraisal of world affairs. Mrs. Toynbee composed the index.

Majorca Observed by Robert Graves, illustrated by Paul Hogarth (Doubleday & Co., $10). The charm of Majorca past and present is magically distilled in Robert Graves' affectionate descriptions and the superbly executed pencil drawings of Paul Hogarth. The marvelous blend of these two talents re-creates the people, places, and atmosphere of an island paradise.

Fifty Years

Death in Venice by Thomas Mann, translated from the German by Kenneth Burke (Alfred A. Knopf, $6). The Knopfs chose to reprint this classic story to celebrate their fifty years of publishing and pay tribute to one of their greatest authors. George Salter designed the handsome book and slip case. A potential collector's item.

Fifty Years—Borzoi Books 1915-1965 edited by Clifton Fadiman (Alfred A. Knopf, $10). The distinguished history of this remarkable firm headed by Alfred and Blanche Knopf is recalled in Mr. Fadiman's anthology culled from fifty years of Knopf publications and including everything from novellas to poetry. (Knopf has published more Nobel prize winners than any other American publisher.) The selection is spiced with twenty-four full-page portraits of the authors, a few photographed by Mr. Knopf.

Back to Nature

The Sense of Wonder by Rachel Carson, illustrated by ninety-five photographs, forty-nine in full color (Harper & Row, $4.95). This short, well-illustrated essay is an affirmation of the author's involvement in the life around her. Part of it was published in 1956. The joy, excitement, and mystery of the world are revealed through the eyes of the late Miss Carson and her pre-school nephew. A sensitive guide to ways in which parents can enrich the lives of their children by helping them to see rather than just look at the marvels on every side.

HOW TO MAKE WREATHS OF PAPER AND PLASTIC

Here are complete instructions for making the three types of artificial wreaths on page 151

The tissue-paper wreath

1 Cut flameproof tissue paper into round pieces about 6 inches in diameter. 2 Fold each in half three times to make pie-shaped wedges. 3 Thread wedges onto strong, flexible wire, piercing the paper near the apex, but don't jam them together too tightly. When you have filled the wire and joined the ends, spread the wedges open to make petals.

Paper nosegays

1 From flameproof tissue paper, cut round pieces about 8 inches in diameter. Fold into eighths and make a shallow V-shape cutout in the arc of each wedge to scallop the edge. Twist the wedge at its apex, and ruffle open the scallops. 2 Gather four or five of these flowerets around the end of a wire or pipe cleaner and fasten together with green florist's tape. 3 Twist three of these clusters onto a branch or wreath wire with more florist's tape, then press them into a single full nosegay.

Glittery wreaths for lollipops

The artificial wreath kit contains all the makings for one wreath: a three-section Styrofoam base, 22 inches in outside diameter; pegs to join the sections; and a single long garland of shredded plastic greenery. You can assemble the whole thing in a few minutes, then take your time adding your own clusters of candy, toys, flowers, fruits. Kit by Austen Display.

To hang a wreath on a surface that cannot take a nail (a smoothly paneled wall or the metal front door of an apartment, for instance), use the removable cloth-backed picture hooks called Jiffy hangers. But avert a holiday crisis by taking two precautions: make sure your hanger is the right size for the weight of your wreath, and let the cloth backing dry in place for several hours, overnight if possible, before you put it to test with your masterpiece.

Sint Maarten—Mary's Fancy

On the Dutch side of this divided but frontierless island (it is possible to cross over to French St. Martin without being aware of it) lies a little valley appropriately named Cul-de-Sac and Mary's Fancy, an old sugar estate turned inn. Owners Kit Osborn and Peter Byram, a designer and interior decorator, pooled their talents and converted the plantation house and buildings into one of the prettiest small hotels—a mere nine rooms—in the islands. All the rooms are furnished as if they were in a private house, with antiques, Oriental rugs, Hong Kong wicker chairs, and paintings galore, all constantly switched around by Mr. Byram. Paint applied by a practiced hand (often Mr. Byram's) gives Mary's Fancy a lighthearted air that suits its name. "Instant" rugs are stenciled on the wood floors of the dining room and vine-shaded veranda; the shower stall doors in a bathroom are painted with field flowers and butterflies; a pineapple, dove, butterflies, and a bubbling glass of champagne enliven the plain shutters of the bar; and the huge ceiling fans that cool the guest rooms are dotted with flowers which, when the blades are whirling, seem like a shower of petals.

The food is equally intriguing and imaginative at Mary's Fancy, for Mrs. Osborn is also a talented and creative cook. Although the hotel has a chef and two part-time cooks, one French and one a Dutch woman skilled in Indonesian cooking, many of the dishes on the menu are of her devising or adaptations of foreign specialties, using local ingredients.

A tight airline schedule limited my stay at Mary's Fancy to one day, so Mrs. Osborn thoughtfully gave me a quick tour of the island, including the capital of Sint Maarten, Philipsburg, a tree-shaded city of pink houses on an isthmus cradled between two arms of blue water; the French capital, Marigot (both cities are free ports); and a new small hotel that had opened in December, the Caravanserai. This modern, informal little inn has been built around a swimming pool on a coral promontory overlooking the Caribbean and, from a brief appraisal, seemed as if it would be a delightful vacation place.

Jamaica—Miranda Hill

Jamaica's Montego Bay is probably the Caribbean's most celebrated and celebrity-rife playground, so it was only to be expected that Miranda Hill, once the home of Captain Edward Molyneux of haute couture fame, should be the most elegant, luxurious, and pampering small hotel of my trip.

The white villa and swimming pool, nucleus of the hotel, rise in landscaped gardens on a hillside overlooking the bay, well above the traffic on the road below. That Miranda Hill still retains its original serenity and comfort is due in large part to the personal, individual nature of the decoration. There are only twenty guest rooms—four in the main house, fourteen cottages, and two suites—and owners Sheelagh Burns and Diane Kovler have used their own possessions lavishly. The four bedrooms in the house are furnished with French antiques that belonged to Molyneux, and Mrs. Burns has placed paintings, sculpture, screens, and folk art from her own collection of Haitian art throughout the rooms. Guest rooms don't have numbers, only descriptive names. Mine, the Canary Room, was all sunny golds—thick yellow carpet, printed silk bedcovers, and matching pull-up blinds over the storage wall (here a yellow beach robe awaited me). Each day I found a small bouquet, a bowl of fresh fruit arranged like a still life. Any need is anticipated. In a drawer of the bedside table is a supply of printed cards for ordering breakfast: all you have to do is check off what and when you want to eat, hang the card on the doorknob at night, and the tray arrives promptly on your terrace next morning. After dinner (and the dining room menu has as many choices of French cuisine as a good restaurant), Jamaican musicians gather on the terrace and play the ska, the hypnotic dance that combines elements of the monkey, the swim, or whatever you feel like doing in an endless rhythmic chain that stops only when exhaustion sets in.

It would take years really to see and know all of these varied islands, for every year brings changes, new additions to the roster of small hotels, and a rising tide of vacationers. One of the lures of the Caribbean is that there are more discoveries to be made there today than there were in the days of Columbus.

Further information and rates for the hotels may be obtained by writing to them or the Caribbean Travel Association, 20 East 46th Street, New York, N. Y., 10017.

Summer rates (mid-April or May through mid-December) are lower than winter rates. In most cases, a 10 per cent service charge is added in lieu of tipping.

H&G'S GARDENER'S

Ferns, like most plants, turn in their best performance in a fairly humid atmosphere. Those at the bottom of these pages are no exceptions. The tried-and-true method of providing the needed moisture is to set the pots on a bed of porous material that will absorb large quantities of water and release it slowly into the surrounding air. The combination of vermiculite and pebbles used in the window schemes on pages 164 to 167 not only accomplishes this, but has the added advantage of being much more neat and generally attractive than the cinders, peat-moss, or what-have-you that might be utilized to serve the same purpose.

First of all, some kind of tray is necessary to hold the vermiculite-pebble combination. Th might very well be made of sheet metal. We cho the simpler—and less expensive—way and ma our tray of wood, opposite page. Our first st was to cut a panel of heavy-gauge plywood to the sill of our imaginary fern window. A trell strip of ¼-inch wood wide enough to project inch above the plywood panel was then nail around the edge (with 2-inch wire nails spac about 6 inches apart). To help make the tra watertight, a thick coat of paint (white lead-an oil) was applied to the edge of the plywood b fore nailing on the edging strip. The whole tra was then given a prime coat of white lead-and-o (you can choose your [Continued on page 21

PRETTIEST CHOICES FOR A FERN WINDOW

Adiantum tenerum. The familiar maidenhair, one of the most graceful and generally satisfactory of all ferns. Relatively less, rather than more, light is its preference: more, rather than less, humidity. Sometimes bothered by scale insects on the wiry stems.

Asplenium nidus. The bird's-nest fern. The blade-shaped leaves bear little resemblance to the other ferns, so this is always a good conversation piece. It likes a fairly strong light and should be watched for infestations of scale insects, which seem to find midribs very appetizing. The name "bird's nest," incidentally, refers to the circular pattern of overlapping leaves in the center of the plant.

Davallia fejeensis. Known as the rabbit's-foot fern and chiefly interesting as a curiosity. The fronds are like those of the fern-ball fern, but the rhizomes, covered with brown fur, creep on top of the soil and over the edge of the pot looking really like rabbit's feet.

Pellaea rotundifolia. A curiously attractive fern, with tangles of wiry, dark-colored stems strung with circular dark green leaves in pairs. It likes a rather dim light, certainly not direct sunlight, and plenty of humidity.

Platycerium alcicorne and P. stemaria. The staghorns. You only have to see one to know why it has its name. Both these ferns should be started by an expert—someone who knows just how to get the plant rooted into the bark slab it will grow on—but once started, the rest is easy: frequent syringing, a sharp eye for scale and mealybug, and plenty of light.

Notes for December gardeners

Seasonal activities range from pursing your lips to furrowing your brow with wintry thought

First weekend

One man's meat. Some people —even gardeners—are compulsive leaf burners. Others are compulsive composters. The facts are that retaining tree leaves on your own place, in whatever form except ashes, keeps the basic fertility that went into the leaves right where it came from; that the leaves holding on latest in the autumn season, such as oak and beech, are among the most valuable either for composting or for use as mulches beneath broadleaf evergreens; that leaf burning can be dangerous and, in some communities illegal—and in any case is poor conservation; finally that what may seem a great pile of perhaps unwanted leaves at the beginning of winter may become but a small heap of pleasant brown earthlike material by spring.

So we suggest at least the retention if not the composting or other appropriate use of late fallen leaves. If you must dig a hole in which to bury them, we might even favor that. But there are easier ways—such as raking them into a chicken wire corral, or piling them under a big shade tree (not on the lawn), or spreading them out under the shrubbery as thinly and evenly as the nature of shrubbery warrants. In any case, avoid burning them. Even burned in metal leaf burners, they would still dirty and pollute your neighborhood air. On macadam surfaces, hot leaves may well melt small cracks that will admit moisture and cause deterioration of the paving. Burning leaves do have a wonderful fragrance, but a fresh cup of coffee smells even better.

Gift book. Ogden Nash and Hilary Knight have collaborated on The Animal Garden (Evans-Lippincott, $3.95). The lines have the traditional Nash twist, if not the best Nash snap. And Mr. Knight's drawings are pleasingly antic in representing flowers as animals whose names many of them bear. A book to remember a guest by.

Second weekend

Surrogate soils. All a pot plant requires from the soil around it is the same old thing—dissolved nutrients in an aqueous solution. But the media by which such nutrients are supported and supplied in a flowerpot have changed mightily in recent years. And this is not to confuse the issue with "soilless culture," which merely involves the mechanical placement of plant roots in appropriate solutions at the proper times and under the proper conditions. Pot mixtures have themselves undergone a marked change. For one thing, they are (or may be) cleaner, because the only ingredient of ordinary garden soil you require to make them is granulated rock otherwise known as sand. To enhance the moisture-holding and air-holding properties of sand—which are superficial and wholly dependent on the size and shape of the sand grains—you now have such mineral derivatives as perlite, which is a fluffy, light, clean, indestructible, synthetic (for our purpose) sponge; and vermiculite, which is expanded mica and has much the same properties as perlite except that it may become compressed and lose much of its aerating value after considerable use.

With a mixture of these three materials, indoor gardeners can maintain the mechanical necessities of their plants (anchorage and adequate living space for roots of even large plants) with only the addition of supplemental nutrients (food) from time to time. If you add humus in one form or another (sedge peats or moss peats, dried sphagnum, "cultivated" peats), certain natural sources of nutrients may be slowly made available. However, the more humus-forming materials of [illegible] origin that you add (compost is typical of these), the more earthlike your earth gets.

All this is to say that with the new light, clean, stable, easily stored materials currently available, the pot gardener can manipulate his pot mixture with new ease, new freedom from mess, and if he handles them right—lower incidence of disease and less risk of attack by soilborne insects. When you come down to it, this is quite enough to make old-fashioned garden loam highly suspect as a modern potting medium.

Book note. That the passion flowers and their kin deserve a separate book, however slight, may surprise some gardeners. But there are two score or more species, and any orderly discussion of them was hard to come by before publication of Florence Knock's Passiflora for Your Garden (Diversity, $4.95). This volume is largely a compilation in one place of reference information. But it is here. Illustrations, in color and black and white, are helpful and informative.

Third weekend

Green curtain. Rows of clay pots (filled with well-grown plants of course) have no trouble looking attractive against the glass or curtains of a sunny window—even with a wintry garden prospect beyond. But at night, with the glass staring back sullenly, and the indoor illumination often highlighting the pots more than the plants—there is another story. What was in daytime a mere adjunct to a handsome plant becomes, at night, an ungainly chunk of reddish material of little charm. (Some of the plastic pots that are, at best, only mildly distracting during the daylight become little horrors under artificial light, and especially with a night window as background.) Suggestion: get your pots behind the curtain of trailing plants. Maybe not all the pots on a shelf (monotony can be induced by too much of anything), but enough to break up what William Blake referred to, in quite a different connection, as their "fearful symmetry."

Of the good screeners, the English ivies come immediately to mind. But don't overlook the tradescantias, some of which have handsome flowers, others variegated, striped, or purple leaves. Episcias and columneas serve well in windows where the growing conditions are otherwise favorable. There is a trailing species of saintpaulia (African-violet) that you may find agreeable, with or without window problems. Grape ivies form bold camouflage. And of course the philodendrons are always available. These are but a few. Even in daytime, by the way, the random airiness of a few trailers can be most welcome as an eye-stopper where the outside view is no great shakes.

Book note. John M. Kingsbury's new book for amateurs (amateurs at what?) bears the formidable title of Deadly Harvest (Holt-Rinehart-Winston, $4.50). The author is associate professor of botany at Cornell and has written a reference book on the same subject (poisonous plants) directed toward physicians and toxicologists. While Mr. Kingsbury makes a gardener feel as though almost every plant can be poisonous if you rub it the wrong way, his straightforward and unsensational facts make this small volume a valid candidate for the reference shelf. It is also interesting reading.

Fourth weekend

Magnolias. Except in warmer regions than the northeast, we doubt that there are any magnolias in flower right now. But now is as good a time as any in which to review the species (and varieties) and think about adding one or two to your landscape come spring. Perhaps because of their generic name, perhaps because of the socio-literary associations (like jasmine, mimosa, and honeysuckle, for instance), perhaps because of trim paint according to the colors of the room where you plan to put the tray). An important point: be sure to let the paint run into the joints so that they will be well sealed against moisture.

Your tray should be set up—whether on the floor or a window sill—on blocks ½-inch or so thick so that air can circulate under it. Then pour in a ½-inch-deep layer of coarse-ground vermiculite, level it, and water it slowly. If the water compacts the vermiculite to below the mark, add more vermiculite, since this is the most important element in the moisturizing system.

Most beginners are surprised at the great amount of water a layer of vermiculite will absorb. Unless the water is poured on with the hand of a would-be fireman, a ½-inch of the material will hold enough moisture to humidify your plants without ever allowing it to penetrate the plywood below. Sprinkling and hand-testing—the feel should be damp, not soggy—will produce a properly moistened bed, whereon to place the ferns themselves.

Set the pots directly on the vermiculite and press down just enough so they will stand up. Next come the pebbles, and here let your fancy be your guide: any kind of stones, in any color, any size, or any shape will fill the bill. We used Japanese river pebbles (average diameter 1 inch) simply because they are available in easy-to-handle sacks and give a pleasantly mottled effect when a few black ones are scattered among the prevailing whites.

From this point on, maintaining the proper degree of moisture will be very simple: sprinkle or syringe the pebbles—don't flood—once a day so they are thoroughly wet. Water the pots about once a week so heavily that a little water runs out the bottom, and keep an eye on the vermiculite to make sure it does not become either completely dry or sopping wet. Clay pots (perhaps for no scientifically demonstrable reason) seem to do the best job of moisture-conditioning for most plants, ferns included. There are new and perhaps more graceful shapes in the familiar clay that you may prefer. A recirculating fountain may also appreciably improve the atmospheric humidity.

In regard to soil for the pots, the prime requirement is for humus: this should make up about half the soil mixture. As for fertilizer, ferns seem to demand less than many other plants: an occasional light dose of fish emulsion or a similar complete fertilizer should be adequate.

Ferns will thrive in a wide variety of light conditions. As a general rule, though, they do best in a strongly lighted spot that gets little or no direct sunlight. Probably a north-facing window, with full exposure to the sky, is ideal.

In point of truth, a few of the plants included among our ferns are not ferns at all. Asparagus, ferny enough in appearance, is actually a member of the lily family and very closely related to the kind of asparagus we use as a vegetable. Thriving under the same conditions as ferns, it nonetheless can tolerate more direct sunlight and a higher fertility. On the other hand, our other non-fern, selaginella, prefers less light and higher humidity, so is quite amenable to being placed on the shady side of the fern window.

Additional choices for a fern window

Polypodium aureum. One of a very large group of ferns, and one of the handsomest. This species, despite its yellow-sounding name, is bluish in color, with gracefully arching stems and broad pinnae (or feathers). All of the polypodies thrive in tempered light and high humidity, and should be guarded against scale.

Asparagus plumosus and A. sprengeri. Sometimes called asparagus ferns (really not ferns at all). They fit in well with ferns, and make acceptable companions, particularly in that part of the window where light and heat are likely to reach a level too high for most of the real ferns.

Selaginella kraussiana brownii. A mosslike tiny creeper that will serve to "face down" the taller ferns, particularly on the side away from the light. Given plenty of atmospheric humidity (down near the gravel among the moist fern pots), it will crawl down the sides of its container and out over the pebbles in the fern tray.

Pteris ensiformis. One species from a group that includes several particularly handsome variants. Small to medium in size, some pterises have pinnae that are crimped, curled, fringed, and variegated in various ways. One of the handsomest of all is P. ensiformis 'Victoriae,' with dark green and creamy white fronds. All the species and varieties do their best in subdued light and high humidity.

Davallia bullata. A fern which the Japanese long ago discovered is ideal for growing in balls of moss hence the fact that it is usually seen growing this way. Keep the ball moist, syringe the fronds regularly, and try to give it something less than all-day sunlight.

Cibotium menziesii. A Hawaiian tree fern that will ultimately get too big for your fern window. But if and while it fits, it is indeed fascinating to watch the great, long leaves uncurl out of the top of the dead-looking stem. Susceptible to attack by mealybug and scale.

Cibotium schiedei. A tree-fern relative that is much more manageable in size than the foregoing (it takes many years to exceed 12 feet). It prefers to be out of direct sunlight, but is otherwise undemanding.

Cyrtomium falcatum. The holly fern. The shape of the leaves (pinnae, to be technically exact) gives this fern its name. Probably the toughest of all ferns, this will turn in an acceptable performance even in the dimly lit corner of a city apartment. Watch it for scale and mealybug.

their enormously spectacular and therefore "exotic" looking blooms, the magnolias seem to have earned a reputation for being geographically choosy. In point of fact, one or another of them can be found growing well in gardens over a great part of the temperate or subtropical world. Even the best known evergreen species grows over a far greater range than its native habitat would suggest (as a house-high espalier at Kew, in London, or a house-high espalier in Memphis, Tenn.—we have seen them both and they grow equally well in both places).

The most notable of the early flowering deciduous magnolias of the north temperate zones is probably M. soulangeana, with huge pink saucer blossoms opening before the leaves emerge. The varietal range of flower colors is enormous, running all the way from deep purple to near-white. M. stellata has pure white flowers (although there is a pink variant) with ribbonlike petals in earliest spring. In fact, it blooms so early that sometimes the flower buds are frozen—which is its only drawback. M. virginiana has fragrant June flowers, deep green leaves that are whitish beneath. It grows as a smallish shrub around Boston, Mass.; as a near-evergreen tree as much as 50 feet tall in the far south. M. sieboldii (parviflora) has early summer flowers that follow one another for as much as six weeks—big white discs with crimson stamens and filaments.

M. grandiflora is, of course, the great and much loved bull-bay of the American southeast. It has large, glossy evergreen leaves, huge fragrant white flowers, enormous clusters of red seeds in autumn pods. In this country it ranges from New York southward and may be found on the West Coast as well. Less well known, but hardier and even more satisfactory as a home-grounds tree is M. salicifolia. Its flowers are only slightly smaller than the preceding, and the plant blooms in April before the fine, dark leaves come. This one will even survive in the cold, dry winters of the Middle West.

There are other and bigger magnolias, with other and bigger flowers, and other and more dramatic seedpods. But for the most part they are for other and bigger areas than your yard. All the kinds recommended should be bought, in cans or with a root-ball, from a good nursery, and can be transplanted almost without hazard in spring. Their only real enemy is the magnolia scale, an ugly but seldom fatally troublesome pest.

November and December every large city from Boston to Chicago will see both plays.

Pro Musica, now in its thirteenth year, was originally created with the sole aim of performing antique music—medieval, Renaissance, and early Baroque. It stops, in other words, where most people begin, that is, with Bach. Certainly music is the organization's forte. Its members not only sing, but also play instruments, and each, including the director, is a scholar as well as an artist. Earnest Murphy, for example, is not only a leading countertenor with a high lyric range of two octaves from C to C, he is also a pianist and a harpsichordist, with a master's degree in musical literature.

Part of Pro Musica's musical charm is due to its baggage of instruments. Some are so ancient that makers no longer exist: the viola da gamba; tiny Highland bagpipes; miniature Arabian kettledrums; harps of the psaltery and minstrel types; a hand carillon consisting of three or four rows of bells suspended from a crossbar which sets up a whirring ringing in the air. There is also a small light portative organ, worked by air compression, which has wooden pipes that give it an appealing and nasal resonance found in no other instrument of the world. The rebec and vielle, fiddles and tiny cellos, hang on cords around the necks of the players so that they can walk about as they perform. The Middle Ages, after all, was the era of wandering minstrels.

Some of the instruments were especially commissioned by Pro Musica in various parts of Europe. The best bells were cast in London, the organ was manufactured in Vienna. Some of the string instruments were fashioned in Germany, others at the Dolmetsch Workshop in England. The 4-foot-long straight trumpet with its clear, silvery tone was made in Italy in 1406 A.D. It heralds kings, angels, and announces interludes. The singers usually clash metallic cymbals for metrical punctuation, or wear tiny finger cymbals and delicately tap their finger tips together to produce sounds as ethereal as the Bible text itself. Medieval music, in general, was based on a definite symbology: stringed instruments and the portative organ accompanied holy figures such as prophets or the Virgin Mary. Trumpets and cornets signified kings. Recorders (some of Pro Musica's members are the finest virtuosi on the recorder in the country) and percussion denoted the pomp and circumstance of pagan courts. Rasping bowed instruments portrayed envious counselors plotting the downfall of a trusted prophet such as Daniel.

Music, being an oral and aural tradition is the most elusive and easily forgotten of the arts, hardest to preserve. The notation of neumes and reames used in the early days of mysteries suggested pitch vaguely and indicated rhythm approximately. It was from such crude manuscripts that Pro Musica's scholars and musicians had to work and reconstruct. The music of Daniel and Herod is known as "plain song," voices in unison intoning psalms. It was not until many centuries later that harmony evolved, so, happily, the vocal figurations and melodic patterns of the music-drama are at once stark and complicated. The voices singing together rise and fall according to strict rule. Occasionally the line is expanded by chantlike singing in open intervals of fourths and fifths. But even to modern, harmony-directed ears, the music is delectable and its invention stunningly adept.

At Christmastime it would be pertinent to ask what was the music of Jesus' own day? He is said to have sung at the Last Supper, and according to one apocryphal Book of John, he danced a round-dance with his disciples. But scholars still debate the actual sounds he might have heard and made and moved to. They could very well have been close to the plain song of Daniel and Herod, for he prayed and taught in the Jewish synagogues and temples, from which this music, with its Hebraic intonations, meters, and cadences, originally derived. A blending of Oriental melodic improvisations with Latin order, rhyme, and discipline, this medieval music bridges the distance between Asiatic wisdom and Western learning. This in itself brings us nearer to Christ. By its music, its spirit, and the texts, Pro Musica recreates for us Christ's Christmas—a rare achievement.
